Poker Parties at White House Charged

CHARLES FORBES DECLARES HARDING HOST OF OCCASION

Former Head of Veterans' Bureau Describes Scene, Remission of Jack Johnson's Fine.

HARDING'S DOCTOR DECLARED MEDDLER

Forbes Asserts That He Saw $75,000, Which Jess Smith Said Belonged to Daugherty.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—The New York World will publish tomorrow an article purporting to reveal the "inside story of the Ohio gang" and intimate details of the Harding administration, written by Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the United States veterans' bureau, recently released after serving part of a two-year prison sentence for defrauding the government on hospital contracts.

Forbes' story broadly sketches the Harding regime from the pre-senatorial days of Harding until his death. Covering his Washington experiences, Forbes tells of a poker party at the white house, describes $75,000 in bills of large denomination lying on a table in the department of justice offices, declares Dr. Sawyer, Harding's personal physician, proved a "pernicious meddler" in governmental affairs, and asserts that the late president finally was "betrayed by his friends."

White House Poker Game.

Describing the white house poker game, Forbes writes:

"The poker party was held the following evening in the library of the white house. It was like many similar parties held there. We played at a rectangular table in the north nd of the room. On this particular occasion the president sat at one end and Will Hays, who was then the postmaster general, at the other. The others there were Albert Lasker, at that time chairman of the shipping board; Harry Daugherty, Ned McLean, Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Harding. Mrs. Harding did not play—she often sat with us at poker games, but never played. I remember that it was very hot and that Albert Lasker took his coat off, displaying red suspenders two inches wide. I won $370, and Will Hays won. The losers all paid up promptly.

"During the game Ned McLean announced that Jack Johnson the prize fighter, was to be discharged from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, and either Ned or Albert Lasker exclaimed, 'Why, his old mother used to work for me and he has a fine of $1,000 hanging over him and can't pay it.' Ned McLean said, 'Albert, I'll give $500 and you give $500 and we will pay his fine.' The president spoke up: 'Don't let that worry you, I'll remit the fine,' and the game went on."

Received No Spoils.

As to the late president himself, Forbes declares he is "satisfied" that Harding received none of the spoils of alleged administration graft, and was honest in performance of his duties.

"Warren G. Harding," Forbes writes, "was a much-misunderstood

Above is a part of the huge crowd of 37,800 football fans who paid something like $87,000 to see Tech beat Georgia on a mud-soaked gridiron at Grant field Saturday. This is but a small portion of the immense crowd and, fortunately for those who read their Sunday Constitution early in the morning, this picture cannot reproduce the noise that issued from this crowd.

Beach Faces Jury To Deny All Guilt In Doctor's Death

Co-defendant in Murder Trial Deftly Parries Barrage of New Jersey Prosecuting Attorney.

BY SAM LOVE,

Mays Landing, N. J., December 3.—(United News.)—Willis Beach went on the witness stand in supreme court today and denied every charge the state has made against him in connection with the murder of his neighbor, Dr. William Lilliendahl. He admitted only writing the "Peggy Anderson" letters to his co-defendant, the old physician's widow.

The letters, he swore, were not passionate outpourings of a clandestine love, but were harmless notes. It de

HOUSE COMMITTEE CUT IS FAVORED

Republican Leaders Decide on Program Calling for Elimination of Sixteen Bodies.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—House republican leaders today approved a plan for abolishing 16 house committees and creating one new one.

The proposal will be called up in the house shortly after congress convenes and is expected to be put through without serious opposition as democratic leaders have acquiesced in the move.

The action was taken today at a meeting of the house republican committee on committees. The committees to be abolished are those on alcoholic liquor traffic, railways and canals, woman suffrage, industrial arts and expositions, mileage and the 11 expenditure committees.

The new committee to be created will be known as one on expenditures and will care for work heretofore performed by the 11 separate committees.

Chairman Snell, of the house rules committee, said that membership on nearly a dozen other house committees would be increased and that under the proposed arrangement various members of the committees to be abolished, many of which had held but few meetings in recent years, could receive assignments on active committees.

"This suggestion is made on the ground that the majority of these committees have not had any legislation referred to them or have not had a meeting in several years," Snell declared. "They are absolutely dead wood as far as the organization and work of the house is concerned."

Clerk Errs; Two Prisoners Gain Freedom

Mistake in Writing Up Sentences a "Lucky Break" for Pair at Pen.

The error of a clerk of the United States district court in writing up their sentences made free men of William Dates and John Murry, late inmates of the Atlanta federal penitentiary, on Saturday.

Ten years were lopped from each man's sentence by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley in granting writs of habeas corpus filed by the prisoners, who showed that instead of writing their sentences as five years on each of three counts, the clerk made the sentences read as for 15 years in one term.

Dates and Murry were convicted in Raleigh, N. C., on charges of robbing a postoffice, and were received at the prison in December of 1923, which, with 480 days off of a five-year sentence for good behavior, would make their sentences on the first count expire now.

MAN WHO KILLED BABY WITH KNIFE PLEADS INSANITY

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—William Goeschell, 30, an electrical engineer, testified today he couldn't remember the events that occurred between his purchase of a paring knife and his recovery of consciousness in a hospital an hour later.

Between those events he stabbed his wife and three-year-old daughter and slashed his own throat. The baby died and the father is being tried for her murder. The defense claims insanity.

Goeschell related a list of domestic difficulties, one of which was because he found his wife in a compromising position with her cousin, German Gaul.

"Was your child pretty—and did you love her?" his attorney asked.

The father tried to reply, but sobs smothered his words. He leaned forward, crying. The wife, too, wept. The jury, even the judge, felt the emotional strain. Court was recessed.

AUTO OF CHIEF INJURES NEGRO

Victim Slightly Hurt, Refuses Aid; Many Other Minor Injuries Make Up Day's Accident Toll.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers early Saturday night while driving a city car west on Decatur street struck Robert Horton, negro of 174 Markham street, and slightly injured him. The negro refused to go to a hospital and stated that he was not injured.

According to a report filed by Lieutenant J. W. Blazer, the negro youth walked directly into the side of Chief Beavers' car.

Miss Sallie Schuford, of Decatur, Ga., was treated at Grady hospital Saturday night for slight injuries received when struck down by a truck at Five Points. Will Heard, negro of 694 Stonewall street, was driving the truck and crossed a street intersection against a red signal light. A case of reckless driving was made against the negro by Patrolman W. A. Buck.

Billie Whitehead, 12, of 395 1-2 Peachtree street, was taken to Grady hospital with a badly bruised left thigh he received when a bicycle on which he was riding collided with a light touring car at Ivy street and Exchange place early Saturday night. The car was driven by George Smith, negro of Armour station. Patrolman J. D. Williams investigated.

J. R. Meredith, of 794 Ponce de Leon avenue, was shaken up and bruised when an automobile he was driving collided with a roadster at Hunter street and Piedmont avenue. Mr. Meredith reported that the roadster had no lights burning. The name of the driver was not learned.

W. L. Myers, of 482 Crew street, was shaken up and bruised when a truck he was driving collided with an-

Righthand Man of Bootlegger Describes Scene. Remus Not Expected to Dodge Facing Jury.

Cincinnati, Ohio, December 3.—(AP) Doubt that George Remus would testify crept into his murder trial for the first time today.

It appeared when George Connors, Remus' ally in a gigantic bootleg syndicate, concluded a four-hour recital covering a two-year period when his former leader heard a steady stream of calumny against the wife he slew October 6.

Connors testified he himself first made Remus aware of many of the attacks upon Mrs. Remus' fidelity, heard others tell him tales new and

BY DICK HAWKINS.

On a field ankle deep in mud a Gold and White guillotine swung its mud-spattered blade and beheaded the thousand-pated dragon of Georgia. The blade swung twice and the dope was blasted by a 12-0 score with the Tornado riding the back of the headless Bulldog.

In the mud of Grant field Saturday the seven fronts of Tech totally eclipsed the thousand backs of the Red Terror. That battalion of death thrust no fear into the hearts of Tech's jackets and the Red Terror gave way before the Yellow Peril.

It was a game fitting the occasion. The greatest crowd in the history of southern athletics; puddles of water on the field reflecting the gray skies and brighter colors of raincoats and ribbons; cheering sections in a frenzy from starting whistle to final horn and withal the stage set for the greatest drama of the football age.

Uninviting Scene.

That stage was set, a muddy, uninviting stage with lowering clouds for a setting, and the Tornado of Tech played the role of victor while the red and black of Georgia went to defeat with the fangs of the Bulldog bared for more punishment.

That team of destiny simply met the hand of fate all clad in gold and black and mud. A hand that would not be stayed and was not. Captain Ed Crowley and his mates took the Dixie title and the Constitution trophy by force.

The game was a monument to sportsmanship. Two bitter rivals met in a field of mud and water and fought for one hour without a vestige of "dirty football." They fought like demons of hades until they were taken from the fray, but they fought fair.

After the game was over the final whistle saw the blocky form of Bob Randolph sag and rest on the shoul-

$2,000,000 LEASE BY AUTO LAUNDRY ON PONCE DE LEON

Gillespie System to Open Huge Plant for Washing of Cars; 99-Year Term Taken.

The Gillespie Auto Laundry System, Inc., big national automobile service company with headquarters in Chicago, has leased the southwest corner of Ponce de Leon avenue and Juniper street, adjoining the Ponce de Leon apartment building, for a term of 99 years, involving an aggregate rental of $2,000,000 and construction of a huge service station, to be the first of its kind east of the Rocky mountains. The lease was negotiated between the Chicago firm and Thornwell Properties, Inc., owner of the corner, through Edgar H. Sims and O. D. Bartlet, of the Haas & Howell real estate department, agents in the deal.

Among active directors of the automobile concern are such nationally-known figures as John D. Hertz, who is chairman of the board of the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing company; Albert D. Lasker, chairman of the board of Lord & Thomas and Logan company; Will H. Hays, czar of the moving picture industry; Edward N. D'Ancona, general counsel; E. H. Kron, vice president; Leonard S. Florsheim, president, and Mr. Gillespie, vice president.

Announcement of the transaction was made Saturday night to a representative of The Constitution by B. K. Gillespie, vice president of the con-

GRANT FIELD SCENE OF GREAT OUTBURST

As Tech Defeats Georgia

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Forty thousand lunatics, screaming, shouting, squirming, weeping and laughing—forty thousand lunatics scuffling, shoving, dancing, fighting, rolling over on the ground and jumping high in the air. Forty thousand lunatics, released in one gigantic stadium, each inspired to greater lunacy than his fellow, that is the picture presented to the Man From Mars at Grant field Saturday afternoon when the Tech "Jackets" wrecked Georgia's football team in their annual battle.

Hats and coats flung in the air; screaming sirens; umbrellas waving like cornfields in a gale; banners, ribbons, colors, flowers, pennants, bunting in a gigantic kaleidoscope of hues and tints. Bands playing, students yelling, cheer leaders in exhaustion; a quarter of a mile of people. A quarter of a mile of raving maniacs. Compared to this pandemonium becomes as docile as the Thursday Study club. Bedlam becomes as peaceful as a vestryman's meeting. Chaos becomes order and frenzy becomes the mild lecture of a professor of the dead languages.

In weather clear and cold that came after three days of incessant rain, the enormous crowd heeded not the elements but alternately rose and fell in great waves as one team or the other scored an advantage. Now a tremendous upheaval of the Red and Black section. Not a counter demonstration from the Gold and White. On and on, for two or more long

:: Church Sanctions Marriage of Sexton's Daughter ::

Paris, December 3.—(AP)—A young girl's happiness is more important than an elderly gentleman's comfort—even if the gentleman is a bishop—it was decided today by the court of referees at Montpelier.

The trouble started when love, laughing loudly at locksmiths, broke the lock of the bishop's garage and enticed his chauffeur to a tryst with the dark-eyed daughter of a sexton.

Cupid's theft was doubly annoying to Bishop H. Mignen, according to the tale told the court by the sexton, as the prelate was sure he could not get a better chauffeur and equally sure that the girl, Mlle. Duval could not get a worse husband.

The bishop accordingly insructed Arch-Priest Yaulbom, of Saint Peters church to frown upon the marriage and to tell the sexton to refuse his consent. Papa Duvan respected the bishop's authority, but desired his daughter's happiness above all things on this earth, he said.

"I cannot live without him," from the daughter was quickly followed by, "Bless you, my children," from the father.

The bishop retaliated by dismissing the sexton, who appealed to the court of referees.

Duval insisted to the court that even if he had wanted to he could not have put insurmountable obstacles in the path of the tumultuous love of his daughter for the chauffeur. The fact that the bishop was forced to sacrifice his comfortable daily drive, the sexton argued, was no reason why he should lose his job.

The court upheld his thesis by awarding him money damages for his abrupt dismissal.

BATTLE PREDICTED ON APPOINTMENTS

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—An unusually heavy list of nominations, including the names of a number of officials now holding key positions in the government service under recess appointments will be placed before the senate for confirmation next week after the convening of congress. Hundreds of appointments of postmasters, promotions of army, navy, marine and coast guard officers, and nominations of junior consular and diplomatic officers will be presented for ratification.

Among the important vacancies which President Coolidge has not filled by recess appointment during the congressional recess is that of a successor to the late Leonard Wood as governor general of the Philippines. There is no indication that a nomination for this post will go to the capitol next week, although it is expected that a selection will be announced soon.

Morrow Unconfirmed.

The department of state leads government agencies in the number of appointments which may precipitate spirited debate in the senate. On its list is the selection of Dwight W. Morrow, a former partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., to be ambassador to Mexico. Robert E. Olds, promoted last May to be under secretary of state from an assistant secretaryship, was subject to considerable criticism during the last session of congress on account of the administration policy in Mexico and Nicaragua.

There have been some indications that opposition might develop to confirmation of Joseph C. Grew as ambassador to Turkey on the ground that since he had been one of the chief negotiators of the Lausanne treaty which failed of ratification by the senate, he should not be chosen for the Constantinople post. Administration officials, however, believe there has been a change in this sentiment and that Grew's nomination will be confirmed without delay.

Johnson Unopposed.

The appointments of Nelson T. Johnson, the state department's chief Far Eastern expert, as an assistant secretary of state and Noble Brandon Judah, new ambassador to Cuba, are not expected to arouse antagonism in the senate.

In the treasury two assistant secretaries, Seymour Lowman, of New York, in charge of prohibition, and Henry Herrick Bond, of Massachusetts, in charge of fiscal affairs and taxation, are serving under recess appointment. Lowman succeeded Lincoln C. Andrews.

While there has been no signs of formidable opposition to their selections, a bitter fight in the senate is forecast over confirmation of the appointments of Eugene Meyer, Jr., as chairman, and George R. Cooksey and Floyd R. Harrison, as members of the farm board. Meyer formerly was director of the war finance corporation and various senators have announced their opposition to his transfer to the farm loan board.

Commerce Department.

One assistant secretary and three members of the radio comission will be the commerce department's chief contribution to the confirmation list. The post of assistant secretary has gone to Walter F. Brown, of Ohio, while Orestes H. Caldwell, of New York; Sam Pickard, of Kansas, and Harold A. Lafount, of Utah, are radio board commission members whose appointments must be passed on by the senate. In addition President Coolidge is expected shortly to announce a successor to the late W. H. G. Bullard, who became chairman of the commission on its organization.

A number of judicial nominations, including those of two federal circuit and eight district judges also will go to the senate.

Haldeman-Julius and Wife Would "Debunk" Marriage

:: NEW WEDDING PROTEST AGAINST PRECEDENT ::

Kansas City, Mo., December 3.—(United News.)—A protest against established marriage ceremonies was enacted here tonight in the remarriage of Mr. and Mrs. E. Haldeman-Julius, Girard, Kans., publishers and authors.

Their first marriage—which, according to a statement made several days ago by Haldeman-Julius, was performed after the birth of their daughter, Josephine—was a conventional church ceremony.

Tonight's ceremony, Haldeman-Julius said, was "minus all the bunk and hokum which characterizes the usual marriage."

The remarriage was performed by the Rev. L. M. Birkhead, liberal pastor of the All-Souls Unitarian church, who also performed the "companionate marriage ceremony" of Aubrey Roselle, university student, and Josephine Haldeman-Julius last week.

The phrase "whom God hath joined together," was omitted, as were other parts of the usual ceremony which the principals regarded as "superstitious."

Explaining the remarriage of himself and his wife, Haldeman-Julius said:

"Since this is the age of the debunker, we see no reason why so-called sacred things should be allowed to carry their excess baggage of bunk and hokum.

"I do not believe the old fundamentalist marriage was a sacrament. It was not made in heaven. God didn't 'join us together.' The other features of our first wedding were as bunk-laden. My wife did not come to me as a chattel.

"We had no thought of being husband and wife as long as we lived, should it happen that we ceased loving each other. But we went through the ceremony because we knew of no better one at the time."

Since then, he said, they had learned that that form of "poetical bunk" was unnecessary and that it was possible to be married without having to "swallow liberal doses of hokum and plain foolishness."

Mrs. Haldeman-Julius said she believed a marriage should be recognized as a contract rather than a sacrament—without "barbaric bending of knees to explode theological dogmas and mystical notions."

ROME BUYS LAND OF LEGION POST; WILL MAKE PARK

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Purchase of the fair grounds from Shanklin-Attaway post, American legion, by the city of Rome for $8,250 was consummated when payment for the property was made by the city to officers of the post.

The city of Rome purchased the fair grounds to be used as a playground and recreation park and it is the intention of officers of the city to make it one of the show places of northwest Georgia.

The Legion has owned the property for three years, taking it over from the farm bureau and has made money on it with three county fairs and other projects.

Work on beautifying the grounds and repairing buildings and putting in apparatus for playgrounds will be started by the city at an early date. The river bank is to be beautified, while tennis courts and baseball diamonds are also to be built.

QUARTER MILLION FIRE AT GEORGETOWN

Georgetown, S. C., December 3.—(AP)—Damage estimated at approximately $250,000 was done here today by a fire which destroyed a large part of the plant of the Brooklyn Cooperage company.

Property destroyed included $27,000 worth of barrel stave material, brick and steel kilns and valuable special machinery.

BRITISH CAPTAIN HELD FOR RANSOM

Shanghai, December 3.—(AP)—Chinese bandits who kidnaped Captain Lalor, of the British steamship Siangtan after attacking the boat near Ichang on the Yangtze river, threatened to kill him if any attempt is made to round them up. They have reduced the amount of ransom they are demanding from $100,000 to $60,000.

The British authorities, despite the bandits' threats, entertain hopes of effecting Captain Lalor's release shortly. They have demanded of General Yang Sen, who controls the affected section of the Yangtze, the immediate dispatch of soldiers to free the captain.

ANTI-SALOONIST RAPS AL'S SPEECH

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Until the people shall have reversed their decision relative to prohibition, every official is bound by oath to uphold the constitution and refrain from anything hindering its enforcement, F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, declared tonight.

Discussing the address last night of Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, in which he asserted he saw no reason why any group of voters should not oppose the prohibition laws, Mr. McBride said that while any group had the right to oppose any law, neither citizen nor official have the right to suggest or encourage violation of the law.

"In a government by the people any group has the right to agitate for the repeal of any statutory or constitutional law," he said. "But so long as any constitutional law or any statutory law is in effect the obligation of the citizen to obey and the obligation of the official to enforce the law remains.

"Any one who agitates the right of either citizens or officials to oppose honest administration of any law is contributing toward the disintegration of our form of government," he added. "If those who hate prohibition are conceded the right to oppose the operation and honest enforcement of this law, other groups which hate other laws must be conceded the same right.

"I do not deny Governor Smith or any official the right to his opinion on the value of prohibition as a solution to the liquor problem, but I do insist that Governor Smith and every official by virtue of his oath of office has assumed the obligation to support the law so long as it be in effect.

"As things now stand," he concluded, "prohibition is the supreme law of the land made so by the most decisive and overwhelming expression of popular will ever recorded."

ROYAL BEEFSTEAK; INCIDENTAL HASH, ON COOLIDGE MENU

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge probably will dine on royal beefsteak during the Christmas holidays.

The New Bismarck hotel of Chicago, purchaser of "California Stamp," grand champion steer at the International Live Stock exposition, which closed today, plans to send the president the choicest cut of steak from the champion. It is to arrive at the white house in time for the Christmas menus.

The animal, bred and grown by the University of California, sold on the hoof for $2.35 a pound.

Secretarial Jobs For Army, Navy School Grads Hit

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—A bill to bar West Point and Annapolis graduates from holding either the post of secretary of war or secretary of the navy will be introduced in congress next week by Representative McClintic, democrat, Oklahoma, on the house naval committee.

He said today that the founders of the nation had taken "great care to provide that a civilian representative of the rank and file of the people should be at the head of each governmental department" to serve as a check against a possible improper balance. The late Secretary of War Weeks, was an Annapolis graduate, McClintic said, and that it will be "remembered in the Mitchell case that he took a position against the viewpoint of at least 90 per cent of those who finance the government."

"Secretary Wilbur, another graduate of Annapolis, has recently established a precedent," he added, "that anyone in the service giving out truthful information of interest to the public, concerning inside conditions will be punished. How fortunate this nation would have been if it could have had a Magruder on the inside of the navy department when the Teapot Dome case was secretly made."

$300,000 LIQUOR SEIZURE IS MADE AT ELIZABETH, N. J.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—Two $300,000 liquor seizures, one at Elizabeth, N. J., and another by a coast guard cutter off Blue Point, L. I., were reported today.

Eight men were arrested in the Elizabeth raid and federal agents seized a distilling plant, equipment and stock. Motor trucks laden with alleged alcohol led police to the plant.

The steam trawler Newton Bay, said to be owned by the Acadia Shipping Company, Ltd., of Quebec, was brought to anchor in the lower bay by the coast guard cutter Gresham after a chase of seven miles. Her cargo included 4,000 sacks of assorted liquors and champagne.

ALL-EUROPEAN PACT PROPOSED

Genera, December 3.—(AP)—Conclusion of a general pact of security for continental Europe, including Russia, was proposed by Joseph Paul Boncour, of France, tonight as a solution of the problem of putting Europe on a permanent peace basis and as a foundation for disarmament.

M. Paul-Boncour discussed the question tonight with Anatole Lunacharski, of the Russian delegation to the preparatory disarmament commission after adjournment of the commission. After the interview the French statesman informed the Associated Press that Foreign Minister Briand, who is due here tomorrow morning, will meet Maxim Litvinoff, head of the Russian delegation, tomorrow afternoon. The Russians have postponed their departure until Monday in order to permit conversations which the French hope may also include Sir Austin Chamberlain, the British secretary for foreign affairs, who is also en route to Geneva.

It is considered probable that M. Briand will broach the continental pact idea to Litvinoff, although the French realize great difficulty in the way of acceptance will be the soviet aversion to accepting obligations with so-called capitalistic powers.

Compulsory arbitration of all disputes, it is pointed out, necessarily would be the basis of the pact with guarantees of its fulfillment.

M. Paul-Boncour said he was told by the Russians that the masses of people in Russia genuinely fear an aggressive war upon them by the powers of western Europe.

The Frenchman said he replied that a security pact was the best way to remove this fear due to the expressed desire of the British not to undertake commitments on the continent in addition to those prescribed by the Locarno agreements and the British membership in the League of Nations.

VARE AND SMITH SUPPORTERS MEET

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Conference after conference dealing with impending contest over the seating of Senators-elect Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, were held today at the capitol, but if any agreements or decisions came out of them they were well concealed.

Republican leaders were concerned chiefly with an attempt to bring about a delay of the fight until after organization of the senate. There was no indication, however, that either Smith or Vare had consented to stand aside without a protest until organization could be perfected.

Under the usual procedure of the senate, the names of Smith and Vare would be called in their alphabetical order along with them of other senators-elect, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, a leader of the western independent republican group, will offer a resolution to refer the case of each to the privileges and elections committee for further investigation of expenditures in the Illinois and Pennsylvania senatorial primaries.

In the absence of any agreement for delay, debate on these resolutions would begin immediately after the other senators-elect had been sworn in and since this would continue for several days organization of the senate would be held up for that length of time with the legislative machinery of congress at a standstill in the meantime.

Friends of both Smith and Vare were busy today considering both the methods of procedure and the strengthening of their lines. They believed they would be able to make some accessions to their ranks, but still were doubtful that they could obtain the majority necessary to bring about the temporary seating of the republicans.

Deny Refusal Plans.

There were various rumors about possible reprisals against some other senators-elect, but those directing the fights on behalf of Smith and Vare said if there were any such moves on foot they were not responsible for them.

POLES SEEK FAST LEAGUE ACTION ON LITH IMPASSE

Warsaw, Poland, December 3.—(AP) While the Polish government will not countenance the organization of any coup against Premier Waldemaras, of Lithuania, on Polish soil before the league's decision, Marshal Pilsudski, head of the Polish government, it is asserted, will brook no needless delay.

If M. Zaleski, the Polish foreign minister, who now is in Geneva, should report that it is the league's intention to postpone its decision on the Polish-Lithuanian controversy, thus refusing to accept responsibility, Pilsudski himself will go at once to Geneva to impress on the league the necessity of a prompt decision as the only way to avoid possible trouble if the present abnormal conditions continue.

State Liquor Law is Sought In New York

Albany, N. Y., December 3.—(AP)—Despite the personal appeal of Governor Smith at the annual convention dinner for a more liberal interpretation of the rights of citizens to organize in opposition to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, the New York State League of Women Voters closed its 1927 meeting today after going on record in favor of strict prohibition and continued law enforcement.

Soon after the league acted favorably on the prohibition measures, which developed considerable opposition for the first time in the history of the organization, the delegates heard former Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, suggest that Governor Smith be named to press the cause of government regulation of electrical power, because of his state water power development policies.

The former Pennsylvania executive, speaking at a luncheon meeting which brought the convention to a close, declared that he believed Governor Smith to have wide state and national influence. He also praised the New York executive for his favorable attitude toward state development of hydro-electric resources.

Two proposals favoring prohibition were adopted. The first, a brief declaration in favor of a state enforcement act, elicited only about ten "noes" out of 125 delegates on the convention floor, but the second measure occasioned an hour of heated debate and was passed by a vote of 74 to 21. Several amendments proposing elimination of reference to the eighteenth amendmnt and other changes were defeated by overwhelming majorities.

The resolution finally adopted was not the same one which provoked Governor Smith's speech at the dinner, it developed during the day. The governor, when he quoted from a resolution last night, said that it had originated with the Nassau county branch of the league. Officials of the league today asserted that the Nassau county branch had not adopted a law enforcement resolution since just after the repeal of the Mullan-Gage state enforcement act in 1923, and it must have been that one which the governor read.

450 MILES ON A GALLON OF GAS

The president of the General Motors Research Corporation, in a recent article, points out that there is enough energy in a gallon of gasoline, if converted 100% in mechanical energy, to run a four-cylinder car 450 miles. Much experimenting has been done to convert this latent power into mechanical energy, but at present the annual waste in gasoline is appalling. In an effort to conserve gasoline and to increase motor efficiency, Mr. Oliver, noted automotive engineer has perfected an invention that slashes gas costs to the minimum. He is launching a campaign to equip every car with this wonderful invention, and as he is now appointing agents, is willing to send a sample for trial. For full particulars write Mr. Oliver today in care of The Whirlwind Mfg. Co., 990, 2220 E. Third St., Milwaukee, Wisc.—(adv.)

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Alabama Portland Cement Company announces a reduction of twenty cents per barrel in the mill base of its Birmingham plant, effective December fifth.

This reduction has been made in an effort to protect the Alabama Company's trade and its dealers against an unsettled condition that has been created throughout the territory served by the Birmingham mill, largely through the introduction of foreign cement.

This foreign cement is manufactured under conditions unacceptable to American standards of living which allow it to unfairly compete with the domestic product. Its sale here is in effect an evasion of our immigration laws and its introduction at the ports has had the effect of unsettling the industry through the entire territory to a dangerous extent.

While this reduction is a serious sacrifice and is made primarily to protect the cement company's dealers, we believe it will materially benefit producers of domestic coal, power, cotton, explosives and the railroads, and it is hoped it will correct the present highly unsatisfactory conditions within the industry.

PEACH GROWERS SEEK NEW LABEL

Macon, Ga., December 3.—A cash prize of $100 has been offered by the Georgia Peach Growers' exchange for the successful winner in a contest for an appropriate design and name for a label for high-grade products, W. C. Bewley, general manager of the exchange, announced today.

The contest will open on January 20, he stated, and the prize will be awarded after the selected design has been accepted by the United States patent office. Anyone living in the United States is eligible to send in a name and design, according to Bewley.

The winning label will be used only on products measuring up to a certain standard of quality. The idea was adopted for the purpose of raising the grade of the exchange products and broadening the demand for quality fruit.

"We hope by this movement," Bewley explained, "to be the forerunner of a similar movement in standardizing southern products so that inferior, badly packed products may no longer be able to jeopardize the existing and potential markets for quality products of the south.

"The marketing of Georgia peaches and other southern products has been hampered by a lack of uniformity in quality, grading and packing. It is believed that proper standardization will materially increase confidence in the wholesale trade and in the consumer. Restrictions will be thrown around the use of the label selected. The label will not take the place of individual brands."

Successfully Fights Fire in Airplane 6,000 Feet in Air

Marrakesh, Morocco, December 3.—(AP)—An observer fought a fire in his plane 6,000 feet above the ground, and brought the plane safely to earth.

Lieutenant Ragot, the observer aboard a dual-control military airplane, was returning from Agadir, Morocco, after an important photographic expedition. When flying above Marrakesh at the height of 6,000 feet the plane caught fire.

Surrounded by flames, Pilot Caustau adjusted his parachute and jumped overboard.

Lieutenant Ragot, single handed, fought the flames with an extinguisher and managed to bring the plant to land. He escaped with superficial burns, saving his instruments and photographs.

HANKOW COTTON MILL SCENE OF OUTRAGE

Shanghai, December 3.—(AP)—Four hundred students of Sun Yat Sen university stormed a cotton mill at Hankow, which had dismissed several women workers, and dragged five anti-red union officials into the open and shot them, it is reported from Hankow.

The shooting is said to have occurred in the presence of armed police who did not interfere.

High's Presents Christmas Gift Section in This Issue

Miss Mary Lee Webb, of East Lake, finds the special 16-page, colored Christmas supplement of the J. M. High company a highly attractive medium for selection and purchase of holiday gifts. The special section—presented in this issue of The Constitution — will enable patrons of High's to secure their gifts at a minimum of trouble and time.

In this issue of The Constitution is presented a unique and attractive Christmas shoppers' aid and guide in the form of a 16-page section in colors of the J. M. High company.

The special holiday supplement is a comprehensive and illustrated catalog of hundreds of gift suggestions ranging from toys for the youngsters to pipes for grandad. It is published in The Constitution by the High company, officials point out, in order to solve gift-buying problems and to eliminate waste of time and trouble in shopping.

All persons desiring to purchase gifts may refer to the index of the section and turn instantly to the particular page of the 16 whereon are presented gifts suitable for the type of individual in mind. Each gift item is illustrated and numbered, and the prospective purchaser may mark his gifts; bring or phone the items to High's; ask for them by number, and be served without loss of a single moment's time and without being involved in any confusion customarily incident to holiday shopping.

The attractive way in which the gifts are classified and numbered serially also will prove of great benefit to out-of-town patrons of High's, for they may order by number and be sure of getting exactly what they desire.

The typography of the supplement is a tribute to the composing room and press department of The Constitution, the former contributing heavily to the general attractiveness of the section and the latter making it possible for High's to present a gift section, every page of which is in three colors.

Officials of the J. M. High company Saturday expressed pride at the appearance and useful mission of the supplement and invited the general public to make use of it in selecting and purchasing its presents for Christmas.

"By doing so," the officials stated, "patrons of this store will avoid all trouble and delay and at the same time may be assured that their purchases will be exactly as described and in every way in keeping with the high standard of excellence which the J. M. High company has always maintained."

5th District A. & M. Trustees Discuss School's Operation

Discussion of plans for the operation of the Fifth District A. and M. school at Walker Park and matters pertaining to the finances of the institution featured a meeting of the board of trustees of the institution at the state capitol Saturday morning.

The meeting was presided over by J. L. Carithers, of Winder, acting chairman, and the following board members attended: A. J. Woodruff, of Decatur; W. S. Cox, of College Park; John Wright, of Monroe; Mrs. W. C. Clark, of Covington, and J. Henry Walker, principal of the Fifth District A. and M. school, of Monroe.

The institution is doing splendid work and is rapidly gaining the reputation of being one of the best agricultural institutions in the state, it was declared. The school has an enrollment of 260 students.

The board voted to increase the salary of Principal Walker to $4,000 per year, effective December 1, 1927. The motion was made by Mrs. Clark, seconded by Mr. Woodruff and unanimously adopted.

An important stride in the development of the school was put in motion when the board discussed plans for running a six-inch water main from Monroe to the school at an estimated cost of $10,000. The motion was made by Mrs. Clark, seconded by Mr. Carithers.

The following committee was appointed to investigate the matter and report to the board at its next meeting: John Wright, J. H. Walker, J. L. Carithers and E. M. Williams.

A new calf barn will be erected at the school, according to a resolution unanimously adopted, to use the funds already available for this purpose.

Principal Walker was instructed to spend a part of the appropriation for the boys' dormitory, amounting to between $1,000 and $2,000, for the construction of additional equipment such as shower baths and a storage room for athletic goods.

The lyceum course of the school won the praise of the entire board. Purchase of additional live stock was authorized.

Resolutions expressing regret upon the death of Mr. Blasingame, a personal friend of the entire board and one who has done much for the school, will be drawn up and read at the next meeting.

MILDER WEATHER FOR MIDDLE WEST

Chicago, December 3.—(United News.)—Milder temperatures, accompanied in most sections by snow, will visit the middle western states Sunday, the Chicago weather bureau forecast today.

The near-zero temperatures which were felt through this region the past few days will give way with the snowfall but are likely to return Monday, the bureau said.

Oil Magnate Is Kept Indoors By Driving Rain

Ormond Beach, Fla., December 3. (AP)—John D. Rockefeller has lived the life of a hermit since his unheralded arrival here Thursday night, but his seclusion has not been by choice.

The 88-year-old oil magnate has idled the hours away within "The Casements," his winter retreat fronting the picturesque Halifax river. Inclement weather that greeted his advent here turned to a driving rain that forced him to remain indoors the entire day, and with keen disappointment he gave up the hope of an expected outing.

The aged multi-millionaire followed his usual custom of rising late. A close scrutiny of the various stock quotations, furnished him by a special service, occupied his time before he partook of a hearty breakfast. The steady downpour failed to abate and he continued to lounge about the house, postponing an automobile drive along the beach road and more important than all, his eight holes of golf.

His favorite course at this resort lay under a blanket of water and he abandoned all thought of wielding his clubs until Monday, at the earliest, probably to start his Florida season off in company with General Adelbert Ames, his 94-year-old companion and retired civil war veteran. In other years the two have spent many hours at the game together.

Making his annual trip south slightly earlier than usual this year, Rockefeller arrived unexpectedly without the customary greeting accorded him from the populace. He stepped from the train unobserved and was whisked into his automobile and to his home across the lake unnoticed. The river drive in front of "The Casements" has been well traveled by visitors eager to catch a glimpse of the oil king, but without success.

He was expected to make his first public appearance tomorrow in resuming his attendance at morning services at the Union church, despite weather conditions of any kind.

U. S. INHERITANCE TAX REPEAL TO BE SOUGHT

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Repeal of the federal inheritance tax again will be sought by Representative Green, Florida, in the new congress.

In announcing today that he will renew his fight on the levy, the Florida representative said that he will introduce an amendment to the tax bill which has been drafted by the house ways and means committee to eliminate this tax and later will present a bill for its repeal. He said that Florida was opposed particularly to the 80 per cent credit feature for the states in the tax because it has no state inheritance.

Buy Powder Plant.

Fort Valley, Ga., December 3.—Clarke and Sanchez, Inc., a new corporation here under the direction of E. G. Clark and H. P. Sanchez are planning erection of a plant in Fort Valley to make insecticides. The plant is to be erected at once, according to a statement from the company.

Bridge Expert Tells How To Bid When Dealt Full Suit

ADVISES PASSING ON FIRST ROUND

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—If the man next door brought the wife in for an evening of bridge and some time during a lull in the conversation you were dealt 13 cards of one suit—

And if you didn't faint or fall out of your chair, what would you bid?

Ely Culbertson, member of one of the finalist teams in the American auction bridge tournament and recognized as one of the country's best players, would pass his first bid. "The distribution of the cards would naturally create some bidding," he said, "and there isn't a chance of your being beaten any way. Think of the fun of watching your opponent's bid."

There are 6,250,300,800 ways in which a deck of cards will be dealt before a player will have a hand of 13 of one suit, said R. F. Foster, dean of bridge experts, and one celebrated writer believes it would be extraordinary if a hand such as that should not be dealt to some player in the world at least once in two months.

Only one of several experts competing in the tournament acknowledged he had ever held this dream-hand. Foster said he had held two such hands, and on one occasion the first bidder ventured a no trump. Others have held 12 cards of one suit, another said he had held a "no trumper" on which he could bid seven without possibility of being set.

Edward P. Martin, Chicago, vice president of the league, once held 12 of a suit and an outside ace; Wilbur C. Whitehead, famous authority, has held 10 hearts in one hand—another time he had the ace, king, queen of three suits and the ace, king, queen and jack of another. Mrs. Ely Culbertson, one of the best woman players in the country, held 11 winning spade cards and two outside tricks. She merely laid down the hand. Her husband once held 12 of a suit.

Graveure Concert Delights Audience at Woman's Club

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Louis Graveure improv s with acquaintance. Hearing him last night at the Woman's club, for the third time, an even more enjoyable evening of song developed than on the previous occasions, a consummation that, without experiencing, would have seemed impossible, remembering the aforesaid previous treats.

"Evening of Song" is the correct description of the type of recital Mr. Graveure gives. It is, probably, the most entertaining individual concert available on the modern stage. The singer gives the impression that he is thoroughly enjoying himself, the songs he sings are all, though of wide variety in choice, of the kind to warm the appreciative cockles of your heart. And you leave with the feeling of what a magnificent voice he has, and of what a bully good time he gave.

Mr. Graveure has one habit which other singers ought to imitate. One, at least. That is, when he signs in foreign tongues, he explains beforehand exactly what the song is about. It makes it so much more interesting. Even when you are fairly familiar with the language of the song, it is hard to catch the words when sung now and then, and knowing what it is about you are left free to better enjoy the singing.

But, if ever a singer did not need this interpretation, it is Mr. Graveure. For none have better nor clearer diction than he. So, if it proves good with him, all the more reason, with 90 per cent of our singers, why it would be more important, even, for them.

The Graveure baritone is delicious in its tone, majestic in its power, and remarkable in its range. His control is a thing for the initiate to marvel at and his sympathetic interpretation of his songs is perfection itself.

Saturday night he gave four groups of songs, one German group, one French, one old English and one English and American. Then he sang half a dozen encores, including one New England folk song about the birds that he swore actually brought a smile to the lips of President Coolidge when he sang it at the white house.

He also sang that exquisite "Sylvia," and the ever-charming "Mary." Have known that ever since boyhood, and it brought back glorious memories last night.

I want to extend a word of personal thanks to Mr. Graveure for another personal favor. I had requested, if possible, that he sing that appealing old song, "Tommy Lad." He did. Thanks, Mr. Graveure.

The accompanist, Bryceson Terbarne, proved as masculine in his playing as Mr. Graveure in his singing. Which means it was an exceptional piece of good fortune to hear his three solo numbers, and the frolicsome little number he gave as a well-deserved encore.

The concert was one of the series offered this season by the Music club and again emphasized the service this organization does in bringing these opportunities to Atlanta. There was a crowd large enough to be satisfactory at any time and, considering the weather and the football madness of the streets, was nothing short of marvelous on Saturday night.

We are showing a beautiful line of Pedestal and Swing frames from $1.00 to $12.00.

DIVORCED WIFE OF MILLIONAIRE ASSAILS POLICE

Los Angeles, December 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Mattie McCauliffe, formerly the wife of a millionaire oil operator, bitterly denounced police for her arrest on suspicion of burglary charges, while her attorneys tried unsuccessfully today to effect the release of the woman and her husband, McLaurine McCauliffe, from the county jail.

Though police detectives at first believed the pair was connected with apartment house and other robberies involving more than $200,000 in loot, the officers today offered nothing in substantiation of the charge.

HOOVER WILL VISIT FLOOD AREA AGAIN

Little Rock, Ark., December 3.—(AP) Secretary of Commerce Hoover will pay another visit to the erstwhile flood areas of the Mississippi valley this month, Red Cross officials here announced today. His party, which will include James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, and Robert E. Bondy, eastern division manager, will leave Washington December 12.

The party will meet Mississippi relief workers at Greenville, December 14, and Arkansas relief workers at McGehee, December 15. From McGehee, the only Arkansas town to be visited, the party will go into Louisiana.

Walter Wesselius, state reconstruction officer for the Red Cross, is preparing a detailed report of work done in this state and will present it at the McGehee meeting.

ATHENS MAN INJURED IN MYSTERY ACCIDENT

A man whose identity is not certain, but whom police believe to be H. L. Holton, of Athens, Ga., is in a dangerous condition at the Southeastern sanatorium at 418 Capitol avenue, with severe head injuries and possible other serious injuries according to police reports. Mystery shrouds the accident and police are making every effort to learn details of the affair.

According to information given Call Officers G. W. Richardson and R. F. Lawson, the man was taken into the sanatorium by a taxi driver, who left hurriedly and without giving any details other than he found the man lying in a street.

The injured man was unable to talk and a search of his person found a card bearing the name of H. L. Holton, of Athens, with an address of 616 Angier avenue and a telephone number of Walnut 3424, police learned.

Police are of the opinion that the man was injured in a fight with someone and had been struck by an automobile of some kind, during the altercation. Several detectives have been assigned to investigate the affair.

BRITISH METHODIST EXPECTS NO PROHI LAW FOR ENGLAND

Richmond, Va., December 3.—(AP)—There is no sentiment for a national prohibition law in England and no chance whatever that Great Britain will follow America's example in "dry" legislation, in the opinion of Sir Henry Lunn, M. D., of London, editor of "The Review of the Churches," a religious quarterly.

"You know we in England believe in liberty," said Sir Henry. "When you get tired of the Statue of Liberty send it over to England. We will take care of it."

Sir Henry, who is delivering a series of lectures at Virginia colleges, expressed his opinion on prohibition today in an interview with the News Leader. He is a Methodist and a temperance man, he said, but does not share the views of American Methodists in regard to prohibition legislation.

BURGLARS RANSACK HOME; GET CLOTHES

The home of J. H. Fowler, at 782 Virginia avenue, was entered by burglars and a quantity of clothing was taken early Saturday night, according to police reports.

Burglars entered the home of L. E. Smith, at 429 Crew street, and escaped with a quantity of clothing, police were told.

The plant of the Howell Manufacturing company at Lindsay street and A., B. & C. railroad, was entered by burglars early Saturday night, police reported.

CARL TRAMMELL DIES IN AURARIA

News of the death of Carl Trammell, 30, well-known Lumpkin county farmer, at his residence in Auraria, Ga., early Saturday morning, was received here by relatives. Mr. Trammell is the brother of J. B. Trammell, foreman of the composing room of The Atlanta Constitution.

Death came after a protracted illness of typhoid fever. Mr. Trammell succumbing in the prime of life. The end was preceded by the sudden death of his only child just a week ago.

Mr. Trammell was a native of Auraria and was highly regarded in that section. In addition to his agricultural activities, he had a contract with the federal government to deliver mail in that district.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and interment will be in the family burial lot at Auraria.

Besides his wife, Mr. Trammell is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Trammell, of Auraria; four brothers, J. B. Trammell, of Atlanta; William, Jeff and Lige Trammell, all of Auraria, and two sisters, Mrs. R. V. Chambers, of East Point, Ga., and Miss Rosebud Trammell, of Auraria.

RITES TODAY IN ROME FOR F. B. HUFFAKER

Funeral services for Frank B. Huffaker, 73, who died Friday in Rome, Ga., after a stroke of paralysis, will be conducted today in Rome with burial in Myrtle Hill cemetery there. Cole's, funeral directors, are in charge.

Mr. Huffaker was one of the pioneers of Rome, having lived there since 1872. For the past three years he had been in the cotton brokerage business under his own name, and previous to that had served 30 years as secretary of a large brokerage concern.

He was born in Sevier county, Tennessee, and was a graduate of the East Tennessee university, Knoxville. He studied for the ministry and after graduation, became supply pastor of an Atlanta church, where he served for several months.

Mr. Huffaker married Miss Mary Emma Wiggins, of Atlanta.

He was a devoted member of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Rome, and for the past 30 years had served as secretary of the Knights of Pythias lodge there.

Mr. Huffaker leaves four sons, Kenneth Huffaker, of The Atlanta Journal; Frank L. Huffaker, Louis B. Huffaker, of Asheville, N. C., and Barrett Huffaker, of Wilmington, N. C.; fourth daughters, Mrs. B. W. Bloodstock, of Wilmington, N. C.; Mrs. Frank L. Rogers, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. John F. SEES BRIGHT FUTURE FOR FARMER IN U. S.

Providence, R. I., December 3.—(AP) An optimistic note with respect to the future of the American farmer was sounded today by Assistant Secretary R. W. Dunlap of the department of agriculture, here to speak before the Rhode Island agricultural conference.

Informed agriculturists, he said, in a prepared address, are of the opinion that the next 5 to 15 years will see American farming advance into a period of remarkable prosperity. He declared that evidences of this could already be seen, asserting that with the possible exception of the eastern corn belt, the country's major agricultural sections today were in the best condtion they have enjoyed since 1920.

Although admitting that the improvement had been slow, he expressed the belief that the farmer will hold the ground he has gained and gradually make further advances.

"The farmer of the future," he asserted, "will most certainly have more to be thankful for than the farmer of the recent past . . . Agriculture in this country is, always has been, and, I believe, always will be, a sound solvent business."

FLOOD COMMITTEE READY FOR REPORT

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—With a background of four weeks presession hearings, the house flood control committee is prepared to receive with the opening of congress on Monday the army engineers' report, which probably will constitute the basis of its legislation designed to curb further disastrous inundations in the Mississippi valley.

"The way has been cleared for speedy consideration of the report," Chairman Reid, of Illinois, declared today. "The hearings have clearly shown that the control of the destructive flood waters of the Mississippi river is a national duty to be recognized by the federal government."

Having heard several score of senators, representatives, governors and other witnesses, including spokesmen from every section of the Mississippi valley inundated in the 1927 flood, the committee is planning to utilize their testimony as a "yardstick" to determine the adequacy and feasibility of the engineers' report in solving the problem.

That the federal government should bear an increased proportion, if not the entire burden, of cost in the flood protection work was a predominant note of the hearings. In the opinion of Mr. Reid, "the control of the floods is as much a national duty as is the improvement of rivers for navigation, and as nearly every levee district of the Mississippi is bankrupt the federal government must do it."

The sentiment of the witnesses before the committee has been "almost unanimous that 'levees only' will not suffice" as the remedy for the control of the river, Mr. Reid declared, "but that they must be supplemented by spillways, floodways or storage basins." He added that the other flood control proposals such as headwater reservoirs and reforestation were worthy of study and should be considered in any ultimate plan for flood control.

That any plan of flood control to be successful "must be a unified one planned and directed by the federal government" was the view of Representative Wilson, of Louisiana, ranking minority member of the committee. He declared that the committee had made "satisfactory progress in its hearings so it can soon shape a legislative policy on national flood control."

WOMAN ADMITS PART IN SLAYING

Camden, Ark., December 3.—(AP)—Begging for mercy and with tears streaming down her cheeks, Mrs. Effie Jowers, 43, this afternoon confessed to Sheriff Coleman, of Clairborne parish, that she assisted in the slaying of her husband on the night of October 31 at Haynesville, La.

Mrs. Jowers accused her alleged lover, J. E. Swift, who also is under arrest, officers said, of actually killing her husband with a hammer while he lay asleep in bed in their home. She said she stood by looking on and stopping up her ears with her fingers "because I couldn't bear to hear him scream."

Then, she told officers, she covered the body with a blanket while Swift hired an automobile. Swift, she said, and his 16-year-old son, Paul, then carried the body to the automobile and drove to a bayou and threw the body into the bayou.

JEWISH FUND TAG DAY WORKERS ANNOUNCED

Members of the Atlanta chapter, Junior Hadassah, who have volunteered their services for canvassing work on Maccabean day, the annual tag day of the national Jewish fund soon to be launched in Atlanta, were announced Saturday by Miss Rae Rosenberg, co-chairman of the day and chairman of the N. J. F. committee of Junior Hadassah.

The Hadassah girls who will serve are Marie Schouer, Jeanette Zimmerman, Gladys Shuman, Goldie Berchenko, Frances Hellman, Gertrude Wald, Pearl Hoffman, Charlotte Vitner, Ruth Lang, Rose Greenberg, Esther Pollack, Sarah Gershon, Helen Singer, Lillian Isakoff, Sophie Merlin, Esther Freeman, Esther Siegal, Rose Schrieber, Cecile Rice, Annie Rice and Jennie Goldstein.

A similar group of young Jewish men will be selected from the Young Judaean clubs by Charles W. Bergman, who, with Miss Rosenberg, will be in charge of Maccabean day, one of the means used by the Jewish national fund for raising money to buy land in Palestine.

FUNERAL HELD FOR T. W. CALHOUN IN ARLINGTON

Arlington, Ga., December 3.—Funeral services were held Friday for J. W. Calhoun, 38, who died Thursday after a lingering illness due to his age. Funeral services were conducted at the home of Dr. W. W. Calhoun, in this city, and interment followed at the local cemetery.

Mr. Calhoun was born September 25, 1844, in Washington county, Ga. When a small boy his parents moved their family to Baker county, near Ivey's mill, where he lived until manhood. At the age of 23 he located in Miller county at Colquitt after marrying Miss Louisa Sylvania Adams, of that place. Fourteen years later, in 1880, he came to Arlington.

Calhoun is survived by one son, Dr. W. W. Calhoun, a prominent physician of this city; one daughter, Mrs. H. L. Hicks, of Orlando, Fla.; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen McNair, of this city, with whom he made his home since the death of his wife six years ago, and Mrs. Cappie Bush, of Colquitt, besides a large number of grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

MINNESOTA BANK OFFICIALS FOUND GUILTY OF FRAUD

Mankato, Minn., December 3.—(AP) Two of five former officers of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land bank were found guilty of using the mails to defraud in connection with a stock issue of the bank in the summer of 1925 by a jury in federal court here tonight.

Guy Huston, of New York and Chicago, former fiscal agent, and W. H. Gold, Miami, Fla., were convicted, while Glenn and Donald Gold, sons of W. H. Gold and former vice presidents, and J. E. Huston, a director of the bank, were acquitted.

SOLDIER TORTURED WOMAN CHARGES

El Paso, Texas, December 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Josefa Contreras, 25, and an unnamed man, were held in jail here today while police investigated a story alleged to have been told by the woman, that two men, one of them her husband, tried to burn Jose Valensuela alive while attempting to learn the hiding place of savings they believed he had accumulated.

Valensuela, a former member of the eighth United States cavalry, is in William Beaumont hospital here, still under treatment for the burns alleged to have been received in the torture more than two years ago.

Police say that Mrs. Contreras related to them that the two men drugged Valensuela and beat him in an endeavor to learn the hiding place of money, which he did not have. Later, she is alleged to have said, the captors of the soldier knocked him unconscious and poured gasoline over his head and body and touched a match to his clothing.

For two years Velensuela has been transferred from hospital to hospital while army surgeons attempted to restore his face and save his life. Police investigation in the case started more than a year ago.

LEVEE BUILDERS MAY GET GUARDS

New Orleans, December 3.—(AP)—An intimation that national guardsmen may be requested to protect levee builders from disgruntled landowners of the Caernarvon district was made here today by James Wilkinson, counsel for the New Orleans parish levee board after threats against the lives of the engineers and laborers had been reported to him.

Wilkinson said it had been reported to him that Ambrose Ansardi, Caernarvon dance hall proprietor, had threatened to shoot any member of the levee building crew at work closing up the Caernarvon crevasse to enter his property. The workmen are pushing the closing of the crevasse, which was opened last spring to relieve pressure against levees here, in preparation for the expected rise in the river resulting from recent heavy rainfall in the Mississippi basin. The levee has been reconstructed to the point of the property claimed by Ansardi, engineers said, and completion of the project within the next few days is imperative to prevent another possible inundation of St. Bernard and Plaquemine parishes. The new levee exposes Ansardi's property to the river.

Wilkinson declared Ansardi was paid $12,500 in full payment for damages sustained from the Caernarvon crevasse. A suit to restrain Ansardi from interfering with the work has been called for hearing in St. Bernard parish court Tuesday.

Leander Perez, counsel for Ansardi, contends the payment to his client by the reparations commission was for damage sustained from the overflow of his land and that the property was not bought outright.

THRONGS WILD AS TECH WINS

Disorder Reigns Supreme.

"Ramblin' Wreck From Georgia Tech." What an unparalleled scene of disorder. Tech scores a touchdown. The dope upset for the time being. Never such a din, never such a noise heard in Atlanta before. Disorder run riot. Tech's score near the end of the second quarter turned loose all the helions of Avernus for Tech.

Never before such a scene as came between the halves. All Techdom that could move about on two legs swarmed to the field in a gigantic serpent. "Oom Pah, Oom Pah," boomed the resounding bass horns of the Tech band in "Ramblin' Wreck" but the rumbling basso was drowned in the din.

"Glory, Glory, to Old Georgia." Another army of mad men swoops down. Another set of bellows-lunged bandmen pump into their horns but their tones are scarcely heard. Up and down the field march the rival clans. "We'll Get 'Em Yet" sing the Georgia boys to the ear-deafening "Wreck 'Em Tech."

Forty Thousand Lunatics.

Forty thousand lunatics squirming and shoving and pushing and jumping and shouting and crying and laughing and dancing and fighting and jostling. Thousands of pretty girls stand and cheer, wave their colors and shrill out cheers as the cold winds whistle around their knees. Fool freshmen run wild in all directions. So much din that you can't hear your neighbor ask you for a match. Pretty sponsors tear chrysanthemums to shreds. Two groups of blanketed figures trot back on the field. The whistle blows and the crowd settles back as the titanic struggle is renewed.

Again the lunatics rise and fall in great waves a quarter of a mile long as Fickle Fortune smiles now on Georgia, now on Tech. Back and forth sweep the teams again, and again are Bedlam and Pademonium in this new disorder.

"To Hell with Tech!" comes the stirring cry of the still gallant Georgians. "To Hell with Georgia!" shout back the jubilant though "ramblin' wrecks" from Tech. The game goes on as palpitating hearts reach the bursting point. The bloom pumps through the veins of the masses. Never before such a struggle. A slip, a stumble, a toss of Fate's pretty head can now decide the issue. Back and forth clash the begrimed and bespattered warriors.

Pandemonium Breaks Loose.

Boom, boom, boom, in mighty explosion charge the Tech rooters as a roar that could be heard in Savannah registered another score for Tech. Whole minutes that seem months—the pulses of the Tech masses ceased to beat and then resumed in an outburst that dwarfed the others to nothing. "Rambling Wreck." "Wreck 'Em Tech." The under-dog was not only cuffing the upper dog, but was positively spitting in the Bulldog's face. The Tech stands and half the rest of the huge stadium was a roaring torrent of gold and white.

"Glory, Glory to Old Georgia," pumped the Red and Black band. The Georgia rooters, instead of losing heart, burst out in greater noise than ever before. "Come On, Georgia;" "Touchdown, Georgia!" And the referee blows his whistle for more battle.

Into the last quarter swings the game with vast throngs afoot in a mighty roar of ceaseless reverberations. "Come on Georgia," cried and whined and wept the adherants of the Red and Black. "Wreck 'Em, Wreck 'Em, Wreck 'Em," came the mighty plea of the Techites standing with thumbs down calling for more and yet more of the enemy's blood. "Oh, Georgia, Please, Please, PLEASE Come On," pleaded the Georgiaites. "Wreck 'Em, Wreck Em, Wreck 'Em," roared the hoarse voiced boys from Tech flats. "PLEASE, PLEASE, PLEASE," shouted the Georgians. "Wreck 'Em, Wreck 'Em, Wreck 'Em," grimly cried the Gold and White bands.

On, on, on, inexorable time moved in fatal regularity. The crowds surge everywhere forward, never such drama, the grim specter of Tragedy stalks ahead of the Georgians. The laurel wreath dangles a scant step ahead of the hordes of Tech rooters. "Please come on Georgia," wail and moan the hosts of the Red and Black. "Wreck 'em" rumble in stupendous tones the hoarse voiced rooters for Tech.

Into the last fatal few minutes runs the game. Frenziedly the Georgians cry for a tie, for a touchdown, for a score. Grimly Fate leers at the Red and Black and as the minutes tick into second the great Tech hosts become almost silent in their suspense. Just another minute now and the game will be over. The Georgians are slowly realizing the colossal disaster. The realization of victory is gradually dawning on Tech.

The keen whistle of the referee cut the icy air.

The game is over. Tech has won.

Tech Takes Field.

Down from the east, down from the west, down from the north, down from the south swarm the tens of thousands rooters for Tech. Out onto the field the avalanche sweeps. Policemen battle futily. Unchecked gallop the hosts.

On to the field to a scene never before duplicated in Atlanta. A scene of madness. A scene which taxes the mind to conceive. A scene which words will never picture. A scene which will be told to sons and daughters yet unborn. A scene never witnessed before in the south when the Tech hosts swarmed on to the field to taste the sweetness of a victory which struck a chill of horror into the hearts of the Red and Black hordes from Georgia. Disorder and riot ran wild. Sadly, slowly, the Georgia rooters moved away from the fatal field. Beaten, disheartened, choking, and sobbing, the Red and Black withdrew. The great game was over. A black game and a black night for Georgia.

Then to the city moved the great unweildy mass. Gradually untangling it assumed the shape of another glacial sweep. Another avalanche began to move and it was an avalanche of the victors. Unleashed, freed from the tension of weeks and months, with the cup of victory at their lips the hosts swept on toward the city, toward the city which has witnessed hundreds of other victorious marches but which never saw such a sweeping annihilating column as left Grant field Saturday afternoon to celebrate with all abandon the crowning achievement of all time for the rooters for Georgia Tech.

Reno Is Scene of Wedding

:: FORMER PROHI AGENT IS MARRIED ::

Of Prominent Divorcees

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 3.—Fifteen minutes after she was divorced from Donald Kellogg, Buffalo oil millionaire, today in Reno, Nev., Mrs. Marguerite Tifft Kellogg was married there to Ralph W. Bickel, prohibition investigator, widely known as manager of the government-operated pseudo Bridge Whist club in New York, established by A. Bruce Bielaski, head of General Andrews' secret service dry force.

Bickel, for several years as undercover prohibition agent, himself was divorced only last Tuesday from Mrs. Alice J. Bickel, Pittsburgh heiress and an officer in the smart Fine Arts club.

Reports of the divorces and marriage, received in New York by Mrs. Alice Bickel, did not say whether Bickel and Mrs. Kellogg had met before they found themselves on the same errand in the Nevada city.

The former Mrs. Kellogg, whose husband, Donald, is a son of the late Spencer Kellogg, linseed oil king, and who himself is vice president of the Spencer-Kellogg Oil refining interests, a millionaire and social leader, is 28. She waived all interest in her husband's property and in the custody of their three children.

Donald Kellogg has an estate at Angola, N. Y., and a farm at Evans, in Erie county.

Bickel—who spelled his name Bickle when negotiating for and operating the Bridge Whist club as a trap for wholesale bootleggers—is widely known along Broadway as a flashy spender. He ran the club here for Bielaski, then under-cover chief of the prohibition service, from October, 1925, to May, 1926.

Bootleggers, who made deliveries to the pretentious club, which was in East Forty-fourth street, were invariably nabbed sooner or later. Disclosures of the club's existence created a stir in Washington, wet senators and representatives denouncing use of government money in operation of a speak-easy.

Although presumably only a prohibition sleuth, Bickel lived at an expensive rate in New York.

Mrs. Alice Bickel separated from her husband last April. At that time they signed a separation agreement and she gave him $1,500 for the purpose of getting a divorce in Reno. She is 24 and was married to Bickel soon after leaving boarding school seven years ago.

This is the third marriage for Bickel. His first wife was a sister of Earl Carroll, the producer.

COURTS' POSITION ASKED CLARIFIED

Washington, December 3.—(United News.)—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis in his annual report today recommended congressional action to clarify the position of the courts in injunction proceedings, long a storm center of controversies between capital and labor.

Davis pointed out that labor leaders expected the Clayton amendments to the Sherman anti-trust act would "restrict the use of the injunction to a greater extent than the courts now hold to be the legal effects of such acts."

A diversity of opinion in federal courts has resulted in various interpretations in injunction proceedings, he pointed out, and this "may lead to the regrettable result of disrespect for the courts," he added.

The injunction process has been attacked especially by striking soft coal miners who appealed last month to President Coolidge for action. Insurgent members of congress since have said they will seek new legislation to limit the power of both state and district courts to issue injunctions in labor controversies.

Davis said congress should act in order to prevent "the belief that controversies in labor disputes are being determined through judicial legislation," he added.

"It would also be worth the serious thought of congress to provide for speedy trial and decision in such cases, for the long delays which often occur between the hearing in the lower court and the final decision in the appellate courts not infrequently have the result that the party successful in the lower court, for example, obtaining an injunction accomplished his purpose even though the decision is reversed by the higher court."

CHURCH WILL WELCOME AGNES-SCOTT MEMBERS

A number of affiliate members from Agnes Scott college will be welcomed at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Decatur Presbyterian church at a special service to be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. McGeachy, who will preach on "The Happiness of Friendship."

Before the services the young women will be entertained by a special committee of the woman's auxiliary of the church.

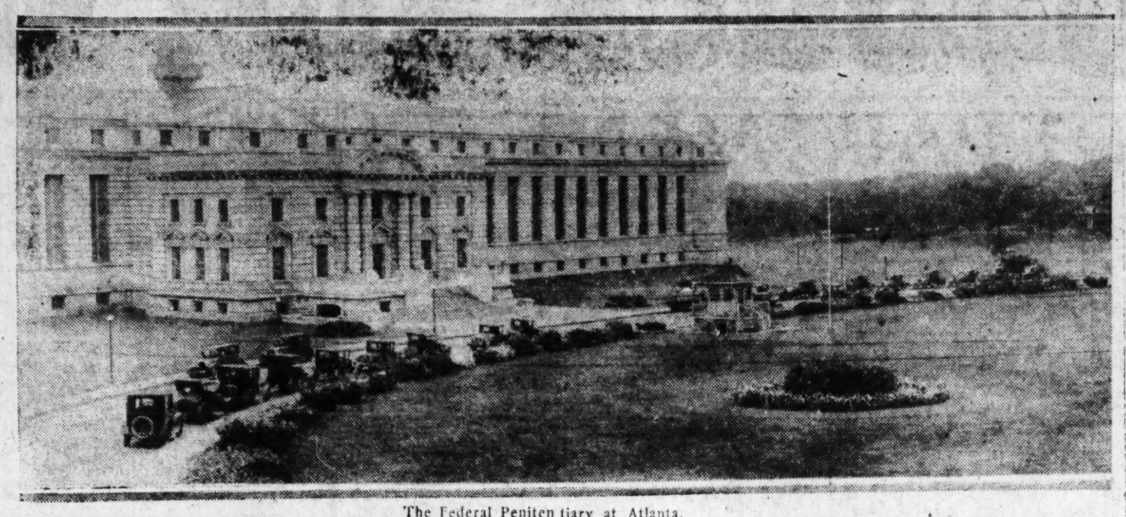
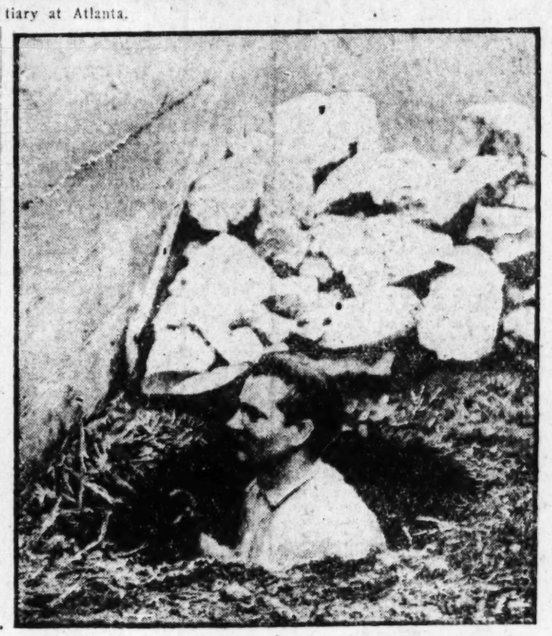
Few Breaks for Liberty Have Been Successfully Carried Out by Inmates of U. S. Penitentiary Here



The Federal Peniten tiary at Atlanta.

The grim interior of Atlanta prison.



The hole through which Dutch Anderson escaped from Atlanta.

BY BEN COOPER.

Rearing its lofty head far above the Atlanta federal penitentiary as a mute symbol of the hopes of the more than 3,000 inmates, the huge smokestack designed for the new powerhouse has been completed and is ready for use, though the powerhouse itself is not yet finished. The foundations of the powerhouse have been laid, and the work is well under way.

The power house will be the latest addition to the mighty plant which houses those who have erred against the government, Atlanta's city within a city, a town of hopes and fears. The new building is being built of reinforced concrete, 52 feet in width and 150 feet long, modern in every respect, with automatic stokers and water-softening appliances. Ultimately it is expected that the plant will supply the institution with an ample water supply, most if not all the electricity used for industrial as well lighting purposes, and all other power requisites.

In the old power house at least one brilliantly executed escape plot was hatched and carried out by inmates of the prison. This was in 1916, when William Knoblock, 18 months for mail fraud, and Robert Fay, eight years for conspiracy to destroy vessels and cargoes in New York harbor during the war, were assigned to duty in the old power house.

Used Forged Pass.

Carrying a kit of electrician's tools from the power house, Knoblock and Fay appeared at the barred door to the new cell wing then under construction and presented a forged pass to the wing. A prisoner named Morrison, who was in charge of the door, refused to honor the pass, suspecting something wrong, but Knoblock and Fay appealed to the captain, who, without investigation, took their word for it and ordered Morrison to let them through, on the strength of the forged pass. Knoblock and Fay went on through the door, and on out the cell wing through the end, where workmen were engaged in building up the wall.

Appearing on the outside guard line, the conspirators were halted by a guard who demanded of them where they were going. "We were sent out to repair the arc light line," the plotters responded, and the guard, satisfied, let them pass. The two men climbed one of the near-by arc light poles, did some work on it, and then started for the next one. Meanwhile the guard went on about his duties, and, unobserved, Knoblock and Fay quickly made for the reservation's boundary fence and cleared it.

A milk wagon driver appeared at the front of the prison some time later and told a guard that he had seen two men jump the boundary fence and run away, both men being in the prison white duck uniform. The guard got busy and a quick checkup revealed that Knoblock and Fay had not returned, but were gone with the winds.

Both Recaptured Later.

Knoblock was recaptured in Philadelphia later, the same year, but was pardoned a year later. Fay was returned to the prison in 1919, but was pardoned in 1922 for deportation to Germany.

Other more carefully planned escapes from the prison have not been as successful as that of Fay and Knoblock. For instance, there is the case of Louis Deschelles, counterfeiter, who is no wexercising his talents as the prison photographer, and George Hermans, who later was deported to Germany.

Hermans and Deschelles spent nearly six months in the duck mill machine shop building a telescoping ladder of steel. The work was carried out at odd moments when the men were not under direct observation and aftr a tedious job of intricate fashioning of steel pieces, the ladder was completed. The pair hid it in the duck mill, and next day went to the hiding place to get it for the escape. They found, however, that a huge box of canvass had been moved so as to cover the hiding place, and that it was impossible for them to get at it. So they had to start all over and make another ladder.

The second ladder was ready, eventually, and Deschelles and Hermans hid themselves in a fuel box under one of the guard towers on the main wall. Waiting until nightfall, they crept forth, extending the ladder so it would reach the top of the wall, and hooked the rubber-bound hook in a seemingly secure place.

Guard Hears Noise.

A moment later the ladder slipped and fell with a tremendous noise and the startled guard poked his head over the edge of his platform to see what it was all about.

"Where are you birds going?" was all the guard could think of to ask.

"We were going out, but we are not now," replied Deschelles.

The other ladder was found in the duck mill and both of the steel "hat racks" now occupy an obscure nook under a table in one of the prison office rooms, from where they are occasionally pulled out for display to visitors.

Deschelles did make good on one cleverly-planned escape, however, and was gone a year before his recapture. This was on May 13, 1923, when a crowd of Mothers' day visitors paraded through the prison, a practice discontinued with the arrival of Warden John W. Snook. Deschelles had constructed a little periscope, and with this she watched a guard from another corner until the guard turned his back, and then, in a civilian suit stolen from a guard's locker, he quickly mingled with the crowd of visitors and passed out of the prison unnoticed to the car line, where he boarded a street car and came to town. He was recaptured a year later in Chicago.

Gave Blade to Chapman.

On this escape, Louis left a letter for A. C. Aderhold, deputy warden who was record clerk then, in which he asked that Hr. Aderhold not think bad of him for attempting to escape, and pointing out that he had left the records, especially his own, untouched when he might have destroyed them. He also left a letter for a prisoner friend of whom he thought a lot.

While confined in isolation in 1925 for an infraction of prison rules, Louis sent word up to Warden Snook that he had to see him. The warden ordered Louis brought to his office, and Louis promptly told him that he had had another plan to escape, but had given it up. Louis handed over a piece of hacksaw blade.

"Where is the other piece?" the warden asked.

"Oh, I gave that to Gerald Chapman," was the reply, and sure enough, when the warden compared the bit of blade later with a piece taken from Chapman before he was sent to Connecticut, it was found that the pieces matched perfectly.

The Atlanta federal penitentiary has some "tough birds," but none any more so than Roy Gardner, train robber and bandit whose name is almost as famous as that of Jesse James in the west.

Escape Plans Foiled.

Roy broke away from McNeill Island but was recaptured, and sent to Leavenworth, and then transferred to Atlanta. Months ago Roy was halted in a carefully planned escape plot when it was found that he had sawed some bars through and was planning to make a break. "Warden, this is the hardest pen in the United States to get away from," Roy recently commented to Warden Snook, who regarded this as a compliment to the prison, for Gardner has broken away from some of the strongest institutions in the country.

There has been only one successful attempt at escape from the prison proper since Warden Snook took charge, and of the three who got away in this break only one is still at large. Basil Hugh Banghart, Albert Rosenberg and Fred McGoulrick crashed the prison through a cell block window and escaped under fire from the guardhouse. McGouldrick was recaptured the next morning but Banghart and Rosenberg made good their escape. Rosenberg was captured later in Indiana on robbery charges and was sentenced to 25 years. Banghart is still at liberty.

Eight prisoners went out the end of a cell block in 1920, some years B. S. (before Snook). This escape was from a basement cell block and was executed through a window from which bricks had been removed. Prisoners Sherrill, Brown, Perhankey, Campbell, Tons, Dodge, Duffy and Crook crashed to freedom via this route, but all were recaptured and returned to the pen.

Get 10 Years More.

William Hensen and Will Patton received additional sentences of ten years each for their efforts to break away. They did manage to get clean away from the prison but were recaptured later in the same day by a posse. Their escape took place on March 12, 1919.

Patton, who was doing eight years for interstate comerce law violation, and Hensen, who had ten years for housebreaking and larceny, were assigned to duty as cleaners. They asked Guard Curtis to open a basement locker and while the guard was working with the key one of the pair socked him with a sandbag made of a handkerchief and some sand. The guard resisted, however, and a general fight took place in which the guard was knocked unconscious and stabbed.

Patton and Hensen took the guard's keys and opened a hall locker to get two revolvers. They then made the outside of the prison with the guard's keys and were challenged by a box guard. They told Guard Tippin, in the box, that they were employed at the stable, and he allowed them to pass. A few moments later Guard Curtis crawled up the stairs from the basement and revealed what had happened. A pursuit was hastily organized, but by that time the prisoners had gained cover. They were both retaken later in the day and are still doing their bit, with ten years added on for murderous assault on Guard Curtis.

Of course the star performers at escaping from the federal prison were Gerald Chapman and Dutch Anderson. Both of these men are gone forever now, but their exploits will always be remembered by Atlantans. Chapman went over the wall while his partner, Dutch, went under the wall in a tunnel.

Hatching Plots.

There are some 3,000 men in the federal prison and of this number there are many who are constantly hatching plots to escape. Warden Snook and his officers are on the defensive, but with good breaks manage to nip most of the plots in the bud, while others approach the final stage before discovery. Occasionally a prisoner walks away from the honor farm, but this is not regarded as an escape in the true sense of the word, but merely the violation of a prisoner's honor, for which he suffers dearly on recapture.

Contrasted to those inmates whose minds are always upon the matter of getting away are those prisoners who are taking their lot with calm fortitude, and serving out their time in a sincere effort to square themselves with the world. There are many other angles to the Atlanta federal penitentiary other than the efforts of prisoners to break away, and one of the most interesting of these is the case of "Uncle" Johnnie Lee, of Arkansas. "Uncle" Johnnie is 77 years old, and before he came to Atlanta had never learned to read and write. But one day the federal agents swooped down upon his home, which was deeded to his grandfather by the Indians, and they found a gallon jug of liquor sitting at the head of his bed where he had kept it from time immemorial, as had his father and grandfather before him.

The agents were acting on the tip of a drunk who "Uncle" Johnnie had refused to sell any liquor to, and that little gallon jug cost the old man a term in Atlanta. On his arrival at the prison recently he was enrolled in the prison school and is now learning his "A. B. C.'s"

Aids to Prisoners.

There is plenty of discipline at the federal penitentiary out on McDonough road, but then there are also things which make the lot of the inmates easier to bear. For instance, the prison has a library of some 20,000 volumes, under the charge of Chaplain Ladlow. Here Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent; Lawrence Aber, soldier of fortune, are found among the 35 prisoners employed in the library. The inmates are allowed to take books to their cells and read until "lights out."

Most of the prisoners of national interest are gone from the prison now though there still remains a few. For instance, Albert E. Sartain, former warden of the prison, who is now a clerk in the prison hospital while serving time for alleged acceptances of bribes from prisoners for soft jobs, and Assemblyman William C. Amos, of New York, who went into the penitentiary on charges connected with the selling of $2,000,000 worth of stock in the Morosco Holding corporation.

Among those who have gone from the prison were Ex-Governor Warren T. McCray, of Indiana, who got ten years for using the mails to defraud; Earl Carroll, Broadway producer, who got a year and a day for a "white lie" told to a federal grand jury in defense of a girl who once upon a time took a bath in ginger ale; Marcus Garvey, negro "Ponzi" whose Black Star Line and "Back to Africa" colonization project flopped and sent him to Atlanta for a term; George Remus, millionaire bootleg king who is now on trial in Cincinnati for slaying his wife; Mannie Kessler, New York bootleg king, and many others.

Negro Writes Snook.

Every once in a while Warden Snook gets a card or a letter from old Sam Moore, negro, who up to his release recently was the oldest prisoner at the pen from point of service. Sam was No. 22 and was one of the first to be incarcerated here when the federal prison was first established. He was doing a life sentence for murder in the District of Columbia when paroled and turned him loose on a new and strange world. But old Sam is making good now, and is in the hands of friends, thanks to the arrangements made for him by Warden Snook. When Sam left the prison he surrendered seniority to Edward Wilkey, No. 1015, who is also a life termer.

Plenty of recreation is provided for Uncle Sam's charges, there are seven tennis courts, a cinder track and athletic equipment in the prison yard and every spring the prison holds a series of track meets, sometimes with teams from local schools and colleges. Then in fine weather the inmates enjoy their week-end football or baseball games, an occasional moving picture, and radio programs in the cell houses in the evenings.

They are fed good, substantial food and plenty of it in a dining room fitted up with new furniture recently installed and after a good day's work at their various jobs they are at liberty to read or chat in their cells until time to go to bed. During the day they are given an opportunity to exercise in the prison yard and have time for a quiet smoke between their shifts at work. The biggest industry in the prison is the work in the duck mill, where miles of canvas are turned out for the government for use as mail bags for the postoffice department and for use by the navy and army.

Trades Are Taught.

In the federal prison the inmates are taught trades by which they may earn a living on their release and at the same time they are paid a small wage for the work they turn out, the money being paid them on their release from prison as a stake with which to fight their battle against life. More than 800 prisoners are employed in the duck mill and during the past year the prisoners were paid as bonuses $91,640.24 for the support of themselves and dependent families.

Then there is another side to the picture—the junk ward, where human wrecks from the use of dope are taken in hand and made over into men. The dopers are given "cold turkey," which means that they are confined to the hospital on entrance without a single bit of dope and given an heroic but effective treatment with strong medicine.

Most of the junkers believe that they will die on the first day and the second and the third days, but they soon recover from the treatment, and after a few weeks experience absolutely no craving for dope. If they remain in prison long enough for the treatment to take its full effect, the probability is that on their release they will not go back to narcotics.

PROHI LEADERS TO MEET MONDAY

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The Anti-Saloon league will begin its biennial convention here tomorrow faced with the task of electing a successor to the late Wayne B. Wheeler, who, as legislative superintendent and general counsel of the organization, was for years a leader in the dry cause.

Nominations for the various places to be filled in the league's organization will be made to the directors by the executive committee which met here today. Some members of the league believe two men will be named to take over the posts held by Wheeler, Dr. F. Scott McBride has been carrying on the work formerly performed by Mr. Wheeler.

Assembly coincident with the convening of congress, the convention will be addressed by a number of men prominent in the prohibition ranks. William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, the dry crusader, will be among the speakers, as will Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army. Others will be Senators Willis, of Ohio, and Sheppard, of Texas; former Representative Upshaw, of Georgia; Dr. J. M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, and Dr. McBride.

Officials of the Anti-Saloon league said today that more than 12,000 applications had been received for tickets to the meeting. Plans are being made to hold overflow sessions.

ATLANTA GIRL BADLY INJURED IN MACON CRASH

Macon, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—The unconscious form of a young stenographer identified as Miss Leota Blanche Shier, 629 Barnett street, N. E., Atlanta, was found on the Dixie highway at Bolingbroke tonight. Her face was upturned to the pouring rain nearby was a badly damaged heavy automobile, which she is believed to have been driving.

The pavement was slippery, because of the three-day rain and it is believed that the car turned over two or three times, hurling her out, although the car had righted itself on the pavement.

She is at a local private hospital, having been picked up by other automobilists. She was in her stocking feet when found.

Miss Shier for some time was employed as stenographer at The Atlanta Georgian. She has not been connected with the newspaper for the past year and her present employment could not be learned.

$14,925 in Permits.

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Building permits were issued for seven new buildings, seven new dwellings and seven re wroofs during the month of November while six repair jobs were recorded.

The total sum involved in the construction was $14,925.

Grayson Proposed as Head Of Spanish War Veterans

Colonel William L. Grayson, of Savannah, Ga., senior vice commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, will be proposed for the presidency of that organization at the next election, as a result of the launching of a nation-wide campaign to promote his election at a banquet tendered by the state department of the ladies' auxiliary of the veterans, to Colonel Grayson and Colonel W. M. Burson, commander of the Georgia department.

Barney Barnard, of Atlanta, was named as campaign manager to stimulate interest and support throughout the south and the nation for the election, which will be held at the next veterans' convention August 28, in Havana, Cuba.

Colonel Grayson now holds the second highest national post in the organization.

In a speech at the banquet Friday night, Colonel Grayson pointed out to the 100 members assembled, the purposes and objectives of the Spanish War Veterans, and declared that the people of Georgia do not fully appreciate this organization as they should.

Colonel Grayson said:

Veterans Not Recognized.

"Candor compels me to say that the Spanish war veteran has not been recognized and appreciated in the south, and particularly in my own state of Georgia, as they are in the north, east and west, and for that reason it seems to me appropriate that I should bring to your attention the purposes and objectives of the United Spanish War Veterans. The Spanish war was conceived and prosecuted in a sublime spirit of unselfishness and sacrifice, to the end that a people suffering under misrule and struggling against tyranny might be a nation free and independent, and next October the little island republic of Cuba, now a happy, progressive and prosperous people, will be the gracious host to all the Spanish war veterans of the United States.

"To honor the memories of the comrades who have gone west, to, by precept and example, keep alive the spirit of patriotism, to gain honorable recognition for those who served faithfully and well, to aid weak and unfortunate comrades, their families and their dependents, to carry the same spirit of sacrifice and service exercised in time of war into the daily walks of life, to battle unceasingly for right in civic affairs—for we insist that there shall be honor, purity and honesty of purpose in all official government, and regardless of party affiliation, the official lacking in integrity or corrupt in the administration of his office shall be removed from our municipal, county, state and national life—to prepare for any service which we can render to country in time of need and to use an organized effort constantly, and insistently that our government shall provide an adequate national defense.

"Oh, yes, we remember when the south and north joined ranks and the power of Spain was humbled in the dust, when Dewey at Manila bay said calmly, 'You may fire when ready,' when the boys romped up San Juan Hill and the bands played 'There Will Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight'—when the heroic Alabaman, Hobson, locked the harbor of Santiago and Clark raced around the horn on the Oregon; when the Spanish fleet came out of Santiago bay at the command of Hell and Flame and our commander said, 'There is honor and glory for all.' When Captain Phillips on the deck of the Texas shouted to the Americans to cease firing and shouted in his megaphone, 'Don't cheer boys, the poor devils are dying.'"

POLITICS ARE GETTING WARMER IN COWETA

Senoia, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Politics are warming up in Coweta county and the probability is that this will be one of the warmest primaries the county has witnessed in several years. S. V. Carpenter, the present sheriff, is opposed for reelection by W. A. Potts, Newnan, and B. L. Banks, of Senoia. Ordinary J. A. Camp is opposed by A. W. Powers, chairman of the board of county commissioners.

$7,000,000 ASKED FOR FLOOD COSTS

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—An immediate urgent deficiency appropriation of $7,000,000 to cover flood emergency expenditures in the Mississippi valley was urged today by Secretary Davis, of the war department, in his annual report to President Coolidge.

That sum, the secretary said, was needed to replace $2,000,000 borrowed from the unallotted portion of the general river and harbor appropriation to complete closing crevasses in the levees and also to restore $5,000,000 to the Mississippi special fund laid out in unexpected ways in the fight with the floods.

The $7,000,000 deficiency measure would leave the war department with this $5,000,000 available for continuing essential construction work along the river, the report said, "until a new policy may have been considered and adopted" with relation to flood control.

Disclosure that the $2,000,000 in unallotted river and harbor funds was diverted to levee repair work recalls that the war department was informed by the controller general at the time this was proposed that there was no legal authority to make the allotment for us "on navigation features" of the Mississippi river commission's work, such as dredging and bank revetment, but he makes no mention of the correspondence with the comptroller general.

No New Light.

The war secretary discusses the flood situation along the Mississippi at considerable length, but since his report was prepared before the administration project for control of flood waters was matured, it shed no new light on that problem. Considerable space also was devoted to the Inland Waterways corporation, the Philippine Islands and other civil aspects of the war department; but the military side of its work was mentioned only briefly, being left to the report of Major General Summerall, chief of staff.

For the army itself, Secretary Davis said the major need was "a continued stabilization of policy as to strength, organization and location."

"The insufficiency of our provision for the building up and maintenance of the authorized war reserve of material for two field armies or 1,000,000 men is a matter of deep concern to this department," he said. "Stagnation in promotion and inadequacy of housing also remain as important questions for solution.

"However, to my opinion, the all-important present need of the war department so far as its military activities are concerned, is a continued stabilization of policy. The effectiveness of the army, the morale of the personnel and the proficiency of its units for many years after the world war suffered from uncertainties as to strength, organization and location. Under such condition progress could not be otherwise than slow and somewhat unsatisfactory."

Lauds Wood.

In noting the death of Major General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, Secretary Davis said that never in their history had the government of the islands been "in so satisfactory and promising condition" as today.

"The Philippines of today," he added, "are General Wood's most fitting monument. As we review the recent progress, we must ever retain a mental image of the personality, the patriotism and the untiring zeal of the great administrator. Without such background we can not expect to grasp intelligently the full significance of the gradual but sure development of a great people.

"Never have the people of the islands been more prosperous. Never has the outlook for the future been more bright. This happy situation is the result of the policies pursued by the United States in its goverance of the Philippines, reinforced and maintained by a sterling administration of the islands during the past six years."

Mr. Davis rehearsed at length the statistics showing development of commerce and transportation through the Mississippi-Warrior barge services and said the time was at hand for a declaration by congress as to the future of the Inland Waterways corporation but made no recommendation as to what government policy should be. Instead, the war secretary outlines six possible methods of meeting the demand for greater service. They ranged from continued operation as at present, with gradual increase of equipment out of earnings, to large increase of capitalization and wide expansion of service. Included in the suggestions of possible policies was sale to a "semi-public group of citizens" under proper safeguards and in accordance, "with the original intention," but Secretary Davis did not commit himself to any of the suggestions he makes.

CONTROL BODY ENDS ARGUMENTS.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Views of the lower Mississippi valley on the flood problem as given by representatives of the Mississippi River Flood Control association, were completed before the house flood control committee when W. L. Etheridge, of Monroe, La., outlined the needs of that vicinity.

This association brought witnesses from seven states to the hearings, all of who stood decisively for national control of floods at federal expense only. It had been expected that hearings would be discontinued at the opening of congress, but Chairman Reid said today that other witnesses will be allowed to appear before the committee Monday. These are understood to be representatives of industries in and along the upper reaches of the Mississippi which were affected by the 1927 flood.

Etheridge said that his plea for national handling of the flood problem was not based on the poverty of the people affected but upon the fact that "1,500,000 people were menaced by floods making protection a national duty."

A spillway from the junction of the Arkansas river to the Mississippi as has been suggested was opposed by Etheridge. He said that such a project should be undertaken only if it was an absolute essential to flood control.

Just before the close of the hearing Representative Kemp, democrat, Louisiana, notified Chairman Reid that a delegation from four parishes of his state would like to appear before the committee after the army engineers' recommendations have been received.

This delegation consists of F. J. Heintz, E. H. Buck and Eades Poitevant, representing the Tangaphaoa, Livingstone, St. Tammany and Washington parishes. They oppose a spillway which they expect the army engineers to recommend for diversion of water from the Mississippi into the Maurephas or Pontchartrain lakes. "Such spillways while helping others elsewhere, would flood our people out of their homes," said Poitevent.

DEATH THREAT LAID TO WIFE OF REMUS

old, and after each bit of tattling, saw Remus give way to "outbursts of rage" which finally convinced him his old chief was insane.

Alleged Plots.

Connors' testimony today concerned alleged plots by Mrs. Remus and Franklin L. Dodge Jr., to slay Remus, to have Remus deported, and to mulct him of his illicit liquor fortune. There were other stories of Mrs. Remus and Dodge together here and there about the country, and of two occasions when Remus housed in the same hotel with them, sought to slay them.

Less than ten minutes of the court session was left when direct examination of Connors was concluded with his statement that "all these things made me form the opinion that Mr. Remus was insane."

The prosecution seized upon the brief interval with avidity. Hurling questions at Connors in an accusing tone and in a voice which at its best rivals Remus' roar, Walter K. Sibbald, assistant prosecutor, hurriedly built up a picture of Connors as a former bootlegger, an ex-convict, a man still in the whisky business, and the associate of bootleggers.

Sibbald fought strenuously to send the jury away to its day and a half of immurement with something fresh in its mind other than the mistreated and insane slayer, Remus, had been pictured by Connors.

"At least all of Monday," replied Prosecutor Charles P. Taft, Jr., when asked how much longer cross-examination of Connors would require.

"We shall make it very thorough upon the assumption that Remus will not appear as a witness."

"I cannot say for sure now," Charles H. Elston, co-counsel with Remus, said about Remus' appearance as a witness. It was the first time he had wavered from a positive statement that Remus would follow Connors, after which the defense soon would rest its case.

An attempt by Mrs. Remus to shoot Remus was described by Connors. It occurred in the Remus $750,000 mansion on Price Hill here, he said. He, Blanche Watson, Remus' secretary, and Remus, were there when Mrs. Remus came in. Remus, who was ill, reprimanded his wife. Their divorce case was pending and Remus told his wife she knew he was trying to make a settlement with her.

"I'll settle this myself, he can't abuse me like that," Connors said Mrs. Remus cried. She turned her back and he leaped and caught her hand as she had a pearl-handled pistol half withdrawn from her handbag.

Situation Reversed.

The situation was reversed upon an occasion, Mrs. Remus was at her husband's office, Connors narrated. He had read to Remus a newspaper story about Mrs. Remus having been to Atlanta, Ga., in connection with her effort to have Remus deported to Germany where he was born.

"Daddy, I was down there trying to have it squashed," Mrs. Remus explained, according to Connors. Remus did not accept the explanation and went into a rage. Mrs. Remus became frightened and ran from the office.

Other violent rages, in some of which Remus fainted or was delirious, were said to have attended reports directly to Remus that Mrs. Remus and Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., had paid St. Louis gunmen $15,000 to kill him, when he discovered a large unpaid bill made by his wife; when a friend told him Dodge and Mrs. Remus were in an Indianapolis hotel together, and when Remus thought he had found them registered under assumed names in a Washington, D. C., hotel.

Slept Only Two Hours.

"Mr. Remus never slept over two hours a night after he got out of the Atlanta penitentiary," testified Connors. "He was working out a plan so he could meet them somewhere and get his property back. 'If ever I meet Dodge it will be good-by Mr. Dodge'," he claimed once.

The property possessed by Remus when he was sent to the penitentiary was alleged to have passed into possession of Mrs. Remus by virtue of a complete power of attorney Remus gave her.

When Mrs. Remus was indicted in the Jack Daniels distillery case at Indianapolis, according to Connors, much of it, diamonds, whisky certificates and other articles were passed to her attorneys. Mrs. Remus came to him, Connors testified, and wished him to help recover it. Connors passed the information right along to Remus, he said.

Thieves Fall Out.

"I told him that Mrs. Remus said there had been a falling out of thieves. She told me that Breitenstein, her Cleveland lawyer, wanted $37,000 for his services for her in the Jack Daniels case. Hinkel (Matt Hinkle), Cleveland sports promoter, was holding out for $10 a barrel commission."

Connors said Mrs. Remus gave him some papers, stating "some serious things are in these copies that might get Dodge in bad with the government; handle them with discretion."

Taft today expressed conviction that Remus would not be a witness. It was his plan to use Dodge, he said, only in the event the trend of the defense's case made it necessary.

Dodge Caused Downfall.

Dodge, former department of justice agent, assigned to prohibition work, worked up the case which sent crashing Remus' bootleg kingdom.

After the dethroned "king of bootleggers" was sent to the penitentiary, Dodge was alleged in the defense's opening statement to have begun an association with Mrs. Remus which drove Remus insane.

Cross-examination of Connors brought out that while Remus deserted the law to turn bootlegger, Connors left the internal revenue service for the same purpose.

Connors denied Blanche Watson had been or was in the bootlegging business.

Connors, Miss Watson, Remus and George Klug, who drove the death car the morning Mrs. Remus was slain, were alleged by the state to have conspired to kill Mrs. Remus and to have appointed Remus executioner.

The prosecution said that one of the other things Connors would be interrogated about was testimony before the grand jury and that he believed Remus was sane at the time of the slaying.

A publicity agent today passed out to newspaper reporters at the trial a 1,500 word statement signed by Ruth Remus, 20-year-old daughter of the slain woman and adopted daughter of Remus, accusing Remus of cold-blooded murder and lamenting the besmirching of her mother's name.

BEACH DENIES ALL CHARGES

veloped that they have since been destroyed.

Weak Heart Is His Alibi.

Beach, sallow and shaken by three and one-half hours of testimony, was excused from the witness stand at 2:35 p. m.

Much of his ordeal had been spent in flight from Prosecutor Hinkle's searching questions about his early misstatements to detectives, or in turning upon his tormentor in the anger of exhaustion.

Beach called upon his heart both to defend and to explain. He reiterated time after time that he suffered from a racking heart ailment. He offered his heart as a defense from charges of indiscretions usually associated with youth. He offered his heart to explain his flight from South Vineland. Afraid, he said, that the "bullying" of detectives would bring on a fatal attack.

Doctors Take Stand.

Two physicians followed the gray-fringed, bilious defendant to the stand, to establish his heart disease. Dr. Henry C. James, a rural physician, said that the poultryman suffered from an organic heart trouble that is incurable and growing more serious.

Dr. Edward M. Weil said he examined Beach Friday and found an accelerated pulse and that excitement "would have a very bad effect."

Beach's expression was doleful and solemn as Dr. Weil added: "It could cause death."

"Oh, of course," remarked Justice Campbell dryly. The court also doubted if the James testimony was relevant, but it was admitted.

Beach had been painted as a rustic Romeo. He looked like a church warden as he faced the jury of seven men and five women who hold his life and that of Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl in their hands. His expression was mildly indignant. Such hair as remains to him was a fringe of snowy white. His skin was a bilious yellow and his general appearance that of a stolid citizen who has consumed more fried food than was good for his liver.

Mrs. Lilliendahl listened intently to her alleged lover's recital.

Nimble Witted.

When Beach, nimble-witted as a horse trader, parried Assistant Prosecutor S. Cameron Hinkle's thrusts in his severe cross-examination the widow often exposed her prominent front teeth in friendly interest.

Beach denied that he knew anything about the murder, but he admitted grudgingly under Hinkle's cross examination that he had lied in many of his denials of incriminating points in two statements signed for investigators a fortnight after his elderly neighbor was shot to death.

Beach's story, brought out by his lawyers, Edison Hedges, was one of neighborly acquaintance with Dr. Lilliendahl and his wife.

They had met by accident a year ago when Beach was looking at some chicken houses. Beach met Mrs. Lilliendahl later. A love of nature, calling to kindred spirits, united the trio in many happy drives about the countryside. Beach knew every lane and bypath. He acted as guide, sitting in the front seat of the Lilliendahl car with Mrs. Lilliendahl to direct the driving, but conversing with the elderly doctor and his 7-year-old son, Alfred, who usually occupied the rear seat.

Beach said he had been fond of Dr. Lilliendahl from the time of their first meeting.

Talked of Poultry.

"He called me Willis," Beach said. Their talk was mostly of poultry. Beach called the doctor "Billy Boy." Their one quarrel was not about a heart affair but a hennery. Dr. Lilliendahl promised a quick cure for some drooping hens and Beach told him: "Doctor, you're full of mush!"

Beach detailed the quarrel, which he said both regretted. "And the doctor says to me, 'Willis, we shouldn't be at loggerheads!'" Beach responded with a gift of a mess of pickerel which the physician accepted.

Samuel Bark, the Texas rope twister and cow-case lawyer, who was the state's somewhat blurry and star witness, was conversing in his affable drawl to all who cared to listen just outside the courtroom while Beach swore he had not only never confessed to him, but had never seen him before the trial.

Claims Alibi.

Beach testified he was in hiding in the attic of James Parker's home near Chester, Pa., on October 1, the day of his alleged confession to Bark in Baltimore, 96 miles distant. The Parkers preceded him to the stand and swore that he stayed with them from September 27 to October 5.

"Do you recall the testimony of the witness named Lloyd, who testified he had seen you and Mrs. Lilliendahl together?" asked Hedges. Beach's indignant expression asked if he could ever forget Farmer Lloyd's word picture of him, rising from a hedgerow trysting place with oak leaves and pine needles clinging to his coattails.

"Was the incident true?"

"It was not."

Beach denied that he ever took the doctor's comely wife into his arms.

Identifies Diamond Ring.

Beach identified a diamond ring that he had pawned, but the ring, he said, was his own, not Mrs. Lilliendahl's. He said he bought it three years ago from a person identified only as a John Buseman.

"How did it get out of your possession?"

"I pawned it."

Hinkle dropped the subject and took Beach over his visit to a monument works on the day of the murder, which formed a part of his alibi. He dropped that and plunged the witness into explaining his denial to detectives that he had ever written letters to Mrs. Lilliendahl.

"Why did you say that?"

"They were so unimportant I didn't think they were worth mentioning."

"But you did send letters to her, and you told us at the time you didn't. Why did you do that?"

Explains "Peggy" Notes.

"Well, they weren't really letters anyway—only notes. Four or five lines each."

Explaining why he disappeared, Beach said his physician had told him not to get excited and "to take it easy."

"'Your working days are over,' he told me."

Then he understood, he said, that he was going to be subjected to another examination by detectives.

"They told me that Harrold (Chief Detective Frank Harrold) had been easy on me—they said this next time I was going to see blood.

"There were men all over my place day and night—50, 60, a hundred of them at a time. Reporters and detectives and photographers and state troopers and everything else. You couldn't go out of the house without stumbling over some of them.

"I couldn't even go out and look after the chickens! 'They were peeking in the windows, night and day.'

"Who?"

"Who what?"

"Who was peeking in your windows at night?"

"I don't know. Some of your police detectives, I suppose." But when he slipped away to the bungalow at Linwood Heights he was quiet at last, he said.

"I had solid comfort—nobody to bother me."

CHAMBER TAX PLAN IS HIT BY MELLON

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The chamber of commerce of the United States was charged today by Secretary Mellon with having presented a surprising misconception of facts and an argument hardly worthy of a business men's report in urging a $400,000,000 reduction in taxes.

Mellon wrote to Lewis E. Pierson, president of the chamber, in a continuation of the controversy that has arisen between the administration and the chamber over the size of the tax reduction to be made by the congress which begins sessions on Monday. The treasury favors a $225,000,000 reduction while a slash of $236,000,000 is proposed in the revenue bill drafted by the house ways and means committee.

Follows Coolidge's Lead.

In assailing the chamber of commerce program Secretary Mellon followed the lead of President Coolidge, whose view that the chamber was advocating an unwarranted reduction, was disclosed recently at the white house. After this, the chamber reiterated its demand for a $400,000,000 tax cut defended its course in advocating it.

Secretary Mellon today expressed surprise that the chamber had made a tax demand in "the entire absence of detailed figures as to future revenues and expenditures" and charged that its estimated yield from the corporation income tax represented "inexcusable carelessness."

By its own argument, the secretary said the chamber disproved the wisdom of repealing the excise tax on automobiles or on admission and club dues as it would make a too narrow tax base and force the government to rely solely on the income tax on corporations and individuals, the tobacco tax and customs duties.

Mellon Takes Exception.

In conclusion, the secretary said, "let me take serious exception to the statement in the chamber's report that 'there would be no great cause for alarm even though a deficit should, through unexpected developments, arise in any year.'

"For the United States government to borrow to pay for current expenditures would in my judgment be inexcusable," Mellon added. "A balanced budget is an essential element of any sound fiscal system, and as long as I am secretary, the treasury department will resist the undermining of this principle and will continue to advocate a tax system adequate to produce every year the revenues necessary to meet current expenditures."

Mellon advised the chamber of commerce that he was in accord with some of its revenue suggestions, asserting:

Favors Reduction.

"I believe that the corporation tax rate should be reduced, though circumstances do not permit as sweeping a reduction as you advocate; and I favor the repeal of the federal estate tax."

Turning to the administration's own tax program, the treasury head said:

"Detailed figures have been submitted to the ways and means committee. If the chamber of commerce will point out to me in what respects these figures are inaccurate, either in the case of estimated receipts or of estimated expenditures, I shall welcome their criticism. They were prepared after studies made independently by three experts having access to all of the facts. The estimates for 1929 as finally submitted to the committee exceeded the average of the estimates of these individual experts by over $45,000,000. I mention this in order to disprove the charge that has been made that the treasury deliberately errs on the side of conservatism."

Statements Challenged.

Mellon repeatedly challenged the accuracy of statements made by the chamber in advocating its tax program, and emphasized the care with which he said the treasury's plan was determined and outlined to the house committee.

"In my statement before the ways and means committee," he said, "I pointed out that the revenue from temporary sources must disappear in the course of the next year or two. The report of your committee answers this argument with the statement that 'similar predictions have been made in the past only to be disproved by later developments.' This is hardly worthy of a business men's report. How can receipts be realized from assets which no longer exist?

Receipts Lessened.

"Receipts from federal farm loan bonds and other minor securities amounted to $54,000,000 in 1926 and to $63,000,000 in 1927. The government holds no more farm loan bonds. Receipts from the war finance corporation assets amounted to $19,000,000 in 1926 and to $27,000,000 in 1927. The war finance corporation has been practically liquidated and not more than $6,000,000 can be realized from this source in the future. Receipts from railroad securities amounted in 1926 to $36,000,000, in 1927 to $89,000,000, and we will receive in 1928 probably $169,000,000. But in 1929 not more than $24,000,000 is anticipated from this source and after that little or no revenue can be expected under this head, for the very simple and good reason that only $49,000,000 principal amount of railroad obligations will be left out of the $230,000,000 held on June 30, 1927.

"The treasury's estimates as to expenditures are based on the figures furnished by the budget bureau, which submits them after a careful survey of the needs of all departments and bureaus and with complete knowledge of the appropriations to be recommended to the congress for the year in question. It must be noted that the estimates of expenditures submitted to the ways and means committee did not include increased expenditures which may result from new legislation such as flood relief.

Estimates Carefully Made.

"The present treasury estimates of receipts are based on a careful analysis of (1) probable receipts from miscellaneous sources in the light of past experience and taking into consideration the periods in which the proceeds of capital assets still in hand are likely to be realized; (2) a careful study of probable future tax collections on account of previous years, commonly known as back tax collections, based on the number of cases on hand, the current monthly rate of yield from this source, and an estimate of the amount involved in unsettled cases; and (3) insofar as current tax and customs receipts are concerned, on the assumption that neither in 1928 nor in 1929 will the yield fall substantially below that of the fiscal year 1927, in spite of the fact that business in the calendar year 1927 has not apparently reached the high level of 1926, a fact that must affect tax receipts for the last half of the fiscal year 1928 and the first half of the fiscal year 1929."

PIERSON ANSWERS MELLON'S ATTACK.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—A defense of the conclusions from the referendum on tax reduction by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was made tonight by Lewis E. Pierson, its president, in replying to Secretary Mellon. The treasury secretary, in a letter to Mr. Pierson, criticised the chamber's recommendation of a $400,000,000 tax reduction.

Declaring that the chamber had carefully considered its recommendations, Mr. Pierson said: "After all it is congress which wil pass on the tax bill—not the treasury department nor the national chamber." He expressed confidence that the measure will be in the best interests of the country.

In discussing the study of the tax problem by his organization, Pierson declared the chamber's taxation committee had examined the official estimates of expenditures and receipts for many years and "these estimates invariably have overstated the expenditures and understated the receipts." He cited that during the last five months official estimates of the 1928 surplus have been increased by $118,000,000.

Exceeded Estimates.

"Congress obviously has perceived this since passing the last three tax reductions," he continued, "despite forebodings of deficits, it has exceeded treasury estimates and still surpluses have steadily mounted."

The chamber's committee recommendations were overwhelmingly indorsed by the organization's membership," he said, "believing that the results would justify their conclusions. "The constituency of the chamber is a cross section of the country," he added, "and represents no special interest and no particular section."

Pierson said that the referendum presented all sides of the tax question thoroughly and that the taxation committee of the chamber was composed of both business men and a number of tax experts, "some of whom have been acting as advisors" both to the treasury department and to the congressional committees on taxation.

$2,000,000 LEASE BY AUTO LAUNDRY

cern and inventor and patentee of the multiple car washing system. Mr. Gillespie has been in Atlanta for a number of days arranging for the lease and construction work and will remain here to supervise the building, which is to begin immediately.

The service station when completed will cost $75,000, on the most conservative basis, Mr. Gillespie stated, it being the largest project of its kind outside of the stations built by the same interests on the Pacific coast. The outstanding feature of the undertaking is the Gillespie system of washing automobiles on a circular moving platform, with one car being placed on the platform every minute and another one, completely washed, coming off every minute, only 15 minutes being required for completed washing of each car. The washing of the car is divided into different phases similar to the assembly of automobiles in the Ford plants.

Second Largest Deal.

Marking a four-week period of hectic activity in the local real estate market, the two-million dollar lease is the largest transaction for the year with one exception, the Piedmont hotel lease, announced on November 13, it was pointed out by Mr. Sims, of the Hass & Howell Co. It is the second largest deal handled by the real estate department of Hass and Howell in a period of three days. In the other transaction announced Friday, properties valued at $600,000 were exchanged, including the Walton office building, the deal being negotiated jointly by John C. Baldwin, Jr., of Adams-Cates Co., and the Haas and Howell real estate department as agents.

The lease in the Ponce de Leon avenue lot was consummated on a sliding rental scale ranging from $13,000 per year to $22,500 for the first 50 years and continuing at $22,500 per year for the remainder of the 99-year term. The basic valuation on the property was taken as $1,000 per front foot on Ponce de Leon avenue. Surrounded on all sides by streets or alleys, the parcel measures 228 feet along Ponce de Leon and 203 feet on Juniper street. A residential structure now situated on a portion of the property is being torn down, with the necessary grading work and construction of the automobile service station to start immediately. It is to be completed and put into operation about the first of February.

On the west coast, where Mr. Gillespie first inaugurated his system, there are now seven plants in operation or under construction. Eight more plants are to be constructed in the large cities of the Pacific section under a franchise sold to the Tide Water Associated Oil Co. Recently eastern capital was attracted by the successful operation of the Gillespie system in the west and the company of which Mr. Gillespie is now vice president organized to develop the system in large cities throughout the country. In addition to the Atlanta plant the company is preparing to construct a similar plant in St. Louis. These will be the first of 200 more automobile service stations of the magnitude of the Atlanta station that the company plans to build in principal cities of United States, or sell franchises for use of its system.

Quick Service.

When the Atlanta plant is completed the cars to be washed will be driven into a building of dimensions 100x100 feet. On the inside they will be rolled onto a circular moving platform of 10 feet in width and revolving on a diameter of 92 feet. While the cars are being carried by the circulating conveyor numerous employees will perform their particular function in washing the car carried on in their zone of activity. About 36 employees will be engaged in the washing of cars alone. The huge conveyor will revolve at a rate sufficient for an unwashed car to be placed on it every minute, while a completely washed car comes off every minute.

In the lubricating department for which a special portion of the building will be devoted facilities will be provided for completely greasing a car in eight minutes, with three men on each lubricating rack. The Atlanta plant will have five such racks. The Alemite high pressure system operated by compressed air will be employed, grease being forced into the joints under pressure of 7,500 pounds.

Other services to be included in the novel enterprise that has gained the names where operating in the west of "department store of automobile service" and "automobile beauty parlor," are motor cleaning, chassis cleaning, snubber and shock absorber service, mechanical brake testing, with three separate electric outfits costing $3,500 each, fender and body dents removing, front wheel alignment and axle straightening, valve grinding, tire service, battery service, accessories department and gasoline service station. There will also be a restaurant, cigar and news stand on the properties, while the office will be equipped with radio and panatrope connected to loud speakers installed throughout the plant.

Old English Architecture.

Floor space totaling 24,000 square feet will be provided by the building, which will be of old English architecture, according to plans now being drawn by Raymond C. Snow, local architect. From 75 to 80 persons will be employed at the station with a monthly payroll of approximately $10,000, and an average income for the station estimated at $25,000 per month. In similar plants as many as 566 cars have been washed in one day and 153 cars lubricated. The average for each station is 8,500 cars washed per month and 2,000 lubricated. The lubricating racks sell an average of 2,250 gallons of oil per month and use two tons of grease.

When asked why Atlanta had been chosen for establishment of the first plant east of the Rockies, Mr. Gillespie pointed out that Atlanta is the metropolis of the south and will serve as the most logical means of popularizing the system in this section. Similar plants will follow the Atlanta station in Chicago, Detroit and other large cities east of the Pacific coast, Mr. Gillespie stated.

Attorneys representing the Gillespie Auto Laundry System in the lease negotiations were Little-Powell-Smith & Goldstein, while Thornwell Properties, Inc., the lessors, were represented by Robert P. Jones. Thornwell Properties, Inc., is controlled by a group of prominent Atlanta business men, of which Ed Thornwell is president.

other truck at Courtland and Houston streets. The name of the driver of the other truck was not learned.

G. N. Holmes, of 466 Peachtree street, was shaken up when an automobile he was driving west on North avenue collided with another car which was going south on Juniper street. Neither car was badly damaged, it was reported, and the driver of the other car was not learned by police.

Frank Calominos, of 180 Georgia avenue, was struck down and slightly injured by a truck on Georgia avenue near Pulliam street. He was treated at Grady hospital, while police are investigating the accident.

Miss May Wright, of 1254 Stillwood drive, was slightly injured and her mother who was riding with her was shaken up and bruised when a car driven by Miss Wright collided with a car driven by L. S. Butler, of 830 Vedado Way, at Ponce de Leon and Moreland avenues. Patrolman E. J. Tuggle investigated.

WHITE HOUSE POKER PARTIES DESCRIBED

man. If he erred in the administration of his high office it was solely out of an excess of loyalty to friends whom the world now knows to have been faithless. I am confident that before he departed for Alaska he had begun to suspect what these men had done to him and to the country, and that this suspicion contributed to his untimely death."

At the outset of his story Forbes denies that Harry Daugherty, whom he calls the "evil genius of the administration," was responsible for President Harding's nomination by the republican party in 1920. As early as 1915, Harding had been discussed as a presidential possibility by Theodore Roosevelt at a New York conference, which Forbes attended, he asserts.

Little Green House.

Sketching the "Ohio gang that Daugherty had brought to Washington" Forbes tells of many of Daugherty's transactions in the "little green house on K street." Apparently there was friction between Forbes and Daugherty, for the former veterans' bureau executive asserts that when he wished to do something to check narcotic traffic in federal prisons Daugherty blocked him.

"From my own recent experience in the penitentiary at Leavenworth," Forbes continues, "I know that the appalling evil which I described to him (Daugherty) still exists in our penal institutions. Narcotics can be had by any prisoner if he has the money to buy them."

"On one occasion," Forbes' story says, "I saw Jess Smith's office in the department of justice building $75,000 in $1,000 bills. The wind blew them off a table onto the floor and I helped to pick them up. Jess said they belonged to Daugherty."

Discussing Dr. Sawyer, "the country homeopathic physician who President Harding put into a brigadier-general's uniform," Forbes declares that Dr. Sawyer was the first man to reach him after he (Forbes) had been made director of the war risk insurance bureau by the president.

"Now lets do some real work," Sawyer greeted him, Forbes says, and promptly suggested that he "kick out" the medical director of the bureau, from then on, Forbes writes, Dr. Sawyer tried to dominate the bureau and its employees, establishing a "stool pigeon" system in the bureau and other departments of the government service.

BRITISH SHIP'S ATTACKERS ARE REPORTED HELD

Tulagi, Solomon Islands, December 3.—(AP)—Reports have been received here that Chief Nolu and several of his followers have been captured in punitive operations now going on as an outgrowth of the massacre of two British officials, 15 native police and the crew of the British steamer Auk at Sinarango recently. The two British officials killed were District Commissioner Bell and Cadet Lillies.

Infant Care
Mothers, you can't start too early to establish a child's serene and tranquil disposition. Even an infant can have a happy, fretless state of uninterrupted health. What will help do this? A simple, purely vegetable product as old as you are: plain Castoria.
A few drops of Castoria will settle all uneasiness in a jiffy. Will dispel colic or ward off constipation; and just as surely check diarrhea.
In real sickness, call a physician. But many physicians urge only Castoria for those little childish disorders that need nothing more. You need never be afraid to give pure Castoria. It is safe and perfectly harmless, for it contains no paregoric, no opiates, no dope of any kind. At least, this is true of the genuine Fletcher's Castoria"—and that is the kind doctors tell you always to buy.
Fletcher's Castoria is fine for any child. All children love to take it. Delicious tasting, and as good as it tastes. Just look for the Fletcher signature on the package and you will know you have the genuine and pure Castoria.
*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

GIVING RAINCOATS AWAY
Large Manufacturer Offers 350 Free to Readers of This Paper.
A novel way of acquainting the public with a new kind of Raincoat is being introduced by one of the largest manufacturers in the country. This firm, The Comer Mfg. Co., Dept. NR-23, Dayton, Ohio, is now putting out Raincoats that they claim are far superior and entirely different from the old type of coat. Already thousands of this new style are being worn all over the country. The demand is so tremendous it is impossible for them to deal direct with the public. Therefore, they are appointing men in each locality to help them and offer a Raincoat free as well as an opportunity to make up to $100 a week and more. Men who need a Raincoat and want to make big money should write them at once.—(adv.)

League Arms Commission Adjourns to March 15

BY HENRY WOOD.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Geneva, December 3.—The League of Nations' preparatory disarmament commission adjourned today until March 15, after a four-day session that may be remembered as marking the metamorphosis of Russia from a diplomatic stepchild into a full-fledged member of the family of nations.

Russia dominated the conference—her first disarmament one—from the opening day, and after a final bow went outside the meeting hall to tell the newspapers that at the next meeting she would announce her readiness to sign no-war treaties with any nation.

The Russians came here announcing that probably they would walk out of the meeting before it ended. Not only did they not walk out, but they suddenly changed their plans to depart today, and are staying on until Monday hoping that conferences may be arranged with Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister.

Russia Prominent.

A meeting with Chamberlain well might pave the way for resumption of British-Russian diplomatic relations which Britain severed a few weeks ago.

Russia, at the outset of the meeting, challenged other nations to disarm immediately and completely. She followed that up with a graphic picture of a brewing war that would make the world war look like a preliminary. Today the Russian delegation, in the spotlight until the last, protested against a long adjournment and demanded a meeting early in January to carry on the preparatory work that must precede actual limitation of armaments.

Now the meeting is over, and there is a two-day respite before the League of Nations council, or governing body, meets here Monday.

The council must decide, among other things, what to do about the intermittent and potentially chronic dispute between Poland and Lithuania over the Vilna district that Poland seized several years ago.

German Views.

Also Germany is expected to raise at the meeting, in some way, the question of revision of the Versailles peace treaty in her favor. She claims its surgical lopping of territory from her empire is one of the greatest menaces to peace.

But Russia interests everyone. She is not a member of the council, or even of the league, but she may play a leading role from back-stage at next week's important session.

Her delegates have played difficult roles with what generally is declared to be admirable skill. Russia's name has been on everyone's lips and in everyone's mind. There has been no burning of diplomatic red flares, and she has made no enemies. It is said generally that she is in better position diplomatically than she ever has been before.

A meeting between Maxim Litvinoff and Sir Austen Chamberlain might make all the difference between a Russia still outside the diplomatic pale and a new Russia, her bolshevik government a fully accepted fact, returning to take full part in the world's affairs on the world's side and not against it—or not with the world against her.

Hopeful Note.

The disarmament conference ended with a hopeful note.

Jonkheer London, Holland, presiding, and Paul Boncour, chief French delegates, jointly predicted that if all went well it would be possible to call a full disarmament meeting during 1928. It was indicated, however, that it would be the first of a series.

Nothing was said during the entire conference of recent predictions of league experts that it would take between 20 and 50 years really to disarm Europe.

The principal work of the conference was to appoint a security commission. The commission is charged with the task of drafting a form of treaty by which nations will guarantee help to each other in case one is attacked. If such a treaty could be drafted, it was argued it would cause any nation, however powerful, to pause before attacking another one until the League of Nations could mediate. Therefore, it was said, nations would have their fears of attack removed and would be willing to begin to disarm.

It was declared by French and other delegates to be illusory to hope that disarmament could precede establishment of real security.

Russia took occasion to disagree; and it is known that on that question at least Great Britain is with her, as is Germany—forced to disarm after her defeat in war.

Britain's cooperation may be difficult to obtain in effecting a security treaty. She fears it will be her navy that will do most of the work in the event of war.

From the American standpoint, one of the important features of the conference was the frank statement of the United States minister to Switzerland, Hugh R. Wilson, that America could cooperate in the work of the security commission.

The United States, Wilson said, must leave Europe to work out her own problems as America was working out the problems that arose before North Americans.

The statement did not cause surprise. Its importance mainly was in the clear-cut way in which America informed Europe—in diplomatic phrases—that she could handle by herself the wars she started herself. It was regarded as a development of a retort to complaints that the United States was late in entering the late war—that it was not America's war.

CHIEF OF MEXICAN REBELS EXECUTED

Laredo, Texas, December 3.—(AP)—General Francisco Bertani, rebel chieftain, captured by federal troops and taken to Minatitlan state of Vera Cruz, was executed last night, according to a statement issued by the Mexican presidential office and received today by the Laredo Times.

A. J. Dean's Trial In Bank Holdup Set for Monday

Decatur, Ga., December 3.—A. J. Dean will go on trial in DeKalb superior court Monday on a charge of robbery alleged to have taken place last December at the East Atlanta bank, when $7,500 was stolen. Judge John B. Hutchins will hear the case.

Dean was released Thursday morning from a year and a day sentence in the federal penitentiary for violation of the federal interstate motor vehicle act, was re-arrested by DeKalb county officers. Solicitor General Claude C. Smith, of the Stone Mountain circuit, stated that Dean was wanted by the authorities of the federal prison of San Quentin, Calif., for violating a parole and in Little Rock, Ark., for escaping prison.

Dean Thursday reiterated his story of the robbery, asserting that he and two companions, unnamed, entered the bank at East Atlanta and forced the cashier to bring the money from the vault.

Slander Letters Basis in Chicago Society Mystery

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—The Chicago society mystery, a suit filed by Mrs. Frank Townley Brown against Mr. and Mrs. Broer G. Dahlberg, unfolded today with the declaration that Mrs. Brown asks $200,000 because she was accused of writing "poison pen" letters about the Dahlbergs.

The letters, which Mrs. Brown contends Dahlberg and his wife said she wrote, were of a malicious nature. They were sent to newspapers and leaders in social and civic life.

On one occasion, ayers Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Dahlberg said to be former, a guest in the Dahlberg home: "See this thing on my arm. It was given to me by the Spanish king and it means that if there is anyone I want killed he'll have it done for me, and my husband has enough money to put you out of the way without you being missed. We both know you sent these letters and others."

"There's that Brown woman; you know she's the one that wrote all those anonymous letters about me," another allegation in the declaration is charged to Mrs. Dahlberg.

GUARD IN DOUBT OVER SEIZURE OF CANADIAN BOAT

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 3.—Coast guard officials were wondering tonight whether they had stepped off their beat in seizing the Canadian trawler Newton Bay, with more than $300,000 worth of liquor for the approaching Yuletide aboard.

The coast guard cutter Gresham steamed late Friday afternoon through heavy fog going out to take her place in the rum patrol. During the night she sighted the Newton Bay as the trawler, seemingly bent on a Christmas mission of good cheer, struggled along with decks nearly awash from her cargo of 4,000 cases of whisky, champagne and other contraband.

The trawler was sighted off Blue Point, L. I., and official versions of the distance from shore vary. The Gresham fired two shots across the trawler's bow and finally overtook her after a seven-mile chase some 12 miles from shore.

The Acadia Shipping company, Ltd., of Quebec, owns the Newton Bay. The 14 members of the crew, with Captain John S. Nauffts, of Halifax, were taken before United States Commissioner Rasquin, who ordered the master, chief engineer and mate held, and discharged the others.

FLORENCE BUSINESS WANTS SHOALS SOLD

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—An effort to obtain action by congress this winter on the Madden bill designed to carry out the bid of the American Cyanamid company for Muscle Shoals is being made by representatives of the Florence (Ala.) Chamber of Commerce.

C. W. Ashcraft and W. F. McFarland, the two representatives of the chamber, today called upon Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, the democratic house leader, but declined to discuss their conference further than to say they had solicited his support for the measure.

The two men said they were visiting personal friends in congress and presenting the situation as it was viewed by the citizens of Florence, which town is near the shoals properties.

Attendance Contest.

The Baraca-Philathea class attendance contest at the Center Hill Baptist church will close today and the winning class will be guests of the losing group at a banquet to be given. The Sunday school course being given by the Rev. W. F. Hinesley will close today.

Clearing Skies To Accompany Mercury Drop

Two days of incessant rain, broken in time to spare Georgia-Tech football fans a wetting, will be followed today with clearing skies and temperatures on a moderate decline, Weather Man C. F. von Herrmann predicts.

Wet weather varying from drizzle to downpour accounted for 3.15 inches of precipitation and dispersed a drouth that threatened winter cereals and spring plowing, Mr. von Herrmann said.

All day Saturday the mercury here clung to a low level, running from 38 to 40 degrees, while vast football throngs shivered and buttoned topcoats tightly against the promise of lowering clouds.

Fair and windy skies are expected this afternoon to start the temperature column on an upward trend again.

ROYAL AIR FORCE PILOT IS KILLED

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, December 3.—Another royal air force fatality occurred today when a plane carrying an observer and pilot, the latter named H. A. Lacy, crashed in a garden in Enfield. Both were killed immediately. The plane, which was believed to have belonged to the Hendre airdrome, was completely shattered and half buried in the soft earth.

SEARCH FOR CHILDREN, MOTHER IS EXTENDED

Asheville, N. C., December 3.—While Stella Wright, negro maid, was being questioned by officials of the juvenile court, police and county officials today extended their search for Mrs. G. Wallace Bryant and her two children who she is accused of having kidnaped from in front of a hospital here last Wednesday.

The negro officials said today, was employed by Mrs. Bryant prior to the time Juvenile Judge Carl B. Hyatt ordered the Bryant children, Marjorie, six, and Frances, four, taken from their mother. About a month after the court action, the negro was employed as a nurse by Mrs. Addie A. Floyd, in whose care the children were placed, and it was she who was in charge of the children Wednesday evening when Mrs. Bryant took them.

Police today telegraphed descriptions of Mrs. Bryant and the children to police at Atlanta, Philadelphia and Detroit. Mrs. Bryant was described as a striking blonde with bobbed hair and large brown eyes and is about five feet one inch tall. She was described as being handsomely dressed.

Mrs. Bryant and her husband became estranged some months ago, and Bryant, a nephew of Henry Ford and a patient in a sanitarium here, sued Henry Westall, wealthy Asheville clubman, for $100,000, alleging alienation of Mrs. Bryant's affections. Mrs. Bryant and Westall denied the charges. The juvenile court after a hearing last summer, however, decided Mrs. Bryant was not the proper person to care for the children and took charge of them. They were to be permitted to see their father daily and their mother once a week.

On Wednesday afternoon the nurse took the children to the hospital to see their father. As she left Mrs. Bryant met her and asked her to take a note to Bryant. When the negro left Mrs. Bryant entered a taxicab with the children and left. Leaving the cab in front of a hotel she and the children have not been seen since.

Bryant today declined to make public the contents of the note used by Mrs. Bryant to lure the maid away. He said he wished as little publicity as possible.

WHEELING DENTIST MADE DEFENDANT IN $100,000 SUIT

Wheeling, W. Va., December 3.—(AP)—Dr. William K. Kelly, wealthy Wheeling dentist, was named defendant in a $100,000 suit for alienation of affections today by William T. Kirchner, an official of the Wheeling Mold & Foundry company, who charged the dentist and Mrs. Kirchner were arrested together in a mountain cabin and a fine imposed.

Kirchner declared Dr. Kelly transferred his affections to Mrs. Kirchner after the dentist's wife obtained a verdict for $12,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth Fink, to whom, it was charged, Dr. Kelly made love six years ago. Mrs. Fink and Mrs. Kirchner are sisters.

CINCINNATI SOUTHERN ADDITIONS PLANNED

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Applications which would result in extensive additions and betterments to the Cincinnati Southern railroad were laid before the interstate commerce commission today by the Southern railway system, which leases the Cincinnati Southern from the city of Cincinnati.

The applications explained that under agreements made the Southern railway proposed to extend its lease on the Cincinnati Southern from the year 1966 to the year 2026. In consideration of its extension, the city, which now obtains an annual rental of $1,000,000, will be given an increased rental on a sliding scale ranging from $1,250,000 per year to $1,700,000 per year, which will be the sum payable during the last years of the lease.

When the lease extension is approved, the Southern said, it would be enabled to go forward with its extension of the Cincinnati Southern rails from Williamstown to Danville, both in Kentucky, at a cost of $13,700,000.

DALTON CITY RACE IS WELL CONTESTED

Dalton, Ga., December 3.—Candidates for city offices, in the municipal election which will be held here Wednesday, December 14, are unusually active on the home stretch, and considerable interest has been aroused.

Needlework Guild Here Offer

GUMP DOLLARS CAN BE LEFT PROFITABLY IN ATLANTA

To Help Andy Dispense Billion

One billion dollars!

Yep, as Andy Gump has it, "that's a lotta money."

And the philanthropic Mr. Gump, with his billion dollars to dispense to charity, has been offered an excellent opportunity to leave some of the too-many dollars right here in Atlanta. Mr. Gump received the following communication from the Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild of America:

"Mr. Andy Gump:

"The citizens of Atlanta are on the qui vive since the announcement that a portion of your fabulous wealth is to be distributed in our city. At a recent meeting of the Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild of America, the members agreed that you would be vitally interested in the scope of this organization.

"As you doubtless know, the guild each year sends useful graments to 40 charitable institutions throughout Atlanta, including every sect and color. These garments are obtained by solicitation, two garments, or the equivalent in money from an individual constituting membership in the guild, and it is a 100 per cent charitable organization, having no overhead expense.

"Now, we realize, Mr. Gump, that you are far too busy a general to purchase garments yourself, but if you would be big-hearted and give us just a few of the bags stored in your vault, we would endeavor to relieve you of some of the harrowing anxiety attendant upon the disposal of your marvelous wealth."

Eight Sailors Rescued.

Galveston, Texas, December 3.—(AP) Eight men were rescued from the disabled schooner Marston by the Japanese steamer Calcutta Maru, said radio advices received by the agents of the ship here today. The Calcutta Maru is due to reach here Monday. Time and location of the rescue was not given. No record of the schooner Marston is available here.

ANTI-GOVERNMENT RIOT STAGED BY PORTUGUESE

Madrid, December 3.—(United News.)—Violent anti-government disturbances occurred in Lisbon Thursday, it was learned today, during the celebration of the anniversary of Portuguese independence.

Students rioted and shouted "down with the dictator" when the automobile of Premier Carmona passed them.

One hundred students were arrested in clashes with the police.

GENERAL IBANEZ, CHILE PRESIDENT, WEDS IN SANTIAGO

Santiago, Chile, December 3.—(AP) General Ibanez, president of Chile, was married today to Senorita Graciela Letelier Velasco, daughter of Ricardo Letelier, in the first wedding of an executive in office in the history of the country.

The couple were married at the Church of St. Augustine in the presence of members of the diplomatic body and of high officials. Great crowds thronged the streets to watch the procession after the ceremony.

Pope Pius sent a benediction through Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state.

COOLIDGE INCREASES DUTY ON CHERRIES

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The duty on cherries, sulphured or in brine, stemmed or pitted, was increased by President Coolidge today from two to three cents a pound under the flexible provisions of the tariff act.

NEW JERSEY FIRM SELECTS ATLANTA

Selection of Atlanta for southern department headquarters of Johnson & Johnson, one of the world's largest manufacturers of absorbent cotton and gauze and medicinal supplies, was disclosed with the consummation of a lease on a big commercial building from the Massell Realty company to start at the first of the year, according to announcement by Fred T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The aggregate rental involved in the lease is $180,000.

The southern department will include executive offices and warehouse facilities for distribution purposes in serving the states east of Texas. James E. Churchwell, now a member of the sales organization at the home office of Johnson & Johnson, in New Brunswick, N. J., will be in charge of the new department.

Details of the lease were given out by S. A. Massell, secretary of the Massell Realty company. The Massell company is now erecting a three-story brick structure to be known as 64, 66 and 68 Walker street, according to specifications furnished by the firm of Johnson & Johnson, which leased the property from the Massell company for a term of 20 years at an annual rental of $8,000 for the first 10 years and $10,000 for the succeeding 10 years, Mr. Massell stated. The building will contain approximately 20,000 square feet of floor space. It is located on a site measuring 75 by 140 feet in the center of an important industrial section of Atlanta and served by shipping facilites of the Southern railroad. The structure is expected to be completed by January 1, with the lessors to take immediate possession of it, Mr. Massell said.

Particular significance is attached to the establishment of southeastern headquarters here in view of the fact that Johnson & Johnson has just completed and is now operating near Gainesville, Ga., one of the most complete and largest mills of its kind in the country, manufacturing medical and hospital supplies. The mill and mill village near Gainesville represent an expenditure in the state of Georgia of more than $6,000,000. The plant itself is valued at $3,500,000.

In commenting on the important move, Mr. Churchwell remarked, "We are establishing the southern department so we may be of greater service to our southern business affiliations. We will be able to give closer sales cooperation and quicker delivery service. With shipments going from Atlanta instead of from New Brunswick, dealers will get the benefit of lower transportation costs."

Edward Hefner, of the home office, will accompany Mr. Churchwell to Atlanta to become office manager, it was stated.

In authorizing the announcement of the southern headquarters for Johnson & Johnson in Atlanta, Georgia D. Johnson, of the firm, made this statement: "The national advertising campaign of the city of Atlanta has kept the city and state of Georgia before our officials and executives."

FOLDER TELLING OF GEORGIA SWEET POTATOES IS USED

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, cooperating with the state bureau of markees in an effort to increase the use of the Georgia sweet potato, is enclosing in every letter sent out by the executive officers of the chamber an attractive folder concerning the sweet potato.

This circular names the sweet potato as "Georgia's Golden Yield Crop." It tells of the high nutritive value of the sweet potato and the many different ways in which the sweet potato may be prepared, stressing its low cost, which places it within the reach of all.

George West, president of the chamber of commerce, is deeply interested in promoting the use of Georgia products within her borders and beyond. This is in high accord with the state bureau of markets in establishing Georgia farmers as exporters of food products.

Presidents of chambers of commerce in other large cities in the state will be called upon to cooperate in this movement.

picture portrays what actually happens in many instances where lump sum payments are made to beneficiaries by trust companies, and emphasises necessity of income payments of monies replacing incomes, it was announced.

Two well-known New England bankers appear in the cast, which otherwise is composed of professionals. Robert Clark, a star of the "Vagabond King," takes the role of insurance counsellor, while Phil Crane, the family head in the picture, is played by George Van Beusen, often called Milton Sill's double. The wife is played by Muriel Campbell, who has a prominent part in the production of "Broadway."

E. F. KEHELEY TO FACE TRIAL EARLY IN YEAR

E. F. Keheley, Marietta street restaurant proprietor, who was indicted Friday by the Fulton county grand jury on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Loren Leister, 12, will go on trial in Fulton superior court early in January, according to announcement Saturday from the solicitor's office.

Keheley is alleged to have fired the shot which on Halloween night entered the brain of the Leister youth. After a valiant fight which continued for a month at a local hospital, the child succumbed Wednesday. He was passing the restaurant with some of his boy friends when the pistol of Keheley is said to have been discharged inadvertently during a quarrel with a friend.

The defendant has been held in Fulton tower in default of $10,000 bond since the shooting on a charge of assault with intent to murder. Following the child's death he was indicted on the murder charge.

COUNCIL GETS FOOLEY SCHOOL BID ON MONDAY

Approval of the bid of the Howard P. Foley company electrical bid Monday by city council will assure early start on the first five schools to be constructed from bond funds, according to predictions Saturday.

The bid has the approval of the Atlanta board of education, the bond commission and will go to council with a favorable recommendation of the school committee of council.

Other routine matters also will be considered by council at Monday's session.

Members of council have intimated that the Foley bid will be accepted, and that work will be begun Monday or Tuesday on the first of the projects by the Palmer-Spivey company, of Augusta.

Projects involved are an addition to Hoke Smith Junion High school, new buildings for Ormewood, Capitol View, Stanton and Davis schools.

Poker Parties at White House Charged

CHARLES FORBES DECLARES HARDING HOST OF OCCASION

Former Head of Veterans' Bureau Describes Scene, Remission of Jack Johnson's Fine.

HARDING'S DOCTOR DECLARED MEDDLER

Forbes Asserts That He Saw $75,000, Which Jess Smith Said Belonged to Daugherty.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—The New York World will publish tomorrow an article purporting to reveal the "inside story of the Ohio gang" and intimate details of the Harding administration, written by Colonel Charles R. Forbes, former head of the United States veterans' bureau, recently released after serving part of a two-year prison sentence for defrauding the government on hospital contracts.

Forbes' story broadly sketches the Harding regime from the pre-senatorial days of Harding until his death. Covering his Washington experiences, Forbes tells of a poker party at the white house, describes $75,000 in bills of large denomination lying on a table in the department of justice offices, declares Dr. Sawyer, Harding's personal physician, proved a "pernicious meddler" in governmental affairs, and asserts that the late president finally was "betrayed by his friends."

White House Poker Game.

Describing the white house poker game, Forbes writes:

"The poker party was held the following evening in the library of the white house. It was like many similar parties held there. We played at a rectangular table in the north nd of the room. On this particular occasion the president sat at one end and Will Hays, who was then the postmaster general, at the other. The others there were Albert Lasker, at that time chairman of the shipping board; Harry Daugherty, Ned McLean, Mrs. McLean and Mrs. Harding. Mrs. Harding did not play—she often sat with us at poker games, but never played. I remember that it was very hot and that Albert Lasker took his coat off, displaying red suspenders two inches wide. I won $370, and Will Hays won. The losers all paid up promptly.

"During the game Ned McLean announced that Jack Johnson the prize fighter, was to be discharged from the federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, and either Ned or Albert Lasker exclaimed, 'Why, his old mother used to work for me and he has a fine of $1,000 hanging over him and can't pay it.' Ned McLean said, 'Albert, I'll give $500 and you give $500 and we will pay his fine.' The president spoke up: 'Don't let that worry you, I'll remit the fine,' and the game went on."

Received No Spoils.

As to the late president himself, Forbes declares he is "satisfied" that Harding received none of the spoils of alleged administration graft, and was honest in performance of his duties.

"Warren G. Harding," Forbes writes, "was a much-misunderstood

Part of the Football-Hungry Mob

Above is a part of the huge crowd of 37,800 football fans who paid something like $87,000 to see Tech beat Georgia on a mud-soaked gridiron at Grant field Saturday. This is but a small portion of the immense crowd and, fortunately for those who read their Sunday Constitution early in the morning, this picture cannot reproduce the noise that issued from this crowd.

Game Is Hard and Cleanly Fought Despite Slippery Field; Athenians' Passing Attack Is Futile and Engineers Turn Tables By Scoring With Aerial Attack in Second Quarter.

STUMPY, ALTHOUGH PAINFULLY INJURED, MAKES TOUCHDOWN

With Playing Conditions Contest Develops Into Kicking Duel With Both Sides Playing Cautiously; Fumbles Are Costly to Yale Conquerors; Sportsmanship of Both Teams Gets High Praise.

BY DICK HAWKINS.

On a field ankle deep in mud a Gold and White guillotine swung its mud-spattered blade and beheaded the thousand-pated dragon of Georgia. The blade swung twice and the dope was blasted by a 12-0 score with the Tornado riding the back of the headless Bulldog.

In the mud of Grant field Saturday the seven fronts of Tech totally eclipsed the thousand backs of the Red Terror. That battalion of death thrust no fear into the hearts of Tech's jackets and the Red Terror gave way before the Yellow Peril.

It was a game fitting the occasion. The greatest crowd in the history of southern athletics; puddles of water on the field reflecting the gray skies and brighter colors of raincoats and ribbons; cheering sections in a frenzy from starting whistle to final horn and withal the stage set for the greatest drama of the football age.

Uninviting Scene.

That stage was set, a muddy, uninviting stage with lowering clouds for a setting, and the Tornado of Tech played the role of victor while the red and black of Georgia went to defeat with the fangs of the Bulldog bared for more punishment.

That team of destiny simply met the hand of fate all clad in gold and black and mud. A hand that would not be stayed and was not. Captain Ed Crowley and his mates took the Dixie title and the Constitution trophy by force.

The game was a monument to sportsmanship. Two bitter rivals met in a field of mud and water and fought for one hour without a vestige of "dirty football." They fought like demons of hades until they were taken from the fray, but they fought fair.

After the game was over the final whistle saw the blocky form of Bob Randolph sag and rest on the shoul-

$2,000,000 LEASE BY AUTO LAUNDRY ON PONCE DE LEON

Gillespie System to Open Huge Plant for Washing of Cars; 99-Year Term Taken.

The Gillespie Auto Laundry System, Inc., big national automobile service company with headquarters in Chicago, has leased the southwest corner of Ponce de Leon avenue and Juniper street, adjoining the Ponce de Leon apartment building, for a term of 99 years, involving an aggregate rental of $2,000,000 and construction of a huge service station, to be the first of its kind east of the Rocky mountains. The lease was negotiated between the Chicago firm and Thornwell Properties, Inc., owner of the corner, through Edgar H. Sims and O. D. Bartlet, of the Haas & Howell real estate department, agents in the deal.

Among active directors of the automobile concern are such nationally-known figures as John D. Hertz, who is chairman of the board of the Yellow Truck and Coach Manufacturing company; Albert D. Lasker, chairman of the board of Lord & Thomas and Logan company; Will H. Hays, czar of the moving picture industry; Edward N. D'Ancona, general counsel; E. H. Klein, vice president; Leonard S. Florsheim, president, and Mr. Gillespie, vice president.

Announcement of the transaction was made Saturday night to a representative of The Constitution by B. K. Gillespie, vice president of the con-

HOUSE COMMITTEE CUT IS FAVORED

Republican Leaders Decide on Program Calling for Elimination of Sixteen Bodies.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—House republican leaders today approved a plan for abolishing 16 house committees and creating one new one.

The proposal will be called up in the house shortly after congress convenes and is expected to be put through without serious opposition as democratic leaders have acquiesced in the move.

The action was taken today at a meeting of the house republican committee on committees. The committees to be abolished are those on alcoholic liquor traffic, railways and canals, woman suffrage, industrial arts and expositions, mileage and the 11 expenditure committees.

The new committee to be created will be known as one on expenditures and will care for work heretofore performed by the 11 separate committees.

Chairman Snell, of the house rules committee, said that membership on nearly a dozen other house committees would be increased and that under the proposed arrangement various members of the committees to be abolished, many of which had held but few meetings in recent years, could receive assignments on active committees.

"This suggestion is made on the ground that the majority of these committees have not had any legislation referred to them or have not had a meeting in several years," Snell declared. "They are absolutely dead wood as far as the organization and work of the house is concerned."

Clerk Errs; Two Prisoners Gain Freedom

Mistake in Writing Up Sentences a "Lucky Break" for Pair at Pen.

The error of a clerk of the United States district court in writing up their sentences made free men of William Dates and John Murry, late inmates of the Atlanta federal penitentiary, on Saturday.

Ten years were lopped from each man's sentence by Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley in granting writs of habeas corpus filed by the prisoners, who showed that instead of writing their sentences as five years on each of three counts, the clerk made the sentences read as for 15 years in one term.

Dates and Murry were convicted in Raleigh, N. C., on charges of robbing a postoffice, and were received at the prison in December of 1923, which, with 480 days off of a five-year sentence for good behavior, would make their sentences on the first count expire now.

MAN WHO KILLED BABY WITH KNIFE PLEADS INSANITY

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—William Goeschell, 30, an electrical engineer, testified today he couldn't remember the events that occurred between his purchase of a paring knife and his recovery of consciousness in a hospital an hour later.

Between those events he stabbed his wife and three-year-old daughter and slashed his own throat. The baby died and the father is being tried for her murder. The defense claims insanity.

Goeschell related a list of domestic difficulties, one of which was because he found his wife in a compromising position with her cousin, German Gaul.

"Was your child pretty—and did you love her?" his attorney asked.

The father tried to reply, but sobs smothered his words. He leaned forward, crying. The wife, too, wept. The jury, even the judge, felt the emotional strain. Court was recessed.

AUTO OF CHIEF INJURES NEGRO

Victim Slightly Hurt, Refuses Aid; Many Other Minor Injuries Make Up Day's Accident Toll.

Chief of Police James L. Beavers early Saturday night while driving a city car west on Decatur street struck Robert Horton, negro of 174 Markham street, and slightly injured him. The negro refused to go to a hospital and stated that he was not injured.

According to a report filed by Lieutenant J. W. Blazer, the negro youth walked directly into the side of Chief Beavers' car.

Miss Sallie Schuford, of Decatur, Ga., was treated at Grady hospital Saturday night for slight injuries received when struck down by a truck at Five Points. Will Heard, negro of 694 Stonewall street, was driving the truck and crossed a street intersection against a red signal light. A case of reckless driving was made against the negro by Patrolman W. A. Buck.

Billie Whitehead, 12, of 395 1-2 Peachtree street, was taken to Grady hospital with a badly bruised left thigh he received when a bicycle on which he was riding collided with a light touring car at Ivy street and Exchange place early Saturday night. The car was driven by George Smith, negro, of Armour station. Patrolman J. D. Williams investigated.

J. R. Meredith, of 794 Ponce de Leon avenue, was shaken up and bruised when an automobile he was driving collided with a roadster at Hunter street and Piedmont avenue. Mr. Meredith reported that the roadster had no lights burning. The name of the driver was not learned.

W. L. Myers, of 482 Crew street, was shaken up and bruised when a truck he was driving collided with an-

Cincinnati, Oh o, December 3.—(AP) Doubt that George Remus would testify crept into his murder trial for the first time today.

It appeared when George Connors, Remus' ally in a gigantic bootleg syndicate, concluded a four-hour recital covering a two-year period when his former leader heard a steady stream of calumny against the wife he slew October 6.

Connors testified he himself first made Remus aware of many of the attacks upon Mrs. Remus' fidelity, heard others tell him tales now and

As Tech Defeats Georgia

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Fory thousand lunatics, screaming, shouting, squirming, weeping and laughing—forty thousand lunatics scuffling, shoving, dancing, fighting, rolling over on the ground and jumping high in the air. Forty thousand lunatics, released in one gigantic stadium, each inspired to greater lunacy than his fellow, that is the picture presented to the Man From Mars at Grant field Saturday afternoon when the Tech "Jackets" wrecked Georgia's football team in their annual battle.

Hats and coats flung in the air; screaming sirens; umbrellas waving like cornfields in a gale; banners, ribbons, colors, flowers, pennants, bunting in a gigantic kaleidoscope of hues and tints. Bands playing, students yelling, cheer leaders in exhaustion; a quarter of a mile of people. A quarter of a mile of raving maniacs. Compared to this pandemomium becomes as docile as the Thursday Study club. Bedlam becomes as peaceful as a vestryman's meeting. Chaos becomes order and frenzy becomes the mild lecture of a professor of the dead languages.

In weather clear and cold that came after three days of incessant rain, the enormous crowd heeded not the elements but alternately rose and fell in great waves as one team or the other scored an advantage. Now a tremendous upheaval of the Red and Black section. Not a counter demonstration from the Gold and White. On and on, for two or more long

Church Sanctions Marriage of Sexton's Daughter

Paris, December 3.—(AP)—A young girl's happiness is more important than an elderly gentleman's comfort—even if the gentleman is a bishop—it was decided today by the court of referees at Montpelier.

The trouble started when love, laughing loudly at locksmiths, broke the lock of the bishop's garage and enticed his chauffeur to a tryst with the dark-eyed daughter of a sexton.

Cupid's theft was doubly annoying to Bishop H. Mignen, according to the tale told the court by the sexton, as the prelate was sure he could not get a better chauffeur and equally sure that the girl, Mlle. Duval could not get a worse husband.

The bishop accordingly insructed Arch-Priest Yaulbom, of Saint Peters church to frown upon the marriage and to tell the sexton to refuse his consent. Papa Duvan respected the bishop's authority, but desired his daughter's happiness above all things on this earth, he said.

"I cannot live without him," from the daughter was quickly followed by, "Bless you, my children," from the father.

The bishop retaliated by dismissing the sexton, who appealed to the court of referees.

Duval insisted to the court that even if he had wanted to he could not have put insurmountable obstacles in the path of the tumultuous love of his daughter for the chauffeur. The fact that the bishop was forced to sacrifice his comfortable daily drive, the sexton argued, was no reason why he should lose his job.

The court upheld his thesis by awarding him money damages for his abrupt dismissal.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—An unusually heavy list of nominations, including the names of a number of officials now holding key positions in the government service under recess appointments will be placed before the senate for confirmation next week after the convening of congress. Hundreds of appointments of postmasters, promotions of army, navy, marine and coast guard officers, and nominations of junior consular and diplomatic officers will be presented for ratification.

Among the important vacancies which President Coolidge has not filled by recess appointment during the congressional recess is that of a successor to the late Leonard Wood as governor general of the Philippines. There is no indication that a nomination for this post will go to the capitol next week, although it is expected that a selection will be announced soon.

Morrow Unconfirmed.

The department of state leads government agencies in the number of appointments which may precipitate spirited debate in the senate. On its list is the selection of Dwight W. Morrow, a former partner in the banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., to be ambassador to Mexico. Robert E. Olds, promoted last May to be under secretary of state from an assistant secretaryship, was subject to considerable criticism during the last session of congress on account of the administration policy in Mexico and Nicaragua.

There have been some indications that opposition might develop to confirmation of Joseph C. Grew as ambassador to Turkey on the ground that since he had been one of the chief negotiators of the Lausanne treaty which failed of ratification by the senate, he should not be chosen for the Constantinople post. Administration officials, however, believe there has been a change in this sentiment and that Grew's nomination will be confirmed without delay.

Johnson Unopposed.

The appointments of Nelson T. Johnson, the state department's chief Far Eastern expert, as an assistant secretary of state and Noble Brandon Judah, new ambassador to Cuba, are not expected to arouse antagonism in the senate.

In the treasury two assistant secretaries, Seymour Lowman, of New York, in charge of prohibition, and Henry Herrick Bond, of Massachusetts, in charge of fiscal affairs and taxation, are serving under recess appointment. Lowman succeeded Lincoln C. Andrews.

While there has been no signs of formidable opposition to their selections, a bitter fight in the senate is forecast over confirmation of the appointments of Eugene Meyer, Jr., as chairman, and George R. Cooksey and Floyd R. Harrison, as members of the farm board. Meyer formerly was director of the war finance corporation and various senators have announced their opposition to his transfer to the farm loan board.

Commerce Department.

One assistant secretary and three members of the radio comission will be the commerce department's chief contribution to the confirmation list. The post of assistant secretary has gone to Walter F. Brown, of Ohio, while Orestes H. Caldwell, of New York; Sam Pickard, of Kansas, and Harold A. Lafount, of Utah, are radio board commission members whose appointments must be passed on by the senate. In addition President Coolidge is expected shortly to announce a successor to the late W. H. G. Bullard, who became chairman of the commission on its organization.

A number of judicial nominations, including those of two federal circuit and eight district judges also will go to the senate.

Haldeman-Julius and Wife Would "Debunk" Marriage

NEW WEDDING PROTEST AGAINST PRECEDENT

Kansas City, Mo., December 3.—(United News.)—A protest against established marriage ceremonies was enacted here tonight in the remarriage of Mr. and Mrs. E. Haldeman-Julius, Girard, Kans., publishers and authors.

Their first marriage—which, according to a statement made several days ago by Haldeman-Julius, was performed after the birth of their daughter, Josephine—was a conventional church ceremony.

Tonight's ceremony, Haldeman-Julius said, was "minus all the bunk and hokum which characterizes the usual marriage."

The remarriage was performed by the Rev. L. M. Birkhead, liberal pastor of the All-Souls Unitarian church, who also performed the "companionate marriage ceremony" of Audrey Roselle, university student, and Josephine Haldeman-Julius last week.

The phrase "whom God hath joined together," was omitted, as were other parts of the usual ceremony which the principals regarded as "superstitious."

Explaining the remarriage of himself and his wife, Haldeman-Julius said:

"Since this is the age of the debunker, we see no reason why so-called sacred things should be allowed to carry their excess baggage of bunk and hokum.

"I do not believe the old fundamentalist marriage was a sacrament. It was not made in heaven. God didn't 'join us together.' The other features of our first wedding were as bunk-laden. My wife did not come to me as a chattel.

"We had no thought of being husband and wife as long as we lived, should it happen that we ceased loving each other. But we went through the ceremony because we knew of no better one at the time."

Since then, he said, they had learned that that form of "poetical bunk" was unnecessary and that it was possible to be married without having to "swallow liberal doses of hokum and plain foolishness."

Mrs. Haldeman-Julius said she believed a marriage should be recognized as a contract rather than a sacrament—without "barbaric bending of knees to explode theological dogmas and mystical notions."

ROME BUYS LAND OF LEGION POST; WILL MAKE PARK

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Purchase of the fair grounds from Shanklin-Attaway post, American legion, by the city of Rome for $8,250 was consummated when payment for the property was made by the city to officers of the post.

The city of Rome purchased the fair grounds to be used as a playground and recreation park and it is the intention of officers of the city to make it one of the show places of northwest Georgia.

The Legion has owned the property for three years, taking it over from the farm bureau and has made money on it with three county fairs and other projects.

Work on beautifying the grounds and repairing buildings and putting in apparatus for playgrounds will be started by the city at an early date. The river bank is to be beautified, while tennis courts and baseball diamonds are also to be built.

QUARTER MILLION FIRE AT GEORGETOWN

Georgetown, S. C., December 3.—(AP)—Damage estimated at approximately $250,000 was done here today by a fire which destroyed a large part of the plant of the Brooklyn Cooperage company.

Property destroyed included $27,000 worth of barrel stave material, brick and steel kilns and valuable special machinery.

BRITISH CAPTAIN HELD FOR RANSOM

Shanghai, December 3.—(AP)—Chinese bandits who kidnaped Captain Lalor, of the British steamship Siangtan after attacking the boat near Ichang on the Yangtze river, threatened to kill him if any attempt is made to round them up. They have reduced the amount of ransom they are demanding from $100,000 to $80,000.

The British authorities, despite the bandits' threats, entertain hopes of effecting Captain Lalor's release shortly. They have demanded of General Yang Sen, who controls the affected section of the Yangtze, the immediate dispatch of soldiers to free the captain.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Until the people shall have reversed their decision relative to prohibition, every official is bound by oath to uphold the constitution and refrain from anything hindering its enforcement, F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, declared tonight.

Discussing the address last night of Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, in which he asserted he saw no reason why any group of voters should not oppose the prohibition laws, Mr. McBride said that while any group had the right to oppose any law, neither citizen nor official have the right to suggest or encourage violation of the law.

"In a government by the people any group has the right to agitate for the repeal of any statutory or constitutional law," he said. "But so long as any constitutional law or any statutory law is in effect the obligation of the citizen to obey and the obligation of the official to enforce the law remains.

"Any one who agitates the right of either citizens or officials to oppose honest administration of any law is contributing toward the disintegration of our form of government," he added. "If those who hate prohibition are conceded the right to oppose the operation and honest enforcement of this law, other groups which hate other laws must be conceded the same right.

"I do not deny Governor Smith or any official the right to his opinion on the value of prohibition as a solution to the liquor problem, but I do insist that Governor Smith and every official by virtue of his oath of office has assumed the obligation to support the law so long as it be in effect.

"As things now stand," he concluded, "prohibition is the supreme law of the land made so by the most decisive and overwhelming expression of popular will ever recorded."

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—President and Mrs. Coolidge probably will dine on royal beefsteak during the Christmas holidays.

The New Bismarck hotel of Chicago, purchaser of "California Stamp," grand champion steer at the International Live Stock exposition, which closed today, plans to send the president the choicest cut of steak from the champion. It is to arrive at the white house in time for the Christmas menus.

The animal, bred and grown by the University of California, sold on the hoof for $2.35 a pound.

Secretarial Jobs For Army, Navy School Grads Hit

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—A bill to bar West Point and Annapolis graduates from holding either the post of secretary of war or secretary of the navy will be introduced in congress next week by Representative McClintic, democrat, Oklahoma, on the house naval committee.

He said today that the founders of the nation had taken "great care to provide that a civilian representative of the rank and file of the people should be at the head of each governmental department" to serve as a check against a possible improper balance. The late Secretary of War Weeks, was an Annapolis graduate, McClintic said, and that it will be "remembered in the Mitchell case that he took a position against the viewpoint of at least 90 per cent of those who finance the government."

"Secretary Wilbur, another graduate of Annapolis, has recently established a precedent," he added, "that anyone in the service giving out truthful information of interest to the public, concerning inside conditions will be punished. How fortunate this nation would have been if it could have had a Magruder on the inside of the navy department when the 'Teapot Dome Lase was secretly made."

New York, December 3.—(AP)—Two $300,000 liquor seizures, one at Elizabeth, N. J., and another by a coast guard cutter off Blue Point, L. I., were reported today.

Eight men were arrested in the Elizabeth raid and federal agents seized a distilling plant, equipment and stock. Motor trucks laden with alleged alcohol led police to the plant.

The steam trawler Newton Bay, said to be owned by the Acadia Shipping Company, Ltd., of Quebec, was brought to anchor in the lower bay by the coast guard cutter Gresham after a chase of seven miles. Her cargo included 4,000 sacks of assorted liquors and champagne.

Geneva, December 3.—(AP)—Conclusion of a general pact of security for continental Europe, including Russia, was proposed by Joseph Paul Boncour, of France, tonight as a solution of the problem of putting Europe on a permanent peace basis and as a foundation for disarmament.

M. Paul-Boncour discussed the question tonight with Anatole Lunacharski, of the Russian delegation to the preparatory disarmament commission after adjournment of the commission. After the interview the French statesman informed the Associated Press that Foreign Minister Briand, who is due here tomorrow morning, will meet Maxim Litvinoff, head of the Russian delegation, tomorrow afternoon. The Russians have postponed their departure until Monday in order to permit conversations which the French hope may also include Sir Austin Chamberlain, the British secretary for foreign affairs, who is also en route to Geneva.

It is considered probable that M. Briand will broach the continental pact idea to Litvinoff, although the French realize great difficulty in the way of acceptance will be the soviet aversion to accepting obligations with so-called capitalistic powers.

Compulsory arbitration of all disputes, it is pointed out, necessarily would be the basis of the pact with guarantees of its fulfillment.

M. Paul-Boncour said he was told by the Russians that the masses of people in Russia genuinely fear an aggressive war upon them by the powers of western Europe.

The Frenchman said he replied that a security pact was the best way to remove this fear due to the expressed desire of the British not to undertake commitments on the continent in addition to those prescribed by the Locarno agreements and the British membership in the League of Nations.

Albany, N. Y., December 3.—(AP)—Despite the personal appeal of Governor Smith at the annual convention dinner for a more liberal interpretation of the rights of citizens to organize in opposition to the eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, the New York State League of Women Voters closed its 1927 meeting today after going on record in favor of strict prohibition and continued law enforcement.

Soon after the league acted favorably on the prohibition measures, which developed considerable opposition for the first time in the history of the organization, the delegates heard former Governor Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania, suggest that Governor Smith be named to press the cause of government regulation of electrical power, because of his state water power development policies.

The former Pennsylvania executive, speaking at a luncheon meeting which brought the convention to a close, declared that he believed Governor Smith to have wide state and national influence. He also praised the New York executive for his favorable attitude toward state development of hydro-electric resources.

Two proposals favoring prohibition were adopted. The first, a brief declaration in favor of a state enforcement act, elicited only about ten "noes" out of 125 delegates on the convention floor, but the second measure occasioned an hour of heated debate and was passed by a vote of 74 to 21. Several amendments proposing elimination of reference to the eighteenth amendmnt and other changes were defeated by overwhelming majorities.

The resolution finally adopted was not the same one which provoked Governor Smith's speech at the dinner, it developed during the day. The governor, when he quoted from a resolution last night, said that it had originated with the Nassau county branch of the league. Officials of the league today asserted that the Nassau county branch had not adopted a law enforcement resolution since just after the repeal of the Mullan-Gage state enforcement act in 1923, and it must have been that one which the governor read.

VARE AND SMITH SUPPORTERS MEET

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Conference after conference dealing with impending contest over the seating of Senators-elect Frank L. Smith, of Illinois, and William S. Vare, of Pennsylvania, were held today at the capitol, but if any agreements or decisions came out of them they were well concealed.

Republican leaders were concerned chiefly with an attempt to bring about a delay of the fight until after organization of the senate. There was no indication, however, that either Smith or Vare had consented to stand aside without a protest until organization could be perfected.

Under the usual procedure of the senate, the names of Smith and Vare would be called in their alphabetical order along with them of other senators-elect, Senator Norris, of Nebraska, a leader of the western independent republican group, will offer a resolution to refer the case of each to the privileges and elections committee for further investigation of expenditures in the Illinois and Pennsylvania senatorial primaries.

In the absence of any agreement for delay, debate on these resolutions would begin immediately after the other senators-elect had been sworn in and since this would continue for several days organization of the senate would be held up for that length of time with the legislative machinery of congress at a standstill in the meantime.

Friends of both Smith and Vare were busy today considering both the methods of procedure and the strengthening of their lines. They believed they would be able to make some accessions to their ranks, but still were doubtful that they could obtain the majority necessary to bring about the temporary seating of the republicans.

Deny Refusal Plans.

There were various rumors about possible reprisals against some other senators-elect, but those directing the fights on behalf of Smith and Vare said if there were any such moves on foot they were not responsible for them.

POLES SEEK FAST LEAGUE ACTION ON LITH IMPASSE

Warsaw, Poland, December 3.—(AP) While the Polish government will not countenance the organization of any coup against Premier Waldemaras, of Lithuania, on Polish soil before the league's decision, Marshal Pilsudski, head of the Polish government, it is asserted, will brook no needless delay.

If M. Zaleski, the Polish foreign minister, who now is in Geneva, should report that it is the league's intention to postpone its decision on the Polish-Lithuanian controversy, thus refusing to accept responsibility, Pilsudski himself will go at once to Geneva to impress on the league the necessity of a prompt decision as the only way to avoid possible trouble if the present abnormal conditions continue.

The president of the General Motors Research Corporation, in a recent article, points out that there is enough energy in a gallon of gasoline, if converted 100% in mechanical energy, to run a four-cylinder car 450 miles. Much experimenting has been done to convert this latent power into mechanical energy, but at present the annual waste in gasoline is appalling. In an effort to conserve gasoline and to increase motor efficiency, Mr. Oliver, noted automotive engineer has perfected an invention that slashes gas costs to the minimum. He is launching a campaign to equip every car with this wonderful invention, and as he is now appointing agents, is willing to send a sample for trial. For full particulars write Mr. Oliver today in care of The Whirlwind Mfg. Co., 999, 2220 E. Third St., Milwaukee, Wisc.—(adv.)

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Alabama Portland Cement Company announces a reduction of twenty cents per barrel in the mill base of its Birmingham plant, effective December fifth.

This reduction has been made in an effort to protect the Alabama Company's trade and its dealers against an unsettled condition that has been created throughout the territory served by the Birmingham mill, largely through the introduction of foreign cement.

This foreign cement is manufactured under conditions unacceptable to American standards of living which allow it to unfairly compete with the domestic product. Its sale here is in effect an evasion of our immigration laws and its introduction at the ports has had the effect of unsettling the industry through the entire territory to a dangerous extent.

While this reduction is a serious sacrifice and is made primarily to protect the cement company's dealers, we believe it will materially benefit producers of domestic coal, power, cotton, explosives and the railroads, and it is hoped it will correct the present highly unsatisfactory conditions within the industry.

PEACH GROWERS SEEK NEW LABEL

Macon, Ga., December 3.—A cash prize of $100 has been offered by the Georgia Peach Growers' exchange for the successful winner in a contest for an appropriate design and name for a label for high-grade products. W. C. Bewley, general manager of the exchange, announced today.

The contest will open on January 30, he stated, and the prize will be awarded after the selected design has been accepted by the United States patent office. Anyone living in the United States is eligible to send in a name and design, according to Bewley.

The winning label will be used only on products measuring up to a certain standard of quality. The idea was adopted for the purpose of raising the grade of the exchange products and broadening the demand for quality fruit.

"We hope by this movement," Bewley explained, "to be the forerunner of a similar movement in standardizing southern products so that inferior, badly packed products may no longer be able to jeopardize the existing and potential markets for quality products of the south.

"The marketing of Georgia peaches and other southern products has been hampered by a lack of uniformity in quality, grading and packing. It is believed that proper standardization will materially increase confidence in the wholesale trade and in the consumer. Restrictions will be thrown around the use of the label selected. The label will not take the place of individual brands."

Successfully Fights Fire in Airplane 6,000 Feet in Air

Marrakesh, Morocco, December 3.—(AP)—An observer fought a fire in his plane 6,000 feet above the ground, and brought the plane safely to earth.

Lieutenant Ragot, the observer aboard a dual-control military airplane, was returning from Agadir, Morocco, after an important photographic expedition. When flying above Marrakesh at the height of 6,000 feet the plane caught fire.

Surrounded by flames, Pilot Caustau adjusted his parachute and jumped overboard.

Lieutenant Ragot, single handed, fought the flames with an extinguisher and managed to bring the plant to land. He escaped with superficial burns, saving his instruments and photographs.

HANKOW COTTON MILL SCENE OF OUTRAGE

Shanghai, December 3.—(AP)—Four hundred students of Sun Yat Sen university stormed a cotton mill at Hankow, which had dismissed several women workers, and dragged five anti-red union officials into the open and shot them, it is reported from Hankow.

The shooting is said to have occurred in the presence of armed police who did not interfere.

High's Presents Christmas Gift Section in This Issue

Miss Mary Lee Webb, of East Lake, finds the special 16-page, colored Christmas supplement of the J. M. High company a highly attractive medium for selection and purchase of holiday gifts. The special section—presented in this issue of The Constitution — will enable patrons of High's to secure their gifts at a minimum of trouble and time.

In this issue of The Constitution is presented a unique and attractive Christmas shoppers' aid and guide in the form of a 16-page section in colors of the J. M. High company.

The special holiday supplement is a comprehensive and illustrated catalog of hundreds of gift suggestions ranging from toys for the youngsters to pipes for grandad. It is published in The Constitution by the High company, officials point out, in order to solve gift-buying problems and to eliminate waste of time and trouble in shopping.

All persons desiring to purchase gifts may refer to the index of the section and turn instantly to the particular page of the 16 whereon are presented gifts suitable for the type of individual in mind. Each gift item is illustrated and numbered, and the prospective purchaser may mark his gifts; bring or phone the items to High's; ask for them by number, and be served without loss of a single moment's time and without being involved in any confusion customarily incident to holiday shopping.

The attractive way in which the gifts are classified and numbered serially also will prove of great benefit to out-of-town patrons of High's, for they may order by number and be sure of getting exactly what they desire.

The typography of the supplement is a tribute to the composing room and press department of The Constitution, the former contributing heavily to the general attractiveness of the section and the latter making it possible for High's to present a gift section, every page of which is in three colors.

Officials of the J. M. High company Saturday expressed pride at the appearance and useful mission of the supplement and invited the general public to make use of it in selecting and purchasing its presents for Christmas.

"By doing so," the officials stated, "patrons of this store will avoid all trouble and delay and at the same time may be assured that their purchases will be exactly as described and in every way in keeping with the high standard of excellence which the J. M. High company has always maintained."

5th District A. & M. Trustees Discuss School's Operation

Discussion of plans for the operation of the Fifth District A. and M. school at Walker Park and matters pertaining to the finances of the institution featured a meeting of the board of trustees of the institution at the state capitol Saturday morning.

The meeting was presided over by J. L. Carithers, of Winder, acting chairman, and the following board members attended: A. J. Woodruff, of Decatur; W. S. Cox, of College Park; John Wright, of Monroe; Mrs. W. C. Clark, of Covington, and J. Henry Walker, principal of the Fifth District A. and M. school, of Monroe.

The institution is doing splendid work and is rapidly gaining the reputation of being one of the best agricultural institutions in the state, it was declared. The school has an enrollment of 260 students.

The board voted to increase the salary of Principal Walker to $4,000 per year, effective December 1, 1927. The motion was made by Mrs. Clark, seconded by Mr. Woodruff and unanimously adopted.

An important stride in the development of the school was put in motion when the board discussed plans for running a six-inch water main from Monroe to the school at an estimated cost of $10,000. The motion was made by Mrs. Clark, seconded by Mr. Carithers.

The following committee was appointed to investigate the matter and report to the board at its next meeting: John Wright, J. H. Walker, J. L. Carithers and E. M. Williams.

A new calf barn will be erected at the school, according to a resolution unanimously adopted, to use the funds already available for this purpose.

Principal Walker was instructed to spend a part of the appropriation for the boys' dormitory, amounting to between $1,000 and $2,000, for the construction of additional equipment such as shower baths and a storage room for athletic goods.

The lyceum course of the school won the praise of the entire board. Purchase of additional live stock was authorized.

Resolutions expressing regret upon the death of Mr. Blasingame, a personal friend of the entire board and one who has done much for the school, will be drawn up and read at the next meeting.

MILDER WEATHER FOR MIDDLE WEST

Chicago, December 3.—(United News.)—Milder temperatures, accompanied in most sections by snow, will visit the middle western states Sunday, the Chicago weather bureau forecast today.

The near-zero temperatures which were felt through this region the past few days will give way with the snowfall but are likely to return Monday, the bureau said.

Oil Magnate Is Kept Indoors By Driving Rain

Ormond Beach, Fla., December 3. (AP)—John D. Rockefeller has lived the life of a hermit since his unheralded arrival here Thursday night, but his seclusion has not been by choice.

The 88-year-old oil magnate has idled the hours away within "The Casements," his winter retreat fronting the picturesque Halifax river. Inclement weather that greeted his advent here turned to a driving rain that forced him to remain indoors the entire day, and with keen disappointment he gave up the hope of an expected outing.

The aged multi-millionaire followed his usual custom of rising late. A close scrutiny of the various stock quotations, furnished him by a special service, occupied his time before he partook of a hearty breakfast. The steady downpour failed to abate and he continued to lounge about the house, postponing an automobile drive along the beach road and more important than all, his eight holes of golf.

His favorite course at this resort lay under a blanket of water and he abandoned all thought of wielding his clubs until Monday, at the earliest, probably to start his Florida season off in company with General Adelbert Ames, his 94-year-old companion and retired civil war veteran. In other years the two have spent many hours at the game together.

Making his annual trip south slightly earlier than usual this year, Rockefeller arrived unexpectedly without the customary greeting accorded him from the populace. He stepped from the train unobserved and was whisked into his automobile and to his home across the lake unnoticed. The river drive in front of "The Casements" has been well traveled by visitors eager to catch a glimpse of the oil king, but without success.

He was expected to make his first public appearance tomorrow in resuming his attendance at morning services at the Union church, despite weather conditions of any kind.

U. S. INHERITANCE TAX REPEAL TO BE SOUGHT

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Repeal of the federal inheritance tax again will be sought by Representative Green, Florida, in the new congress.

In announcing today that he will renew his fight on the levy, the Florida representative said that he will introduce an amendment to the tax bill which has been drafted by the house ways and means committee to eliminate this tax and later will present a bill for its repeal. He said that Florida was opposed particularly to the 80 per cent credit feature for the states in the tax because it has no state inheritance.

Buy Powder Plant.

Fort Valley, Ga., December 3.—Clarke and Sanchez, Inc., a new corporation here under the direction of E. G. Clark and H. P. Sanchez are planning erection of a plant in Fort Valley to make insecticides. The plant is to be erected at once, according to a statement from the company.

ADVISES PASSING ON FIRST ROUND

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—If the man next door brought the wife in for an evening of bridge and some time during a lull in the conversation you were dealt 13 cards of one suit—

And if you didn't faint or fall out of your chair, what would you bid?

Ely Culbertson, member of one of the finalist teams in the American auction bridge tournament and recognized as one of the country's best players, would pass his first bid. "The distribution of the cards would naturally create some bidding," he said, "and there isn't a chance of your being beaten any way. Think of the fun of watching your opponent's bid."

There are 6,250,300,800 ways in which a deck of cards will be dealt before a player will have a hand of 13 of one suit, said R. F. Foster, dean of bridge experts, and one celebrated writer believes it would be extraordinary if a hand such as that should not be dealt to some player in the world at least once in two months.

Only one of several experts competing in the tournament acknowledged he had ever held this dream-hand. Foster said he had held two such hands, and on one occasion the first bidder ventured a no trump. Others have held 12 cards of one suit, another said he had held a "no trumper" on which he could bid seven without possibility of being set.

Edward P. Martin, Chicago, vice president of the league, once held 12 of a suit and an outside ace; Wilbur C. Whitehead, famous authority, has held 10 hearts in one hand—another time he had the ace, king, queen of three suits and the ace, king, queen and jack of another. Mrs. Ely Culbertson, one of the best woman players in the country, held 11 winning spade cards and two outside tricks. She merely laid down the hand. Her husband once held 12 of a suit.

FINISH and tone are two qualities apparent in many pianos, but the third, and by far the most important quality—durability—can be proved only by the passing years. In their making, from beginning to end, and reaching back into history for three generations the Vose has an unbroken continuity of artistic expression that reflects the genius of its makers—a piano of flawless character.

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Louis Graveure improv s with acquaintance. Hearing him last night at the Woman's club, for the third time, an even more enjoyable evening of song developed than on the previous occasions, a consummation that, without experiencing, would have seemed impossible, remembering the aforesaid previous treats.

"Evening of Song" is the correct description of the type of recital Mr. Graveure gives. It is, probably, the most entertaining individual concert available on the modern stage. The singer gives the impression that he is thoroughly enjoying himself, the songs he sings are all, though of wide variety in choice, of the kind to warm the appreciative cockles of your heart. And you leave with the feeling of what a magnificent voice he has, and of what a bully good time he gave.

Mr. Graveure has one habit which other singers ought to imitate. One, at least. That is, when he signs in foreign tongues, he explains beforehand exactly what the song is about. It makes it so much more interesting. Even when you are fairly familiar with the language of the song, it is hard to catch the words when sung, now and then, and knowing what it is about you are left free to better enjoy the singing.

But, if ever a singer did not need this interpretation, it is Mr. Graveure. For none have better nor clearer diction than he. So, if it proves good with him, all the more reason, with 90 per cent of our singers, why it would be more important, even, for them.

The Graveure baritone is delicious in its tone, majestic in its power, and remarkable in its range. His control is a thing for the initiate to marvel at and his sympathetic interpretation of his songs is perfection itself.

Saturday night he gave four groups of songs, one German group, one French, one old English and one English and American. Then he sang half a dozen encores, including one New England folk song about the birds that he swore actually brought a smile to the lips of President Coolidge when he sang it at the white house.

He also sang that exquisite "Sylvia," and the ever-charming "Mary." Have known that ever since boyhood, and it brought back glorious memories last night.

I want to extend a word of personal thanks to Mr. Graveure for another personal favor. I had requested, if possible, that he sing that appealing old song, "Tommy Lad." He did. Thanks, Mr. Graveure.

The accompanist, Bryceson Terharne, proved as masculine in his playing as Mr. Graveure in his singing. Which means it was an exceptional piece of good fortune to hear his three solo numbers, and the frolicsome little number he gave as a well-deserved encore.

The concert was one of the series offered this season by the Music club and again emphasized the service this organization does in bringing these opportunities to Atlanta. There was a crowd large enough to be satisfactory at any time and, considering the weather and the football madness of the streets, was nothing short of marvelous on Saturday night.

DIVORCED WIFE OF MILLIONAIRE ASSAILS POLICE

Los Angeles, December 3—(AP)—Mrs. Mattie McCauliffe, formerly the wife of a millionaire oil operator, bitterly denounced police for her arrest on suspicion of burglary charges, while her attorneys tried unsuccessfully today to effect the release of the woman and her husband, McLaurine McCauliffe, from the county jail.

Though police detectives at first believed the pair was connected with apartment house and other robberies involving more than $200,000 in loot, the officers today offered nothing in substantiation of the charge.

HOOVER WILL VISIT FLOOD AREA AGAIN

Little Rock, Ark., December 3.—(AP) Secretary of Commerce Hoover will pay another visit to the erstwhile flood areas of the Mississippi valley this month, Red Cross officials here announced today. His party, which will include James L. Fieser, vice chairman of the American Red Cross, and Robert E. Bondy, eastern division manager, will leave Washington December 12.

The party will meet Mississippi relief workers at Greenville, December 14, and Arkansas relief workers at McGehee, December 15. From McGehee, the only Arkansas town to be visited, the party will go into Louisiana.

ATHENS MAN INJURED IN MYSTERY ACCIDENT

A man whose identity is not certain, but whom police believe to be H. L. Holton, of Athens, Ga., is in a dangerous condition at the Southeastern sanatorium at 418 Capitol avenue, with severe head injuries and possible other serious injuries according to police reports. Mystery shrouds the accident and police are making every effort to learn details of the affair.

According to information given Call Officers G. W. Richardson and R. F. Lawson, the man was taken into the sanatorium by a taxi driver, who left hurriedly and without giving any details other than he found the man lying in a street.

The injured man was unable to talk and a search of his person found a card bearing the name of H. L. Holton, of Athens, with an address of 616 Angier avenue and a telephone number of Walnut 3424, police learned.

Police are of the opinion that the man was injured in a fight with someone and had been struck by an automobile of some kind, during the altercation. Several detectives have been assigned to investigate the affair.

BURGLARS RANSACK HOME; GET CLOTHES

The home of J. H. Fowler, at 782 Virginia avenue, was entered by burglars and a quantity of clothing was taken early Saturday night, according to police reports.

Burglars entered the home of L. E. Smith, at 429 Crew street, and escaped with a quantity of clothing, police were told.

The plant of the Howell Manufacturing company at Lindsay street and A., B. & C. railroad, was entered by burglars early Saturday night, police reported.

BRITISH METHODIST EXPECTS NO PROHI LAW FOR ENGLAND

Richmond, Va., December 3.—(AP)—There is no sentiment for a national prohibition law in England and no chance whatever that Great Britain will follow America's example in "dry" legislation, in the opinion of Sir Henry Lunn, M. D., of London, editor of "The Review of the Churches," a religious quarterly.

"You know we in England believe in liberty," said Sir Henry. "When you get tired of the Statue of Liberty send it over to England. We will take care of it."

Sir Henry, who is delivering a series of lectures at Virginia colleges, expressed his opinion on prohibition today in an interview with the News Leader. He is a Methodist and a temperance man, he said, but does not share the views of American Methodists in regard to prohibition legislation.

CARL TRAMMELL DIES IN AURARIA

News of the death of Carl Trammell, 30, well-known Lumpkin county farmer, at his residence in Auraria, Ga., early Saturday morning, was received here by relatives. Mr. Trammell is the brother of J. B. Trammell, foreman of the composing room of The Atlanta Constitution.

Death came after a protracted illness of typhoid fever, Mr. Trammell succumbing in the prime of life. The end was preceded by the sudden death of his only child just a week ago.

Mr. Trammell was a native of Auraria and was highly regarded in that section. In addition to his agricultural activities, he had a contract with the federal government to deliver mail in that district.

Funeral services will be held at the home at 1 o'clock this afternoon, and interment will be in the family burial lot at Auraria.

Besides his wife, Mr. Trammell is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Trammell, of Auraria; four brothers, J. B. Trammell, of Atlanta; William, Jeff and Lige Trammell, all of Auraria, and two sisters, Mrs. R. V. Chambers, of East Point, Ga., and Miss Rosebud Trammell, of Auraria.

RITES TODAY IN ROME FOR F. B. HUFFAKER

Funeral services for Frank B. Huffaker, 73, who died Friday in Rome, Ga., after a stroke of paralysis, will be conducted today in Rome with burial in Myrtle Hill cemetery there. Cole's, funeral directors, are in charge.

Mr. Huffaker was one of the pioneers of Rome, having lived there since 1872. For the past three years he had been in the cotton brokerage business under his own name, and previous to that had served 30 years as secretary of a large brokerage concern.

He was born in Sevier county, Tennessee, and was a graduate of the East Tennessee university, Knoxville. He studied for the ministry and after graduation, became supply pastor of an Atlanta church, where he served for several months.

Mr. Huffaker married Miss Mary Emma Wiggins, of Atlanta.

He was a devoted member of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Rome, and for the past 30 years had served as secretary of the Knights of Pythias lodge there.

Mr. Huffaker leaves four sons, Kenneth Huffaker, of The Atlanta Journal; Frank L. Huffaker, Louis B. Huffaker, of Asheville, N. C., and Barrett Huffaker, of Wilmington, N. C.; fourth daughters, Mrs. B. W. Bloodstock, of Wilmington, N. C.; Mrs. Frank L. Rogers, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. John F. Welsh, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Margaret Huffaker, of Atlanta, and two sisters, Mrs. A. Randall, of Rome, and Mrs. Margaret Jones, of Rome.

SEES BRIGHT FUTURE FOR FARMER IN U. S.

Providence, R. I., December 3.—(AP) An optimistic note with respect to the future of the American farmer was sounded today by Assistant Secretary R. W. Dunlap of the department of agriculture, here to speak before the Rhode Island agricultural conference.

Informed agriculturists, he said, in a prepared address, are of the opinion that the next 5 to 15 years will see American farming advance into a period of remarkable prosperity. He declared that evidences of this could already be seen, asserting that with the possible exception of the eastern corn belt, the country's major agricultural sections today were in the best condtion they have enjoyed since 1920.

Although admitting that the improvement had been slow, he expressed the belief that the farmer will hold the ground he has gained and gradually make further advances.

"The farmer of the future," he asserted, "will most certainly have more to be thankful for than the farmer of the recent past . . . Agriculture in this country is, always has been, and, I believe, always will be, a sound solvent business."

FLOOD COMMITTEE READY FOR REPORT

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—With a background of four weeks presession hearings, the house flood control committee is prepared to receive with the opening of congress on Monday the army engineers' report, which probably will constitute the basis of its legislation designed to curb further disastrous inundations in the Mississippi valley.

"The way has been cleared for speedy consideration of the report," Chairman Reid, of Illinois, declared today. "The hearings have clearly shown that the control of the destructive flood waters of the Mississippi river is a national duty to be recognized by the federal government."

Having heard several score of senators, representatives, governors and other witnesses, including spokesmen from every section of the Mississippi valley inundated in the 1927 flood, the committee is planning to utilize their testimony as a "yardstick" to determine the adequacy and feasibility of the engineers' report in solving the problem.

That the federal government should bear an increased proportion, if not the entire burden, of cost in the flood protection work was a predominant note of the hearings. In the opinion of Mr. Reid, "the control of the floods is as much a national duty as is the improvement of rivers for navigation, and as nearly every levee district of the Mississippi is bankrupt the federal government must do it."

The sentiment of the witnesses before the committee has been "almost unanimous that 'levees only' will not suffice" as the remedy for the control of the river. Mr. Reid declared, "but that they must be supplemented by spillways, floodways or storage basins." He added that the other flood control proposals such as headwater reservoirs and reforestation were worthy of study and should be considered in any ultimate plan for flood control.

That any plan of flood control to be successful "must be a unified one planned and directed by the federal government" was the view of Representative Wilson, of Louisiana, ranking minority member of the committee. He declared that the committee had made "satisfactory progress in its hearings so it can soon shape a legislative policy on national flood control."

WOMAN ADMITS PART IN SLAYING

Camden, Ark., December 3.—(AP)—Begging for mercy and with tears streaming down her cheeks, Mrs. Effie Jowers, 43, this afternoon confessed to Sheriff Coleman, of Clairborne parish, that she assisted in the slaying of her husband on the night of October 31 at Haynesville, La.

Mrs. Jowers accused her alleged lover, J. E. Swift, who also is under arrest, officers said, of actually killing her husband with a hammer while he lay asleep in bed in their home. She said she stood by looking on and stopping up her ears with her fingers "because I couldn't bear to hear him scream."

Then, she told officers, she covered the body with a blanket while Swift hired an automobile. Swift, she said, and his 16-year-old son, Paul, then carried the body to the automobile and drove to a bayou and threw the body into the bayou.

JEWISH FUND TAG DAY WORKERS ANNOUNCED

Members of the Atlanta chapter, Junior Hadassah, who have volunteered their services for canvassing work on Maccabean day, the annual tag day of the national Jewish fund soon to be launched in Atlanta, were announced Saturday by Miss Rae Rosenberg, co-chairman of the day and chairman of the N. J. F. committee of Junior Hadassah.

The Hadassah girls who will serve are Marie Scheuer, Jeanette Zimmerman, Gladys Shuman, Goldie Berchenko, Frances Hellman, Gertrude Wald, Pearl Hoffman, Charlotte Vitner, Ruth Lang, Rose Greenberg, Esther Pollack, Sarah Gershon, Helen Singer, Lillian Isakoff, Sophie Merlin, Esther Freeman, Esther Siegal, Rose Schrieber, Cecile Rice, Annie Rice and Jennie Goldstein.

A similar group of young Jewish men will be selected from the Young Judaean clubs by Charles W. Bergman, who, with Miss Rosenberg, will be in charge of Maccabean day, one of the means used by the Jewish national fund for raising money to buy land in Palestine.

FUNERAL HELD FOR T. W. CALHOUN IN ARLINGTON

Arlington, Ga., December 3.—Funeral services were held Friday for J. W. Calhoun, 38, who died Thursday after a lingering illness due to his age. Funeral services were conducted at the home of Dr. W. W. Calhoun, in this city, and interment followed at the local cemetery.

Mr. Calhoun was born September 25, 1844, in Washington county, Ga. When a small boy his parents moved their family to Baker county, near Ivey's mill, where he lived until manhood. At the age of 23 he located in Miller county at Colquitt after marrying Miss Louisa Sylvania Adams, of that place. Fourteen years later, in 1880, he came to Arlington.

Calhoun is survived by one son, Dr. W. W. Calhoun, a prominent physician of this city; one daughter, Mrs. H. L. Hicks, of Orlando, Fla.; two sisters, Mrs. Ellen McNair, of this city, with whom he made his home since the death of his wife six years ago, and Mrs. Cappie Bush, of Colquitt, besides a large number of grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

Mankato, Minn., December 3.—(AP) Two of five former officers of the Southern Minnesota Joint Stock Land bank were found guilty of using the mails to defraud in connection with a stock issue of the bank in the summer of 1925 by a jury in federal court here tonight.

Guy Huston, of New York and Chicago, former fiscal agent, and W. H. Gold, Miami, Fla., were convicted, while Glenn and Donald Gold, sons of W. H. Gold and former vice presidents, and J. E. Huston, a director of the bank, were acquitted.

SOLDIER TORTURED WOMAN CHARGES

El Paso, Texas, December 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Josefa Contreras, 25, and an unnamed man, were held in jail here today while police investigated a story alleged to have been told by the woman, that two men, one of them her husband, tried to burn Jose Valensuela alive while attempting to learn the hiding place of savings they believed he had accumulated.

Valensuela, a former member of the eighth United States cavalry, is in William Beaumont hospital here, still under treatment for the burns alleged to have been received in the torture more than two years ago.

Police say that Mrs. Contreras related to them that the two men drugged Valensuela and beat him in an endeavor to learn the hiding place of money, which he did not have. Later, she is alleged to have said, the captors of the soldier knocked him unconscious and poured gasoline over his head and body and touched a match to his clothing.

For two years Velensuela has been transferred from hospital to hospital while army surgeons attempted to restore his face and save his life. Police investigation in the case started more than a year ago.

LEVEE BUILDERS MAY GET GUARDS

New Orleans, December 3.—(AP)—An infimation that national guardsmen may be requested to protect levee builders from disgruntled landowners of the Caernaryon district was made here today by James Wilkinson, counsel for the New Orleans parish levee board after threats against the lives of the engineers and laborers had been reported to him.

Wilkinson said it had been reported to him that Ambrose Ansardi, Caernarvon dance hall proprietor, had threatened to shoot any member of the levee building crew at work closing up the Caernarvon crevasse to enter his property. The workmen are pushing the closing of the crevasse, which was opened last spring to relieve pressure against levees here, in preparation for the expected rise in the river resulting from recent heavy rainfall in the Mississippi basin. The levee has been reconstructed to the point of the property claimed by Ansardi, engineers said, and completion of the project within the next few days is imperative to prevent another possible inundation of St. Bernard and Plaquemine parishes. The new levee exposes Ansardi's property to the river.

Wilkinson declared Ansardi was paid $12,500 in full payment for damages sustained from the Caernarvon crevasse. A suit to restrain Ansardi from interfering with the work has been called for hearing in St. Bernard parish court Tuesday.

Leander Perez, counsel for Ansardi, contends the payment to his client by the reparations commission was for damage sustained from the overflow of his land and that the property was not bought outright.

Disorder Reigns Supreme.

"Ramblin' Wreck From Georgia Tech." What an unparalleled scene of disorder. Tech scores a touchdown. The dope upset for the time being. Never such a din, never such a noise heard in Atlanta before. Disorder run riot. Tech's score near the end of the second quarter turned loose all the helions of Avernus for Tech.

Never before such a scene as came between the halves. All Techdom that could move about on two legs swarmed to the field in a gigantic serpent. "Oom Pah, Oóm Pah," boomed the resounding bass horns of the Tech band in "Ramblin' Wreck" but the rumbling basso was drowned in the din.

"Glory, Glory, to Old Georgia." Another army of mad men swoops down. Another set of bellows-lunged bandmen pump into their horns but their tones are scarcely heard. Up and down the field march the rival clans. "We'll Get 'Em Yet" sing the Georgia boys to the ear-deafening "Wreck 'Em Tech."

Forty Thousand Lunatics.

Forty thousand lunatics squirming and shoving and pushing and jumping and shouting and crying and laughing and dancing and fighting and jostling. Thousands of pretty girls stand and cheer, wave their colors and shrill out cheers as the cold winds whistle around their knees. Fool freshmen run wild in all directions. So much din that you can't hear your neighbor ask you for a match. Pretty sponsors tear chrysanthemums to shreds. Two groups of blanketed figures trot back on the field. The whistle blows and the crowd settles back as the titanic struggle is renewed.

Again the lunatics rise and fall in great waves a quarter of a mile long as Fickle Fortune smiles now on Georgia, now on Tech. Back and forth sweep the teams again, and again are Bedlam and Pademonium in this new disorder.

"To Hell with Tech!" comes the stirring cry of the still gallant Georgians. "To Hell with Georgia!" shout back the jubilant though "ramblin' wrecks" from Tech. The game goes on as palpitating hearts reach the bursting point. The bloom pumps through the veins of the masses. Never before such a struggle. A slip, a stumble, a toss of Fate's pretty head can now decide the issue. Back and forth clash the begrimed and bespattered warriors.

Pandemonium Breaks Loose.

Boom, boom, boom, in mighty explosion charge the Tech rooters as a roar that could be heard in Savannah registered another score for Tech. Whole minutes that seem months—the pulses of the Tech masses ceased to beat and then resumed in an outburst that dwarfed the others to nothing. "Rambling Wreck." "Wreck 'Em Tech." The under-dog was not only cuffing the upper dog, but was positively spitting in the Bulldog's face. The Tech stands and half the rest of the huge stadium was a roaring torrent of gold and white.

"Glory, Glory to Old Georgia," pumped the Red and Black band. The Georgia rooters, instead of losing heart, burst out in greater noise than ever before. "Come On, Georgia!" "Touchdown, Georgia!" And the referee blows his whistle for more battle.

Into the last quarter swings the game with vast throngs afoot in a mighty roar of ceaseless reverberations. "Come on Georgia," cried and whined and wept the adherants of the Red and Black. "Wreck 'Em, Wreck 'Em, Wreck 'Em," came the mighty plea of the Techites standing with thumbs down calling for more and yet more of the enemy's blood. "Oh, Georgia, Please, Please, PLEASE Come On," pleaded the Georgiaites onto the field the avalanche sweeps. Policemen battle futily. Unchecked gallop the hosts.

On to the field to a scene never before duplicated in Atlanta. A scene of madness. A scene which taxes the mind to conceive. A scene which words will never picture. A scene which will be told to sons and daughters yet unborn. A scene never witnessed before in the south when the Tech hosts swarmed on to the field to taste the sweetness of a victory which struck a chill of horror into the hearts of the Red and Black hordes from Georgia. Disorder and riot ran wild. Sadly, slowly, the Georgia rooters moved away from the fatal field. Beaten, disheartened, choking, and sobbing, the Red and Black withdrew. The great game was over. A black game and a black night for Georgia.

Then to the city moved the great unweildy mass. Gradually untangling it assumed the shape of another glacial sweep. Another avalanche began to move and it was an avalanche of the victors. Unleashed, freed from the tension of weeks and months, with the cup of victory at their lips the hosts swept on toward the city, toward the city which has witnessed hundreds of other victorious marches but which never saw such a sweeping annihilating column as left Grant field Saturday afternoon to celebrate with all abandon the crowning achievement of all time for the rooters for Georgia Tech.

:: FORMER PROHI AGENT IS MARRIED ::

Of Prominent Divorcees

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 3.—Fifteen minutes after she was divorced from Donald Kellogg, Buffalo oil millionaire, today in Reno, Nev., Mrs. Marguerite Tifft Kellogg was married there to Ralph W. Bickel, prohibition investigator, widely known as manager of the government-operated psuedo Bridge Whist club in New York, established by A. Bruce Bielaski, head of General Andrews' secret service dry force.

Bickel, for several years as undercover prohibition agent, himself was divorced only last Tuesday from Mrs. Alice J. Bickel, Pittsburgh heiress and an officer in the smart Fine Arts club.

Reports of the divorces and marriage, received in New York by Mrs. Alice Bickel, did not say whether Bickel and Mrs. Kellogg had met before they found themselves on the same errand in the Nevada city.

The former Mrs. Kellogg, whose husband, Donald, is a son of the late Spencer Kellogg, linseed oil king, and who himself is vice president of the Spencer-Kellogg Oil refining interests, a millionaire and social leader, is 28. She waived all interest in her husband's property and in the custody of their three children.

Donald Kellogg has an estate at Angola, N. Y., and a farm at Evans, in Erie county.

Bickel—who spelled his name Bickle when negotiating for and operating the Bridge Whist club as a trap for wholesale bootleggers—is widely known along Broadway as a flashy spender. He ran the club here for Bielaski, then under-cover chief of the prohibition service, from October, 1925, to May, 1926.

Bootleggers, who made deliveries to the pretentious club, which was in East Forty-fourth street, were invariably nabbed sooner or later. Disclosures of the club's existence created a stir in Washington, wet senators and representatives denouncing use of government money in operation of a speak-easy.

Although presumably only a prohibition sleuth, Bickel lived at an expensive rate in New York.

Mrs. Alice Bickel separated from her husband last April. At that time they signed a separation agreement and she gave him $1,500 for the purpose of getting a divorce in Reno. She is 24 and was married to Bickel soon after leaving boarding school seven years ago.

This is the third marriage for Bickel. His first wife was a sister of Earl Carroll, the producer.

COURTS' POSITION ASKED CLARIFIED

Washington, December 3.—(United News.)—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis in his annual report today recommended congressional action to clarify the position of the courts in injunction proceedings, long a storm center of controversies between capital and labor.

Davis pointed out that labor leaders expected the Clayton amendments to the Sherman anti-trust act would "restrict the use of the injunction to a greater extent than the courts now hold to be the legal effects of such acts."

A diversity of opinion in federal courts has resulted in various interpretations in injunction proceedings, he pointed out, and this "may lead to the regrettable result of disrespect for the courts," he added.

The injunction process has been attacked especially by striking soft coal miners who appealed last month to President Coolidge for action. Insurgent members of congress since have said they will seek new legislation to limit the power of both state and district courts to issue injunctions in labor controversies.

Davis said congress should act in order to prevent "the belief that controversies in labor disputes are being determined through judicial legislation," he added.

"It would also be worth the serious thought of congress to provide for speedy trial and decision in such cases, for the long delays which often occur between the hearing in the lower court and the final decision in the appellate courts not infrequently have the result that the party successful in the lower court, for example, obtaining an injunction accomplished his purpose even though the decision is reversed by the higher court."

CHURCH WILL WELCOME AGNES-SCOTT MEMBERS

A number of affiliate members from Agnes Scott college will be welcomed at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Decatur Presbyterian church at a special service to be conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. McGeachy, who will preach on "The Happiness of Friendship."

Before the services the young women will be entertained by a special committee of the woman's auxiliary of the church.

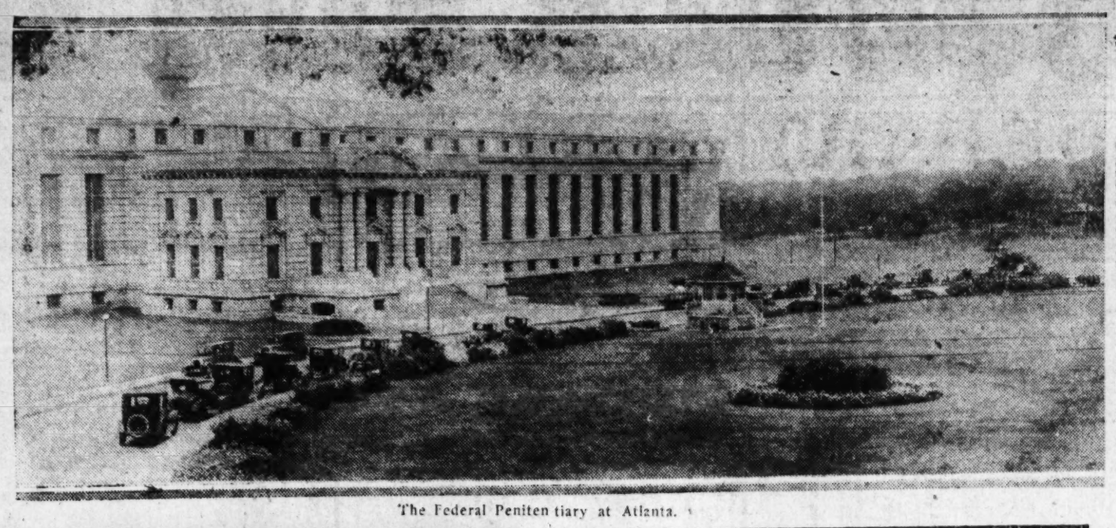
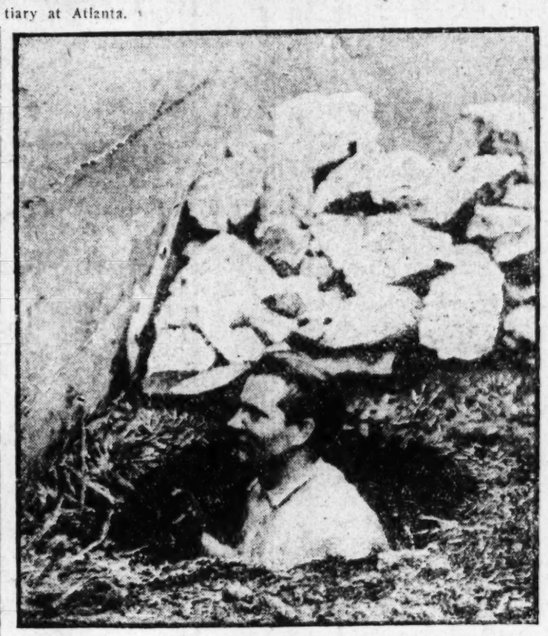
Few Breaks for Liberty Have Been Successfully Carried Out by Inmates of U. S. Penitentiary Here



The Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta.

The grim interior of Atlanta prison.



The hole through which Dutch Anderson escaped from Atlanta.

BY BEN COOPER.

Rearing its lofty head far above the Atlanta federal penitentiary as a mute symbol of the hopes of the more than 3,000 inmates, the huge smokestack designed for the new powerhouse has been completed and is ready for use, though the powerhouse itself is not yet finished. The foundations of the powerhouse have been laid, and the work is well under way.

The power house will be the latest addition to the mighty plant which houses those who have erred against the government, Atlanta's city within a city, a town of hopes and fears. The new building is being built of reinforced concrete, 52 feet in width and 150 feet long, modern in every respect, with automatic stokers and water-softening appliances. Ultimately it is expected that the plant will supply the institution with an ample water supply, most if not all the electricity used for industrial as well lighting purposes, and all other power requisites.

In the old power house at least one brilliantly executed escape plot was hatched and carried out by inmates of the prison. This was in 1916, when William Knoblock, 18 months for mail fraud, and Robert Fay, eight years for conspiracy to destroy vessels and cargoes in New York harbor during the war, were assigned to duty in the old power house.

Used Forged Pass.

Carrying a kit of electrician's tools from the power house, Knoblock and Fay appeared at the barred door to the new cell wing then under construction and presented a forged pass to the wing. A prisoner named Morrison, who was in charge of the door, refused to honor the pass, suspecting something wrong, but Knoblock and Fay appealed to the captain, who, without investigation, took their word for it and ordered Morrison to let them through, on the strength of the forged pass. Knoblock and Fay went on through the door, and on out the cell wing through the end, where workmen were engaged in building up the wall.

Appearing on the outside guard line, the conspirators were halted by a guard who demanded of them where they were going. "We were sent out to repair the arc light line," the plotters responded, and the guard, satisfied, let them pass. The two men climbed one of the near-by arc light poles, did some work on it, and then started for the next one. Meanwhile the guard went on about his duties, and, unobserved, Knoblock and Fay quickly made for the reservation's boundary fence and cleared it.

A milk wagon driver appeared at the front of the prison some time later and told a guard that he had seen two men jump the boundary fence and run away, both men being in the prison white duck uniform. The guard got busy and a quick checkup revealed that Knoblock and Fay had not returned, but were gone with the winds.

Both Recaptured Later.

Knoblock was recaptured in Philadelphia later the same year, but was pardoned a year later. Fay was returned to the prison in 1919, but was pardoned in 1922 for deportation to Germany.

Other more carefully planned escapes from the prison have not been as successful as that of Fay and Knoblock. For instance, there is the case of Louis Deschelles, counterfeiter, who is no wexercising his talents as the prison photographer, and George Hermans, who later was deported to Germany.

Hermans and Deschelles spent nearly six months in the duck mill machine shop building a telescoping ladder of steel. The work was carried out at odd moments when the men were not under direct observation and aftr a tedious job of intricate fashioning of steel pieces, the ladder was completed. The pair hid it in the duck mill, and next day went to the hiding place to get it for the escape. They found, however, that a huge box of canvass had been moved so as to cover the hiding place, and that it was impossible for them to get at it. So they had to start all over and make another ladder.

The second ladder was ready, eventually, and Deschelles and Hermans hid themselves in a fuel box under one of the guard towers on the main wall. Waiting until nightfall, they crept forth, extending the ladder so it would reach the top of the wall, and hooked the rubber-bound hook in a seemingly secure place.

Guard Hears Noise.

A moment later the ladder slipped and fell with a tremendous noise and the startled guard poked his head over the edge of his platform to see what it was all about.

"Where are you birds going?" was all the guard could think of to ask.

"We were going out, but we are not now," replied Deschelles.

The other ladder was found in the duck mill and both of the steel "hat racks" now occupy an obscure nook under a table in one of the prison office rooms, from where they are occasionally pulled out for display to visitors.

Deschelles did make good on one cleverly-planned escape, however, and was gone a year before his recapture. This was on May 13, 1923, when a crowd of Mothers' day visitors paraded through the prison, a practice discontinued with the arrival of Warden John W. Snook. Deschelles had constructed a little periscope, and with this she watched a guard from another corner until the guard turned his back, and then, in a civilian suit stolen from a guard's locker, he quickly mingled with the crowd of visitors and passed out of the prison unnoticed to the car line, where he boarded a street car and came to town. He was recaptured a year later in Chicago.

Gave Blade to Chapman.

On this escape, Louis left a letter for A. C. Aderhold, deputy warden who was record clerk then, in which he asked that Hr. Aderhold not think bad of him for attempting to escape, and pointing out that he had left the records, especially his own, untouched when he might have destroyed them. He also left a letter for a prisoner friend of whom he thought a lot.

While confined in isolation in 1925 for an infraction of prison rules, Louis sent word up to Warden Snook that he had to see him. The warden ordered Louis brought to his office, and Louis promptly told him that he had had another plan to escape, but had given it up. Louis handed over a piece of hacksaw blade.

"Where is the other piece?" the warden asked.

"Oh, I gave that to Gerald Chapman," was the reply, and sure enough, when the warden compared the bit of blade later with a piece taken from Chapman before he was sent to Connecticut, it was found that the pieces matched perfectly.

The Atlanta federal penitentiary has some "tough birds," but none any more so than Roy Gardner, train robber and bandit whose name is almost as famous as that of Jesse James in the west.

Escape Plans Foiled.

Roy broke away from McNeill Island but was recaptured, and sent to Leavenworth, and then transferred to Atlanta. Months ago Roy was halted in a carefully planned escape plot when it was found that he had sawed some bars through and was planning to make a break. "Warden, this is the hardest pen in the United States to get away from," Roy recently commented to Warden Snook, who regarded this as a compliment to the prison, for Gardner has broken away from some of the strongest institutions in the country.

There has been only one successful attempt at escape from the prison proper since Warden Snook took charge, and of the three who got away in this break only one is still at large. Basil Hugh Banghart, Albert Rosenberg and Fred McGouldrick crashed the prison through a cell block window and escaped under fire from the guardhouse. McGouldrick was recaptured the next morning but Banghart and Rosenberg made good their escape. Rosenberg was captured later in Indiana on robbery charges and was sentenced to 25 years. Banghart is still at liberty.

Eight prisoners went out the end of a cell block in 1920, some years B. S. (before Snook). This escape was from a basement cell block and was executed through a window from which brick had been removed. Prisoners Sherrill, Brown, Perhankey, Campbell, Tons, Dodge, Duffy and Crook crashed to freedom via this route, but all were recaptured and returned to the pen.

Get 10 Years More.

William Hensen and Will Patton received additional sentences of ten years each for their efforts to break away. They did manage to get clean away from the prison but were recaptured later in the same day by a posse. Their escape took place on March 12, 1919.

Patton, who was doing eight years for interstate comerce law violation, and Hensen, who had ten years for housebreaking and larceny, were assigned to duty as cleaners. They asked Guard Curtis to open a basement locker and while the guard was working with the key one of the pair socked him with a sandbag made of a handkerchief and some sand. The guard resisted, however, and a general fight took place in which the guard was knocked unconscious and stabbed.

Patton and Hensen took the guard's keys and opened a hall locker to get two revolvers. They then made the outside of the prison with the guard's keys and were challenged by a box guard. They told Guard Tippin, in the box, that they were employed at the stable, and he allowed them to pass. A few moments later Guard Curtis crawled up the stairs from the basement and revealed what had happened. A pursuit was hastily organized, but by that time the prisoners had gained cover. They were both retaken later in the day and are still doing their bit, with ten years added on for murderous assault on Guard Curtis.

Of course the star performers at escaping from the federal prison were Gerald Chapman and Dutch Anderson. Both of these men are gone forever now, but their exploits will always be remembered by Atlantans. Chapman went over the wall while his partner, Dutch, went under the wall in a tunnel.

Hatching Plots.

There are some 3,000 men in the federal prison and of this number there are many who are constantly hatching plots to escape. Warden Snook and his officers are on the defensive, but with good breaks manage to nip most of the plots in the bud, while others approach the final stage before discovery. Occasionally a prisoner walks away from the honor farm, but this is not regarded as an escape in the true sense of the word, but merely the violation of a prisoner's honor, for which he suffers dearly on recapture.

Contrasted to those inmates whose minds are always upon the matter of getting away are those prisoners who are taking their lot with calm fortitude, and serving out their time in a sincere effort to square themselves with the world. There are many other angles to the Atlanta federal penitentiary other than the efforts of prisoners to break away, and one of the most interesting of these is the case of "Uncle" Johnnie Lee, of Arkansas. "Uncle" Johnnie is 77 years old, and before he came to Atlanta had never learned to read and write. But one day the federal agents swooped down upon his home, which was deeded to his grandfather by the Indians, and they found a gallon jug of liquor sitting at the head of his bed where he had kept it from time immemorial, as had his father and grandfather before him.

The agents were acting on the tip of a drunk who "Uncle" Johnnie had refused to sell any liquor to, and that little gallon jug cost the old man a term in Atlanta. On his arrival at the prison recently he was enrolled in the prison school and is now learning his "A. B. C.'s"

There is plenty of discipline at the federal penitentiary out on McDonough road, but then there are also things which make the lot of the inmates easier to bear. For instance, the prison has a library of some 20,000 volumes, under the charge of Chaplain Ladlow. Hers Gaston B. Means, former department of justice agent; Lawrence Aber, soldier of fortune, are found among the 35 prisoners employed in the library. The inmates are allowed to take books to their cells and read until "lights out."

Most of the prisoners of national interest are gone from the prison now though there still remains a few. For instance, Albert E. Sartain, former warden of the prison, who is now a clerk in the prison hospital while serving time for alleged acceptances of bribes from prisoners for soft jobs, and Assemblyman William C. Amos, of New York, who went into the penitentiary on charges connected with the selling of $2,000,000 worth of stock in the Morosco Holding corporation.

Among those who have gone from the prison were Ex-Governor Warren T. McCray, of Indiana, who got ten years for using the mails to defraud; Earl Carroll, Broadway producer, who got a year and a day for a "white lie" told to a federal grand jury in defense of a girl who once upon a time took a bath in ginger ale; Marcus Garvey, negro "Ponzi" whose Black Star Line and "Back to Africa" colonization project flopped and sent him to Atlanta for a term; George Remus, millionaire bootleg king who is now on trial in Cincinnati for slaying his wife; Mannie Kessler, New York bootleg king, and many others.

Negro Writes Snook.

Every once in a while Warden Snook gets a card or a letter from old Sam Moore, negro, who up to his release recently was the oldest prisoner at the pen from point of service. Sam was No. 22 and was one of the first to be incarcerated here when the federal prison was first established. He was doing a life sentence for murder in the District of Columbia when paroled and turned him loose on a new and strange world. But old Sam is making good now, and is in the hands of friends, thanks to the arrangements made for him by Warden Snook. When Sam left the prison he surrendered seniority to Edward Wilkey, No. 1015, who is also a life termer.

Plenty of recreation is provided for Uncle Sam's charges, there are seven tennis courts, a cinder track and athletic equipment in the prison yard and every spring the prison holds a series of track meets, sometimes with teams from local schools and colleges. Then in fine weather the inmates enjoy their week-end football or baseball games, an occasional moving picture, and radio programs in the cell houses in the evenings.

They are fed good, substantial food and plenty of it in a dining room fitted up with new furniture recently installed and after a good day's work at their various jobs they are at liberty to read or chat in their cells until time to go to bed. During the day they are given an opportunity to exercise in the prison yard and have time for a quiet smoke between their shifts at work. The biggest industry in the prison is the work in the duck mill, where miles of canvas are turned out for the government for use as mail bags for the postoffice department and for use by the navy and army.

Trades Are Taught.

In the federal prison the inmates are taught trades by which they may earn a living on their release and at the same time they are paid a small wage for the work they turn out, the money being paid them on their release from prison as a stake with which to fight their battle against life. More than 800 prisoners are employed in the duck mill and during the past year the prisoners were paid as bonuses $91,640.24 for the support of themselves and dependent families.

Then there is another side to the picture—the junk ward, where human wrecks from the use of dope are taken in hand and made over into men. The dopers are given "cold turkey," which means that they are confined to the hospital on entrance without a single bit of dope and given an heroic but effective treatment with strong medicine.

Most of the junkers believe that they will die on the first day and the second and the third days, but they soon recover from the treatment, and after a few weeks experience absolutely no craving for dope. If they remain in prison long enough for the treatment to take its full effect, the probability is that on their release they will not go back to narcotics.

PROHI LEADERS TO MEET MONDAY

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The Anti-Saloon league will begin its biennial convention here tomorrow faced with the task of electing a successor to the late Wayne B. Wheeler, who, as legislative superintendent and general counsel of the organization, was for years a leader in the dry cause.

Nominations for the various places to be filled in the league's organization will be made to the directors by the executive committee which met here today. Some members of the league believe two men will be named to take over the posts held by Wheeler. Dr. F. Scott McBride has been carrying on the work formerly performed by Mr. Wheeler.

Assembly coincident with the convening of congress, the convention will be addressed by a number of men prominent in the prohibition ranks. William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, the dry crusader, will be among the speakers, as will Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army. Others will be Senators Willis, of Ohio, and Sheppard, of Texas; former Representative Upshaw, of Georgia; Dr. J. M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, and Dr. McBride.

Officials of the Anti-Saloon league said today that more than 12,000 applications had been received for tickets to the meeting. Plans are being made to hold overflow sessions.

ATLANTA GIRL BADLY INJURED IN MACON CRASH

Macon, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—The unconscious form of a young stenographer identified as Miss Leota Blanche Shier, 629 Barnett street, N. E., Atlanta, was found on the Dixie highway at Bolingbroke tonight. Her face was upturned to the pouring rain nearby was a badly damaged heavy automobile, which she is believed to have been driving.

The pavement was slippery, because of the three-day rain and it is believed that the car turned over two or three times, hurling her out, although the car had righted itself on the pavement.

She is at a local private hospital, having been picked up by other automobilists. She was in her stocking feet when found.

Miss Shier for some time was employed as stenographer at The Atlanta Georgian. She has not been connected with the newspaper for the past year and her present employment could not be learned.

$14,925 in Permits.

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Building permits were issued for seven new buildings, seven new dwellings and seven re wroofs during the month of November while six repair jobs were recorded.

The total sum involved in the construction was $14,925.

Grayson Proposed as Head Of Spanish War Veterans

Colonel William L. Grayson, of Savannah, Ga., senior vice commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, will be proposed for the presidency of that organization at the next election, as a result of the launching of a nation-wide campaign to promote his election at a banquet tendered by the state department of the ladies' auxiliary of the veterans, to Colonel Grayson and Colonel W. M. Burson, commander of the Georgia department.

Barney Barnard, of Atlanta, was named as campaign manager to stimulate interest and support throughout the south and the nation for the election, which will be held at the next veterans' convention August 28, in Havana, Cuba.

Colonel Grayson now holds the second highest national post in the organization.

In a speech at the banquet Friday night, Colonel Grayson pointed out to the 100 members assembled, the purposes and objectives of the Spanish War Veterans, and declared that the people of Georgia do not fully appreciate this organization as they should.

Colonel Grayson said:

Veterans Not Recognized.

"Candor compels me to say that the Spanish war veteran has not been recognized and appreciated in the south, and particularly in my own state of Georgia, as they are in the north, east and west, and for that reason it seems to me appropriate that I should bring to your attention the purposes and objectives of the United Spanish War Veterans. The Spanish war was conceived and prosecuted in a sublime spirit of unselfishness and sacrifice, to the end that a people suffering under misrule and struggling against tyranny might be a nation free and independent, and next October the little island republic of Cuba, now a happy, progressive and prosperous people, will be the gracious host to all the Spanish war veterans of the United States.

"To honor the memories of the comrades who have gone west, to, by precept and example, keep alive the spirit of patriotism, to gain honorable recognition for those who served faithfully and well, to aid weak and unfortunate comrades, their families and their dependents, to carry the same spirit of sacrifice and service exercised in time of war into the daily walks of life, to battle unceasingly for right in civic affairs—for we insist that there shall be honor, purity and honesty of purpose in all official government, and regardless of party affiliation, the official lacking in integrity or corrupt in the administration of his office shall be removed from our municipal, county, state and national life—to prepare for any service which we can render to country in time of need and to use an organized effort constantly, and insistently that our government shall provide an adequate national defense.

"Oh, yes, we remember when the south and north joined ranks and the power of Spain was humbled in the dust, when Dewey at Manila bay said calmly, 'You may fire when ready,' when the boys romped up San Juan Hill and the bands played 'There Will Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight'—when the heroic Alabaman, Hobson, locked the harbor of Santiago and Clark raced around the horn on the Oregon; when the Spanish fleet came out of Santiago bay at the command of Hell and Flame and our commander said, 'There is honor and glory for all.' When Captain Phillips on the deck of the Texas shouted to the Americans to cease firing and shouted in his megaphone, 'Don't cheer boys, the poor devils are dying.'"

POLITICS ARE GETTING WARMER IN COWETA

Senoia, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Politics are warming up in Coweta county and the probability is that this will be one of the warmest primaries the county has witnessed in several years. S. V. Carpenter, the present sheriff, is opposed for reelection by W. A. Potts, Newnan, and B. L. Banks, of Senoia. Ordinary J. A. Camp is opposed by A. W. Powers, chairman of the board of county commissioners.

$7,000,000 ASKED FOR FLOOD COSTS

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—An immediate urgent deficiency appropriation of $7,000,000 to cover flood emergency expenditures in the Mississippi valley was urged today by Secretary Davis, of the war department, in his annual report to President Coolidge.

That sum, the secretary said, was needed to replace $2,000,000 borrowed from the unallotted portion of the general river and harbor appropriation to complete closing crevasses in the levees and also to restore $5,000,000 in the Mississippi special fund laid out in unexpected ways in the fight with the floods.

The $7,000,000 deficiency measure would leave the war department with this $5,000,000 available for continuing essential construction work along the river, the report said, "until a new policy may have been considered and adopted" with relation to flood control.

Disclosure that the $2,000,000 in unallotted river and harbor funds was diverted to levee repair work recalls that the war department was informed by the controller general at the time this was proposed that there was no legal authority to make the allotment for us "on navigation features" of the Mississippi river commission's work, such as dredging and bank revetment, but he makes no mention of the correspondence with the comptroller general.

No New Light.

The war secretary discusses the flood situation along the Mississippi at considerable length, but since his report was prepared before the administration project for control of flood waters was matured, it shed no new light on that problem. Considerable space also was devoted to the Inland Waterways corporation, the Philippine Islands and other civil aspects of the war department; but the military side of its work was mentioned only briefly, being left to the report of Major General Summerall, chief of staff.

For the army itself, Secretary Davis said the major need was "a continued stabilization of policy as to strength, organization and location."

The insufficiency of our provision for the building up and maintenance of the authorized war reserve of material for two field armies or 1,000,000 men is a matter of deep concern to this department," he said. "Stagnation in promotion and inadequacy of housing also remain as important questions for solution.

"However, to my opinion, the all-important present need of the war department so far as its military activities are concerned, is a continued stabilization of policy. The effectiveness of the army, the morale of the personnel and the proficiency of its units for many years after the world war suffered from uncertainties as to strength, organization and location. Under such condition progress could not be otherwise than slow and somewhat unsatisfactory."

Lauds Wood.

In noting the death of Major General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines, Secretary Davis said that never in their history had the government of the islands been "in so satisfactory and promising condition" as today.

"The Philippines of today," he added, "are General Wood's most fitting monument. As we review the recent progress, we must ever retain a mental image of the personality, the patriotism and the untiring zeal of the great administrator. Without such background we can not expect to grasp intelligently the full significance of the gradual but sure development of a great people.

"Never have the people of the islands been more prosperous. Never has the outlook for the future been more bright. This happy situation is the result of the policies pursued by the United States in its goverance of the Philippines, reinforced and maintained by a sterling administration of the islands during the past six years."

Mr. Davis rehearsed at length the statistics showing development of commerce and transportation through the Mississippi-Warrior barge services and said the time was at hand for a declaration by congress as to the future of the Inland Waterways corporation but made no recommendation as to what government policy should be. Instead, the war secretary outlines six possible methods of meeting the demand for greater service. They ranged from continued operation as at present, with gradual increase of equipment out of earnings, to large increase of capitalization and wide expansion of service. Included in the suggestions of possible policies was sale to a "semi-public group of citizens" under proper safeguards and in accordance "with the original intention," but Secretary Davis did not commit himself to any of the suggestions he makes.

CONTROL BODY ENDS ARGUMENTS.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Views of the lower Mississippi valley on the flood problem as given by representatives of the Mississippi River Flood Control association, were completed before the house flood control committee when W. L. Etheridge, of Monroe, La., outlined the needs of that vicinity.

This association brought witnesses from seven states to the hearings, all of who stood decisively for national control of floods at federal expense only. It had been expected that hearings would be discontinued at the opening of congress, but Chairman Reid said today that other witnesses will be allowed to appear before the committee Monday. These are understood to be representatives of industries in and along the upper reaches of the Mississippi which were affected by the 1927 flood.

Etheridge said that his plea for national handling of the flood problem was not based on the poverty of the people affected but upon the fact that "1,500,000 people were menaced by floods making protection a national duty."

A spillway from the junction of the Arkansas river to the Mississippi as has been suggested was opposed by Etheridge. He said that such a project should be undertaken only if it was an absolute essential to flood control.

Just before the close of the hearing Representative Kemp, democrat, Louisiana, notified Chairman Reid that a delegation from four parishes of his state would like to appear before the committee after the army engineers' recommendations have been received.

This delegation consists of F. J. Heintz, E. H. Buck and Eades Poitevant, representing the Tangaphaoa, Livingstone, St. Tammany and Washington parishes. They oppose a spillway which they expect the army engineers to recommend for diversion of water from the Mississippi into the Maurephas or Pontchartrain lakes. "Such spillways while helping others elsewhere, would flood our people out of their homes," said Poitevent.

Infant Care

Mothers, you can't start too early to establish a child's serene and tranquil disposition. Even an infant can have a happy, fretless state of uninterrupted health. What will help do this? A simple, purely vegetable product as old as you are: plain Castoria.

A few drops of Castoria will settle all uneasiness in a jiffy. Will dispel colic or ward off constipation; and just as surely check diarrhea.

In real sickness, call a physician. But many physicians urge only Castoria for those little childish disorders that need nothing more. You need never be afraid to give pure Castoria. It is safe and perfectly harmless, for it contains no paregoric, no opiates, no dope of any kind. At least, this is true of the genuine Fletcher's Castoria*—and that is the kind doctors tell you always to buy.

Fletcher's Castoria is fine for any child. All children love to take it. Delicious tasting, and as good as it tastes. Just look for the Fletcher signature on the package and you will know you have the genuine and pure Castoria.

*SPECIAL NOTE: With every bottle of genuine Fletcher's Castoria is wrapped a book on "Care and Feeding of Babies" worth its weight in gold to every mother or prospective mother.

Alleged Plots.

Connors' testimony today concerned alleged plots by Mrs. Remus and Franklin L. Dodge Jr., to slay Remus, to have Remus deported, and to mulct him of his illicit liquor fortune. There were other stories of Mrs. Remus and Dodge together here and there about the country, and of two occasions when Remus housed in the same hotel with them, sought to slay them.

Less than ten minutes of the court session was left when direct examination of Connors was concluded with his statement that "all these things made me form the opinion that Mr. Remus was insane."

The prosecution seized upon the brief interval with avidity. Hurling questions at Connors in an accusing tone and in a voice which at its best rivals Remus' roar, Walter K. Sibbald, assistant prosecutor, hurriedly built up a picture of Connors as a former bootlegger, an ex-convict, a man still in the whisky business, and the associate of bootleggers.

Sibbald fought strenuously to send the jury away to its day and a half of immurement with something fresh in its mind other than the mistreated and insane slayer, Remus, had been pictured by Connors.

"At least all of Monday," replied Prosecutor Charles P. Taft, Jr., when asked how much longer cross-examination of Connors would require.

"We shall make it very thorough upon the assumption that Remus will not appear as a witness."

"I cannot say for sure now," Charles H. Elston, co-counsel with Remus, said about Remus' appearance as a witness. It was the first time he had wavered from a positive statement that Remus would follow Connors, after which the defense soon would rest its case.

An attempt by Mrs. Remus to shoot Remus was described by Connors. It occurred in the Remus $750,000 mansion on Price Hill here, he said. He, Blanche Watson, Remus' secretary, and Remus, were there when Mrs. Remus came in. Remus, who was ill, reprimanded his wife. Their divorce case was pending and Remus told his wife she knew he was trying to make a settlement with her.

"I'll settle this myself, he can't abuse me like that," Connors said Mrs. Remus cried. She turned her back and he leaped and caught her hand as she had a pearl-handled pistol half withdrawn from her handbag.

Situation Reversed.

The situation was reversed upon an occasion. Mrs. Remus was at her husband's office, Connors narrated. He had read to Remus a newspaper story about Mrs. Remus having been to Atlanta, Ga., in connection with her effort to have Remus deported to Germany where he was born.

"Daddy, I was down there trying to have it squashed," Mrs. Remus explained, according to Connors. Remus did not accept the explanation and went into a rage. Mrs. Remus became frightened and ran from the office.

Other violent rages, in some of which Remus fainted or was delirious, were said to have attended reports directly to Remus that Mrs. Remus and Franklin L. Dodge, Jr., had paid St. Louis gunmen $15,000 to kill him, when he discovered a large unpaid bill made by his wife: when a friend told him Dodge and Mrs. Remus were in an Indianapolis hotel together, and when Remus thought he had found them registered under assumed names in a Washington, D. C., hotel.

Slept Only Two Hours.

"Mr. Remus never slept over two hours a night after he got out of the Atlanta penitentiary," testified Connors. "He was working out a plan so he could meet them somewhere and get his property back. 'If ever I meet Dodge it will be good-by Mr. Dodge'," he claimed once.

The property possessed by Remus when he was sent to the penitentiary was alleged to have passed into possession of Mrs. Remus by virtue of a complete power of attorney Remus gave her.

When Mrs. Remus was indicted in the Jack Daniels distillery case at Indianapolis, according to Connors, much of it, diamonds, whisky certificates and other articles were passed to her attorneys. Mrs. Remus came to him, Connors testified, and wished him to help recover it. Connors passed the information right along to Remus, he said.

Thieves Fall Out.

"I told him that Mrs. Remus said there had been a falling out of thieves. She told me that Breitenstein, her Cleveland lawyer, wanted $37,000 for his services for her in the Jack Daniels case. Hinkel (Matt Hinkle), Cleveland sports promoter, was holding out for $10 a barrel commission."

Connors said Mrs. Remus gave him some papers, stating "some serious things are in these copies that might get Dodge in bad with the government; handle them with discretion."

Taft today expressed conviction that Remus would not be a witness. It was his plan to use Dodge, he said, only in the event the trend of the defense's case made it necessary.

Dodge Caused Downfall.

Dodge, former department of justice agent assigned to prohibition work, worked up the case which sent crashing Remus' bootleg kingdom.

After the dethroned "king of bootleggers" was sent to the penitentiary, Dodge was alleged in the defense's opening statement to have begun an association with Mrs. Remus which drove Remus insane.

Cross-examination of Connors brought out that while Remus deserted the law to turn bootlegger, Connors left the internal revenue service for the same purpose.

Connors denied Blanche Watson had been or was in the bootlegging business.

Connors, Miss Watson, Remus and George Klug, who drove the death car the morning Mrs. Remus was slain, were alleged by the state to have conspired to kill Mrs. Remus and to have appointed Remus executioner.

The prosecution said that one of the other things Connors would be interrogated about was testimony before the grand jury and that he believed Remus was sane at the time of the slaying.

A publicity agent today passed out to newspaper reporters at the trial a 1,500 word statement signed by Ruth Remus, 20-year-old daughter of the slain woman and adopted daughter of Remus, accusing Remus of cold-blooded murder and lamenting the besmirching of her mother's name.

veloped that they have since been destroyed.

Weak Heart Is His Alibi.

Beach, sallow and shaken by three and one-half hours of testimony, was excused from the witness stand at 2:35 p. m.

Much of his ordeal had been spent in flight from Prosecutor Hinkle's searching questions about his early misstatements to detectives, or in turning upon his tormentor in the anger of exhaustion.

Beach called upon his heart both to defend and to explain. He reiterated time after time that he suffered from a racking heart ailment. He offered his heart as a defense from charges of indiscretions usually associated wtih youth. He offered his heart to explain his flight from South Vineland. Afraid, he said, that the "bullying" of detectives would bring on a fatal attack.

Doctors Take Stand.

Two physicians followed the gray-fringed, bilious defendant to the stand, to establish his heart disease. Dr. Henry C. James, a rural physician, said that the poultryman suffered from an organic heart trouble that is incurable and growing more serious.

Dr. Edward M. Weil said he examined Beach Friday and found an accelerated pulse and that excitement "would have a very bad effect."

Beach's expression was doleful and solemn as Dr. Weil added: "It could cause death."

"Oh, of course," remarked Justice Campbell dryly. The court also doubted if the James testimony was relevant, but it was admitted.

Beach had been painted as a rustic Romeo. He looked like a church warden as he faced the jury of seven men and five women who hold his life and that of Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl in their hands. His expression was mildly indignant. Such hair as remains to him was a fringe of snowy white. His skin was a bilious yellow and his general appearance that of a stolid citizen who has consumed more fried food than was good for his liver.

Mrs. Lilliendahl listened intently to her alleged lover's recital.

Nimble Witted.

When Beach, nimble-witted as a horse trader, parried Assistant Prosecutor S. Cameron Hinkle's thrusts in his severe cross-examination the widow often exposed her prominent front teeth in friendly interest.

Beach denied that he knew anything about the murder, but he admitted grudgingly under Hinkle's cross examination that he had lied in many of his denials of incriminating points in two statements signed for investigators a fortnight after his elderly neighbor was shot to death.

Beach's story, brought out by his lawyers, Edison Hedges, was one of neighborly acquaintance with Dr. Lilliendahl and his wife.

They had met by accident a year ago when Beach was looking at some chicken houses. Beach met Mrs. Lilliendahl later. A love of nature, calling to kindred spirits, united the trio in many happy drives about the countryside. Beach knew every lane and bypath. He acted as guide, sitting in the front seat of the Lilliendahl car with Mrs. Lilliendahl to direct the driving, but conversing with the elderly doctor and his 7-year-old son. Alfred, who usually occupied the rear seat.

Beach said he had been fond of Dr. Lilliendahl from the time of their first meeting.

Talked of Poultry.

"He called me Willis," Beach said. Their talk was mostly of poultry. Beach called the doctor "Billy Boy." Their one quarrel was not about a heart affair but a hennery. Dr. Lilliendahl promised a quick cure for some drooping hens and Beach told him: "Doctor, you're full of mush!"

Beach detailed the quarrel, which he said both regretted. "And the doctor says to me, 'Willis, we shouldn't be at loggerheads!'" Beach responded with a gift of a mess of pickerel which the physician accepted.

Samuel Bark, the Texas rope twister and cow-case lawyer, who was the state's somewhat blurry and star witness, was conversing in his affable drawl to all who cared to listen just outside the courtroom while Beach swore he had not only never confessed to him, but had never seen him before the trial.

Claims Alibi.

Beach testified he was in hiding in the attic of James Parker's home near Chester, Pa., on October 1, the day of his alleged confession to Bark in Baltimore, 96 miles distant. The Parkers preceded him to the stand and swore that he stayed with them from September 27 to October 5.

"Do you recall the testimony of the witness named Lloyd,' who testified he had seen you and Mrs. Lilliendahl together?" asked Hedges. Beach's indignant expression asked if he could ever forget Farmer Lloyd's word picture of him, rising from a hedgerow trysting place with oak leaves and pine needles clinging to his coattails.

"Was the incident true?"

"It was not."

Beach denied that he ever took the doctor's comely wife into his arms.

Identifies Diamond Ring.

Beach identified a diamond ring that he had pawned, but the ring, he said, was his own, not Mrs. Lilliendahl's. He said he bought it three years ago from a person identified only as a John Buseman.

"How did it get out of your possession?"

"I pawned it."

Hinkle dropped the subject and took Beach over his visit to a monument works on the day of the murder, which formed a part of his alibi. He dropped that and plunged the witness into explaining his denial to detectives that he had ever written letters to Mrs. Lilliendahl.

"Why did you say that?"

"They were so unimportant I didn't think they were worth mentioning."

"But you did send letters to her, and you told us at the time you didn't. Why did you do that?"

Explains "Peggy" Notes.

"Well, they weren't really letters anyway—only notes. Four or five lines each."

Explaining why he disappeared, Beach said his physician had told him not to get excited and "to take it easy."

"'Your working days are over,' he told me."

Then he understood, he said, that he was going to be subjected to another examination by detectives.

"They told me that Harrold (Chief Detective Frank Harrold) had been easy on me—they said this next time I was going to see blood.

"There were men all over my place day and night—50, 60, a hundred of them at a time. Reporters and detectives and photographers and state troopers and everything else. You couldn't go out of the house without stumbling over some of them.

"I couldn't even go out and look after the chickens. They were peeking in the windows, night and day."

"Who?"

"Who what?"

"Who was peeking in your windows at night?"

"I don't know. Some of your police detectives, I suppose." But when he slipped away to the bungalow at Linwood Heights he was quiet at last, he said.

"I had solid comfort—nobody to bother me."

CHAMBER TAX PLAN IS HIT BY MELLON

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The chamber of commerce of the United States was charged today by Secretary Mellon with having presented a surprising misconception of facts and an argument hardly worthy of a business men's report in urging a $400,000,000 reduction in taxes.

Mellon wrote to Lewis E. Pierson, president of the chamber, in a continuation of the controversy that has arisen between the administration and the chamber over the size of the tax reduction to be made by the congress which begins sessions on Monday. The treasury favors a $225,000,000 reduction while a slash of $236,000,000 is proposed in the revenue bill drafted by the house ways and means committee.

Follows Coolidge's Lead.

In assailing the chamber of commerce program Secretary Mellon followed the lead of President Coolidge, whose view that the chamber was advocating an unwarranted reduction, was disclosed recently at the white house. After this, the chamber reiterated its demand for a $400,000,000 tax cut defended its course in advocating it.

Secretary Mellon today expressed surprise that the chamber had made a tax demand in "the entire absence of detailed figures as to future revenues and expenditures" and charged that its estimated yield from the corporation income tax represented "inexcusable carelessness."

By its own argument, the secretary said the chamber disproved the wisdom of repealing the excise tax on automobiles or on admission and club dues as it would make a too narrow tax base and force the government to rely solely on the income tax on corporations and individuals, the tobacco tax and customs duties.

Mellon Takes Exception.

In conclusion, the secretary said, "let me take serious exception to the statement in the chamber's report that 'there would be no great cause for alarm even though a deficit should, through unexpected developments, arise in any year.'

"For the United States government to borrow to pay for current expenditures would in my judgment be inexcusable," Mellon added. "A balanced budget is an essential element of any sound fiscal system, and as long as I am secretary, the treasury department will resist the undermining of this principle and will continue to advocate a tax system adequate to produce every year the revenues necessary to meet current expenditures."

Mellon advised the chamber of commerce that he was in accord with some of its revenue suggestions, asserting:

Favors Reduction.

"I believe that the corporation tax rate should be reduced, though circumstances do not permit as sweeping a reduction as you advocate; and I favor the repeal of the federal estate tax."

Turning to the administration's own tax program, the treasury head said:

"Detailed figures have been submitted to the ways and means committee. If the chamber of commerce will point out to me in what respects these figures are inaccurate, either in the case of estimated receipts or of estimated expenditures, I shall welcome their criticism. They were prepared after studies made independently by three experts having access to all of the facts. The estimates for 1929 as finally submitted to the committee exceeded the average of the estimates of these individual experts by over $45,000,000. I mention this in order to disprove the charge that has been made that the treasury deliberately errs on the side of conservatism."

Statements Challenged.

Mellon repeatedly challenged the accuracy of statements made by the chamber in advocating its tax program, and emphasized the care with which he said the treasury's plan was determined and outlined to the house committee.

"In my statement before the ways and means committee," he said, "I pointed out that the revenue from temporary sources must disappear in the course of the next year or two. The report of your committee answers this argument with the statement that 'similar predictions have been made in the past only to be disproved by later developments.' This is hardly worthy of a business men's report. How can receipts be realized from assets which no longer exist?

Receipts Lessened.

"Receipts from federal farm loan bonds and other minor securities amounted to $34,000,000 in 1926 and to $63,000,000 in 1927. The government holds no more farm loan bonds. Receipts from the war finance corporation assets amounted to $19,000,000 in 1926 and to $27,000,000 in 1927. The war finance corporation has been practically liquidated and not more than $6,000,000 can be realized from this source in the future. Receipts from railroad securities amounted in 1926 to $36,000,000, in 1927 to $89,000,000, and we will receive in 1928 probably $169,000,000. But in 1929 not more than $24,000,000 is anticipated from this source and after that little or no revenue can be expected under this head, for the very simple and good reason that only $49,000,000 principal amount of railroad obligations will be left out of the $230,000,000 held on June 30, 1927.

"The treasury's estimates as to expenditures are based on the figures furnished by the budget bureau, which submits them after a careful survey of the needs of all departments and bureaus and with complete knowledge of the appropriations to be recommended to the congress for the year in question. It must be noted that the estimates of expenditures submitted to the ways and means committee did not include increased expenditures which may result from new legislation such as flood relief.

Estimates Carefully Made.

"The present treasury estimates of receipts are based on a careful analysis of (1) probable receipts from miscellaneous sources in the light of past experience and taking into consideration the periods in which the proceeds of capital assets still in hand are likely to be realized; (2) a careful study of probable future tax collections on account of previous years, commonly known as back tax collections, based on the number of cases on hand, the current monthly rate of yield from this source, and an estimate of the amount involved in unsettled cases; and (3) insofar as current tax and customs receipts are concerned, on the assumption that neither in 1928 nor in 1929 will the yield fall substantially below that of the fiscal year 1927, in spite of the fact that business in the calendar year 1927 has not apparently reached the high level of 1926, a fact that must affect tax receipts for the last half of the fiscal year 1928 and the first half of the fiscal year 1929."

PIERSON ANSWERS MELLON'S ATTACK.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—A defense of the conclusions from the referendum on tax reduction by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was made tonight by Lewis E. Pierson, its president, in replying to Secretary Mellon. The treasury secretary, in a letter to Mr. Pierson, criticised the chamber's recommendation of a $400,000,000 tax reduction.

Declaring that the chamber had carefully considered its recommendations, Mr. Pierson said: "After all it is congress which wil pass on the tax bill—not the treasury department nor the national chamber." He expressed confidence that the measure will be in the best interests of the country.

In discussing the study of the tax problem by his organization, Pierson declared the chamber's taxation committee had examined the official estimates of expenditures and receipts for many years and "these estimates invariably have overstated the expenditures and understated the receipts." He cited that during the last five months official estimates of the 1928 surplus have been increased by $118,000,000.

Exceeded Estimates.

"Congress obviously has perceived this since passing the last three tax reductions," he continued, "despite forebodings of deficits, it has exceeded treasury estimates and still surpluses have steadily mounted."

The chamber's committee recommendations were overwhelmingly indorsed by the organization's membership," he said, "believing that the results would justify their conclusions. "The constituency of the chamber is a cross section of the country," he added, "and represents no special interest and no particular section."

Pierson said that the referendum presented all sides of the tax question thoroughly and that the taxation committee of the chamber was composed of both business men and a number of tax experts, "some of whom have been acting as advisors" both to the treasury department and to the congressional committees on taxation.

$2,000,000 LEASE BY AUTO LAUNDRY

cern and inventor and patentee of the multiple car washing system. Mr. Gillespie has been in Atlanta for a number of days arranging for the lease and construction work and will remain here to supervise the building, which is to begin immediately.

The service station when completed will cost $75,000, on the most conservative basis, Mr. Gillespie stated, it being the largest project of its kind outside of the stations built by the same interests on the Pacific coast. The outstanding feature of the undertaking is the Gillespie system of washing automobiles on a circular moving platform, with one car being placed on the platform every minute and another one, completely washed, coming off every minute, only 15 minutes being required for completed washing of each car. The washing of the car is divided into different phases similar to the assembly of automobiles in the Ford plants.

Second Largest Deal.

Marking a four-week period of hectic activity in the local real estate market, the two-million dollar lease is the largest transaction for the year with one exception, the Piedmont hotel lease, announced on November 13, it was pointed out by Mr. Sims, of the Hass & Howell Co. It is the second largest deal handled by the real estate department of Hass and Howell in a period of three days. In the other transaction announced Friday, properties valued at $600,000 were exchanged, including the Walton office building, the deal being negotiated jointly by John C. Baldwin, Jr., of Adams-Cates Co., and the Haas and Howell real estate department as agents.

The lease in the Ponce de Leon avenue lot was consummated on a sliding rental scale ranging from $13,000 per year to $22,500 for the first 50 years and continuing at $22,500 per year for the remainder of the 99-year term. The basic valuation on the property was taken as $1,000 per front foot on Ponce de Leon avenue. Surrounded on all sides by streets or alleys, the parcel measures 228 feet along Ponce de Leon and 203 feet on Juniper street. A residential structure now situated on a portion of the property is being torn down, with the necessary grading work and construction of the automobile service station to start immediately. It is to be completed and put into operation about the first of February.

On the west coast, where Mr. Gillespie first inaugurated his system, there are now seven plants in operation or under construction. Eight more plants are to be constructed in the large cities of the Pacific section under a franchise sold to the Tide Water Associated Oil Co. Recently eastern capital was attracted by the successful operation of the Gillespie system in the west and the company of which Mr. Gillespie is now vice president organized to develop the system in large cities throughout the country. In addition to the Atlanta plant the company is preparing to construct a similar plant in St. Louis. These will be the first of 200 more automobile service stations of the magnitude of the Atlanta station that the company plans to build in principal cities of United States, or sell franchises for use of its system.

Quick Service.

When the Atlanta plant is completed the cars to be washed will be driven into a building of dimensions 100x100 feet. On the inside they will be rolled onto a circular moving platform of 10 feet in width and revolving on a diameter of 92 feet. While the cars are being carried by the circulating conveyor numerous employees will perform their particular function in washing the car carried on in their zone of activity. About 36 employees will be engaged in the washing of cars alone. The huge conveyor will revolve at a rate sufficient for an unwashed car to be placed on it every minute, while a completely washed car comes off every minute.

In the lubricating department for which a special portion of the building will be devoted facilities will be provided for completely greasing a car in eight minutes, with three men on each lubricating rack. The Atlanta plant will have five such racks. The Alemite high pressure system operated by compressed air will be employed, grease being forced into the joints under pressure of 7,500 pounds.

Other services to be included in the novel enterprise that has gained the names where operating in the west of "department store of automobile service" and "automobile beauty parlor," are motor cleaning, chassis cleaning, snubber and shock absorber service, mechanical brake testing with three separate electric outfits costing $3,500 each, fender and body dents removing, front wheel alignment and axle straightening, valve grinding, tire service, battery service, accessories department and gasoline service station. There will also be a restaurant, cigar and news stand on the properties, while the office will be equipped with radio and panatrope connected to loud speakers installed throughout the plant.

Old English Architecture.

Floor space totaling 24,000 square feet will be provided by the building, which will be of old English architecture, according to plans now being drawn by Raymond C. Snow, local architect. From 75 to 80 persons will be employed at the station with a monthly payroll of approximately $10,000, and an average income for the station estimated at $25,000 per month. In similar plants as many as 566 cars have been washed in one day and 153 cars lubricated. The average for each station is 8,500 cars washed per month and 2,000 lubricated. The lubricating racks sell an average of 2,250 gallons of oil per month and use two tons of grease.

When asked why Atlanta had been chosen for establishment of the first plant east of the Rockies, Mr. Gillespie pointed out that Atlanta is the metropolis of the south and will serve as the most logical means of popularizing the system in this section. Similar plants will follow the Atlanta station in Chicago, Detroit and other large cities east of the Pacific coast, Mr. Gillespie stated.

Attorneys representing the Gillespie Auto Laundry System in the lease negotiations were Little-Powell-Smith & Goldstein, while Thornwell Properties, Inc., the lessors, were represented by Robert P. Jones. Thornwell Properties, Inc., is controlled by a group of prominent Atlanta business men, of which Ed Thornwell is president.

other truck at Courtland and Houston streets. The name of the driver of the other truck was not learned.

G. N. Holmes, of 466 Peachtree street, was shaken up when an automobile he was driving west on North avenue collided with another car which was going south on Juniper street. Neither car was badly damaged, it was reported, and the driver of the other car was not learned by police.

Frank Calominos, of 180 Georgia avenue, was struck down and slightly injured by a truck on Georgia avenue near Pulliam street. He was treated at Grady hospital, while police are investigating the accident.

Miss May Wright, of 1254 Stillwood drive, was slightly injured and her mother who was riding with her was shaken up and bruised when a car driven by Miss Wright collided with a car driven by L. S. Butler, of 830 Vedado Way, at Ponce de Leon and Moreland avenues. Patrolman E. J. Tuggle investigated.

man. If he erred in the administration of his high office it was solely out of an excess of loyalty to friends whom the world now knows to have been faithless. I am confident that before he departed for Alaska he had begun to suspect what these men had done to him and to the country, and that this suspicion contributed to his untimely death."

At the outset of his story Forbes denies that Harry Daugherty, whom he calls the "evil genius of the administration," was responsible for President Harding's nomination by the republican party in 1920. As early as 1915, Harding had been discussed as a presidential possibility by Theodore Roosevelt at a New York conference, which Forbes attended, he asserts.

Little Green House.

Sketching the "Ohio gang that Daugherty had brought to Washington" Forbes tells of many of Daugherty's transactions in the "little green house on K street." Apparently there was friction between Forbes and Daugherty, for the former veterans' bureau executive asserts that when he wished to do something to check narcotic traffic in federal prisons Daugherty blocked him.

"From my own recent experience in the penitentiary at Leavenworth," Forbes continues, "I know that the appalling evil which I described to him (Daugherty) still exists in our penal institutions. Narcotics can be had by any prisoner if he has the money to buy them."

"On one occasion," Forbes' story says, "I saw Jess Smith's office in the department of justice building $75,000 in $1,000 bills. The wind blew them off a table onto the floor and I helped to pick them up. Jess said they belonged to Daugherty."

Discussing Dr. Sawyer, "the country homeopathic physician who President Harding put into a brigadier-general's uniform," Forbes declares that Dr. Sawyer was the first man to reach him after he (Forbes) had been made director of the war risk insurance bureau by the president.

"Now lets do some real work," Sawyer greeted him, Forbes says, and promptly suggested that he "kick out" the medical director of the bureau, from then on, Forbes writes, Dr. Sawyer tried to dominate the bureau and its employees, establishing a "stool pigeon" system in the bureau and other departments of the government service.

BRITISH SHIP'S ATTACKERS ARE REPORTED HELD

Tulagi, Solomon Islands, December 3.—(AP)—Reports have been received here that Chief Nolu and several of his followers have been captured in punitive operations now going on as an outgrowth of the massacre of two British officials, 15 native police and the crew of the British steamer Auk at Sinarango recently. The two British officials killed were District Commissioner Bell and Cadet Lillies.

Large Manufacturer Offers 350 Free to Readers of This Paper.
A novel way of acquainting the public with a new kind of Raincoat is being introduced by one of the largest manufacturers in the country. This firm, The Comer Mfg. Co., Dept. NR-23, Dayton, Ohio, is now putting out Raincoats that they claim are far superior and entirely different from the old type of coat. Already thousands of this new style are being worn all over the country. The demand is so tremendous it is impossible for them to deal direct with the public. Therefore, they are appointing men in each locality to help them and offer a Raincoat free as well as an opportunity to make up to $100 a week and more. Men who need a Raincoat and want to make big money should write them at once.—(adv.)

League Arms Commission Adjourns to March 15

BY HENRY WOOD.
United Press Staff Correspondent.

Geneva, December 3.—The League of Nations' preparatory disarmament commission adjourned today until March 15, after a four-day session that may be remembered as marking the metamorphosis of Russia from a diplomatic stepchild into a full-fledged member of the family of nations.

Russia dominated the conference—her first disarmament one—from the opening day, and after a final bow went outside the meeting hall to tell the newspapers that at the next meeting she would announce her readiness to sign no-war treaties with any nation.

The Russians came here announcing that probably they would walk out of the meeting before it ended. Not only did they not walk out, but they suddenly changed their plans to depart today, and are staying on until Monday hoping that conferences may be arranged with Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign minister.

Russia Prominent.

A meeting with Chamberlain well might pave the way for resumption of British-Russian diplomatic relations which Britain severed a few weeks ago.

Russia, at the outset of the meeting, challenged other nations to disarm immediately and completely. She followed that up with a graphic picture of a brewing war that would make the world war look like a preliminary. Today the Russian delegation, in the spotlight until the last, protested against a long adjournment and demanded a meeting early in January to carry on the preparatory work that must precede actual limitation of armaments.

Now the meeting is over, and there is a two-day respite before the League of Nations council, or governing body, meets here Monday.

The council must decide, among other things, what to do about the intermittent and potentially chronic dispute between Poland and Lithuania over the Vilna district that Poland seized several years ago.

German Views.

Also Germany is expected to raise at the meeting, in some way, the question of revision of the Versailles peace treaty in her favor. She claims its surgical lopping of territory from her empire is one of the greatest menaces to peace.

But Russia interests everyone. She is not a member of the council, or even of the league, but she may play a leading role from back-stage at next week's important session.

Her delegates have played difficult roles with what generally is declared to be admirable skill. Russia's name has been on everyone's lips and in everyone's mind. There has been no burning of diplomatic red flares, and she has made no enemies. It is said generally that she is in better position diplomatically than she ever has been before.

A meeting between Maxim Litvinoff and Sir Austen Chamberlain might make all the difference between a Russia still outside the diplomatic pale and a new Russia, her bolshevik government a fully accepted fact, returning to take full part in the world's affairs on the world's side and not against it—or not with the world against her.

Hopeful Note.

The disarmament conference ended with a hopeful note.

Jonkheer London, Holland, presiding, and Paul Boncour, chief French delegates, jointly predicted that if all went well it would be possible to call a full disarmament meeting during 1928. It was indicated, however, that it would be the first of a series.

Nothing was said during the entire conference of recent predictions of league experts that it would take between 20 and 50 years really to disarm Europe.

The principal work of the conference was to appoint a security commission. The commission is charged with the task of drafting a form of treaty by which nations will guarantee help to each other in case one is attacked. If such a treaty could be drafted, it was argued it would cause any nation, however powerful, to pause before attacking another one until the League of Nations could mediate. Therefore, it was said, nations would have their fears of attack removed and would be willing to begin to disarm.

It was declared by French and other delegates to be illusory to hope that disarmament could precede establishment of real security.

Russia took occasion to disagree; and it is known that on that question at least Great Britain is with her, as is Germany—forced to disarm after her defeat in war.

Britain's cooperation may be difficult to obtain in effecting a security treaty. She fears it will be her navy that will do most of the work in the event of war.

From the American standpoint, one of the important features of the conference was the frank statement of the United States minister to Switzerland, Hugh R. Wilson, that America could cooperate in the work of the security commission.

The United States, Wilson said, must leave Europe to work out her own problems as America was working out the problems that arose before North Americans.

The statement did not cause surprise. Its importance mainly was in the clear-cut way in which America informed Europe—in diplomatic phrases—that she could handle by herself the wars she started herself. It was regarded as a development of a retort to complaints that the United States was late in entering the late war—that it was not America's war.

CHIEF OF MEXICAN REBELS EXECUTED

Laredo, Texas, December 3.—(AP)—General Francisco Bertani, rebel chieftain, captured by federal troops and taken to Minatitlan state of Vera Cruz, was executed last night, according to a statement issued by the Mexican presidential office and received today by the Laredo Times.

A. J. Dean's Trial In Bank Holdup Set for Monday

Decatur, Ga., December 3.—A. J. Dean will go on trial in DeKalb superior court Monday on a charge of robbery alleged to have taken place last December at the East Atlanta bank, when $7,500 was stolen. Judge John B. Hutchins will hear the case.

Dean was released Thursday morning from a year and a day sentence in the federal penitentiary for violation of the federal interstate motor vehicle act, was re-arrested by DeKalb county officers. Solicitor General Claude C. Smith, of the Stone Mountain circuit, stated that Dean was wanted by the authorities of the federal prison of San Quentin, Calif., for violating a parole and in Little Rock, Ark., for escaping prison.

Dean Thursday reiterated his story of the robbery, asserting that he and two companions, unnamed, entered the bank at East Atlanta and forced the cashier to bring the money from the vault.

Slander Letters Basis in Chicago Society Mystery

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—The Chicago society mystery, a suit filed by Mrs. Frank Townley Brown against Mr. and Mrs. Bror G. Dahlberg, unfolded today with the declaration that Mrs. Brown asks $200,000 because she was accused of writing "poison pen" letters about the Dahlbergs.

The letters, which Mrs. Brown contends Dahlberg and his wife said she wrote, were of a malicious nature. They were sent to newspapers and leaders in social and civic life.

On one occasion, avers Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Dahlberg said to be former, a guest in the Dahlberg home: "See this thing on my arm. It was given to me by the Spanish king and it means that if there is anyone I want killed he'll have it done for me, and my husband has enough money to put you out of the way without you being missed. We both know you sent these letters and others."

"There's that Brown woman; you know she's the one that wrote all those anonymous letters about me," another allegation in the declaration is charged to Mrs. Dahlberg.

GUARD IN DOUBT OVER SEIZURE OF CANADIAN BOAT

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 3.—Coast guard officials were wondering tonight whether they had stepped off their beat in seizing the Canadian trawler Newton Bay, with more than $300,000 worth of liquor for the approaching Yuletide aboard.

The coast guard cutter Gresham steamed late Friday afternoon through heavy fog going out to take her place in the rum patrol. During the night she sighted the Newton Bay as the trawler, seemingly bent on a Christmas mission of good cheer, struggled along with decks nearly awash from her cargo of 4,000 cases of whisky, champagne and other contraband.

The trawler was sighted off Blue Point, L. I., and official versions of the distance from shore vary. The Gresham fired two shots across the trawler's bow and finally overtook her after a seven-mile chase some 12 miles from shore.

The Acadia Shipping company, Ltd., of Quebec, owns the Newton Bay. The 14 members of the crew, with Captain John S. Nauffts, of Halifax, were taken before United States Commissioner Rasquin, who ordered the master, chief engineer and mate held, and discharged the others.

FLORENCE BUSINESS WANTS SHOALS SOLD

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—An effort to obtain action by congress this winter on the Madden bill designed to carry out the bid of the American Cyanamid company for Muscle Shoals is being made by representatives of the Florence (Ala.) Chamber of Commerce.

C. W. Ashcraft and W. F. McFarland, the two representatives of the chamber, today called upon Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, the democratic house leader, but declined to discuss their conference further than to say they had solicited his support for the measure.

The two men said they were visiting personal friends in congress and presenting the situation as it was viewed by the citizens of Florence, which town is near the shoals properties.

Attendance Contest.

The Barnes-Philathea class, attendance contest at the Center Hill Baptist church will close today and the winning class will be guests of the losing group at a banquet to be given. The Sunday school course being given by the Rev. W. F. Hinesley will close today.

Clearing Skies To Accompany Mercury Drop

Two days of incessant rain, broken in time to spare Georgia-Tech football fans a wetting, will be followed today with clearing skies and temperatures on a moderate decline, Weather Man C. F. von Herrmann predicts.

Wet weather varying from drizzle to downpour accounted for 3.15 inches of precipitation and dispersed a drouth that threatened winter cereals and spring plowing, Mr. von Herrmann said.

All day Saturday the mercury here clung to a low level, running from 38 to 40 degrees, while vast football throngs shivered and buttoned topcoats tightly against the promise of lowering clouds.

Fair and windy skies are expected this afternoon to start the temperature column on an upward trend again.

ROYAL AIR FORCE PILOT IS KILLED

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

London, December 3.—Another royal air force fatality occurred today when a plane carrying an observer and pilot, the latter named H. A. Lacy, crashed in a garden in Enfield. Both were killed immediately. The plane, which was believed to have belonged to the Hendre airdrome, was completely shattered and half buried in the soft earth.

SEARCH FOR CHILDREN, MOTHER IS EXTENDED

Asheville, N. C., December 3.—While Stella Wright, negro maid, was being questioned by officials of the juvenile court, police and county officials today extended their search for Mrs. G. Wallace Bryant and her two children who she is accused of having kidnaped from in front of a hospital here last Wednesday.

The negro, officials said today, was employed by Mrs. Bryant prior to the time Juvenile Judge Carl B. Hyatt ordered the Bryant children, Marjorie, six, and Frances, four, taken from their mother. About a month after the court action, the negro was employed as a nurse by Mrs. Addie A. Floyd, in whose care the children were placed, and it was she who was in charge of the children Wednesday evening when Mrs. Bryant took them.

Police today telegraphed descriptions of Mrs. Bryant and the children to police at Atlanta, Philadelphia and Detroit. Mrs. Bryant was described as a striking blonde with bobbed hair and large brown eyes and is about five feet one inch tall. She was described as being handsomely dressed.

Mrs. Bryant and her husband became estranged some months ago, and Bryant, a nephew of Henry Ford and a patient in a sanitarium here, sued Henry Westall, wealthy Asheville clubman, for $100,000, alleging alienation of Mrs. Bryant's affections. Mrs. Bryant and Westall denied the charges. The juvenile court after a hearing last summer, however, decided Mrs. Bryant was not the proper person to care for the children and took charge of them. They were to be permitted to see their father daily and their mother once a week.

On Wednesday afternoon the nurse took the children to the hospital to see their father. As she left Mrs. Bryant met her and asked her to take a note to Bryant. When the negro left Mrs. Bryant entered a taxicab with the children and left. Leaving the cab in front of a hotel she and the children have not been seen since.

Bryant today declined to make public the contents of the note used by Mrs. Bryant to lure the maid away. He said he wished as little publicity as possible.

Wheeling, W. Va., December 3.—(AP)—Dr. William K. Kelly, wealthy Wheeling dentist, was named defendant in a $100,000 suit for alienation of affections today by William T. Kirchner, an official of the Wheeling Mold & Foundry company, who charged the dentist and Mrs. Kirchner were arrested together in a mountain cabin and a fine imposed.

Kirchner declared Dr. Kelly transferred his affections to Mrs. Kirchner after the dentist's wife obtained a verdict for $12,000 from Mrs. Elizabeth Fink, to whom, it was charged, Dr. Kelly made love six years ago. Mrs. Fink and Mrs. Kirchner are sisters.

CINCINNATI SOUTHERN ADDITIONS PLANNED

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Applications which would result in extensive additions and betterments to the Cincinnati Southern railroad were laid before the interstate commerce commission today by the Southern railway system, which leases the Cincinnati Southern from the city of Cincinnati.

The applications explained that under agreements made the Southern railway proposed to extend its lease on the Cincinnati Southern from the year 1966 to the year 2026. In consideration of its extension, the city, which now obtains an annual rental of $1,000,000, will be given an increased rental on a sliding scale ranging from $1,250,000 per year to $1,700,000 per year, which will be the sum payable during the last years of the lease.

When the lease extension is approved, the Southern said, it would be enabled to go forward with its extension of the Cincinnati Southern rails from Williamstown to Danville, both in Kentucky, at a cost of $13,700,000.

DALTON CITY RACE IS WELL CONTESTED

Dalton, Ga., December 3.—Candidates for city offices, in the municipal election which will be held here Wednesday, December 14, are unusually active on the home stretch, and considerable interest has been aroused.

Needlework Guild Here Offer To Help Andy Dispense Billion

GUMP DOLLARS CAN BE LEFT PROFITABLY IN ATLANTA

One billion dollars!

Yep, as Andy Gump has it, "that's a lotta money."

And the philanthropic Mr. Gump, with his billion dollars to dispense to charity, has been offered an excellent opportunity to leave some of the too-many dollars right here in Atlanta. Mr. Gump received the following communication from the Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild of America:

"Mr. Andy Gump:

"The citizens of Atlanta are on the qui vive since the announcement that a portion of your fabulous wealth is to be distributed in our city. At a recent meeting of the Atlanta branch of the Needlework Guild of America, the members agreed that you would be vitally interested in the scope of this organization.

"As you doubtless know, the guild each year sends useful garments to 40 charitable institutions throughout Atlanta, including every sect and color. These garments are obtained by solicitation, two garments, or the equivalent in money from an individual constituting membership in the guild, and it is a 100 per cent charitable organization, having no overhead expense.

"Now, we realize, Mr. Gump, that you are far too busy a general to purchase garments yourself, but if you would be big-hearted and give us just a few of the bags stored in your vault, we would endeavor to relieve you of some of the harrowing anxiety attendant upon the disposal of your marvelous wealth."

Eight Sailors Rescued.

Galveston, Texas, December 3.—(AP) Eight men were rescued from the disabled schooner Marston by the Japanese steamer Calcutta Maru, said radio advices received by the agents of the ship here today. The Calcutta Maru is due to reach here Monday. Time and location of the rescue was not given. No record of the schooner Marston is available here.

ANTI-GOVERNMENT RIOT STAGED BY PORTUGUESE

Madrid, December 3.—(United News.)—Violent anti-government disturbances occurred in Lisbon Thursday, it was learned today, during the celebration of the anniversary of Portuguese independence.

Students rioted and shouted "down with the dictator" when the automobile of Premier Carmona passed them.

One hundred students were arrested in clashes with the police.

GENERAL IBANEZ, CHILE PRESIDENT, WEDS IN SANTIAGO

Santiago, Chile, December 3.—(AP) General Ibanez, president of Chile, was married today to Senorita Graciela Letelier Velasco, daughter of Ricardo Letelier, in the first wedding of an executive in office in the history of the country.

The couple were married at the Church of St. Augustine in the presence of members of the diplomatic body and of high officials. Great crowds thronged the streets to watch the procession after the ceremony.

Pope Pius sent a benediction through Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state.

COOLIDGE INCREASES DUTY ON CHERRIES

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The duty on cherries, sulphured or in brine, stemmed or pitted, was increased by President Coolidge today from two to three cents a pound under the flexible provisions of the tariff act.

NEW JERSEY FIRM SELECTS ATLANTA

Selection of Atlanta for southern department headquarters of Johnson & Johnson, one of the world's largest manufacturers of absorbent cotton and gauze and medicinal supplies, was disclosed with the consummation of a lease on a big commercial building from the Massell Realty company to start at the first of the year, according to announcement by Fred T. Newell, secretary of the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. The aggregate rental involved in the lease is $180,000.

The southern department will include executive offices and warehouse facilities for distribution purposes in serving the states east of Texas. James E. Churchwell, now a member of the sales organization at the home office of Johnson & Johnson, in New Brunswick, N. J., will be in charge of the new department.

Details of the lease were given out by S. A. Massell, secretary of the Massell Realty company. The Massell company is now erecting a three-story brick structure to be known as 64, 66 and 68 Walker street, according to specifications furnished by the firm of Johnson & Johnson, which leased the property from the Massell company for a term of 20 years at an annual rental of $8,000 for the first 10 years and $10,000 for the succeeding 10 years, Mr. Massell stated. The building will contain approximately 20,000 square feet of floor space. It is located on a site measuring 75 by 140 feet in the center of an important industrial section of Atlanta and served by shipping facilites of the Southern railroad. The structure is expected to be completed by January 1, with the lessors to take immediate possession of it, Mr. Massell said.

Particular significance is attached to the establishment of southeastern headquarters here in view of the fact that Johnson & Johnson has just completed and is now operating near Gainesville, Ga., one of the most complete and largest mills of its kind in the country, manufacturing medical and hospital supplies. The mill and mill village near Gainesville represent an expenditure in the state of Georgia of more than $6,000,000. The plant itself is valued at $3,500,000.

In commenting on the important move, Mr. Churchwell remarked, "We are establishing the southern department so we may be of greater service to our southern business affiliations. We will be able to give closer sales cooperation and quicker delivery service. With shipments going from Atlanta instead of from New Brunswick, dealers will get the benefit of lower transportation costs."

Edward Hefner, of the home office, will accompany Mr. Churchwell to Atlanta to become office manager, it was stated.

In authorizing the announcement of the southern headquarters for Johnson & Johnson in Atlanta, Georgia D. Johnson, of the firm, made this statement: "The national advertising campaign of the city of Atlanta has kept the city and state of Georgia before our officials and executives."

FOLDER TELLING OF GEORGIA SWEET POTATOES IS USED

The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, cooperating with the state bureau of markets in an effort to increase the use of the Georgia sweet potato, is enclosing in every letter sent out by the executive officers of the chamber an attractive folder concerning the sweet potato.

This circular names the sweet potato as "Georgia's Golden Yield Crop." It tells of the high nutritive value of the sweet potato and the many different ways in which the sweet potato may be prepared, stressing its low cost, which places it within the reach of all.

George West, president of the chamber of commerce, is deeply interested in promoting the use of Georgia products within her borders and beyond. This is in high accord with the state bureau of markets in establishing Georgia farmers as exporters of food products.

Presidents of chambers of commerce in other large cities in the state will be called upon to cooperate in this movement.

NEELY TO SPEAK AT LAWYERS' CLUB MEETING FRIDAY

The monthly meeting of the Atlanta Lawyers club will be held Friday night at 5:30 o'clock in the breakfast room of the Kimball House, with a program which is slated to make the meeting the best attended of the year.

"Administration of the Bond Fund," a subject which officials of the club state to be of vital importance to every citizen of Atlanta and especially to the Atlanta bar, will be the subject of the principal address, to be delivered by Frank H. Neely, general manager of M. Rich & Bros., company.

A supplementary program of music and entertainment will be presented under the direction of John B. McCallum, vice chairman of the entertainment committee.

Given Pen Term.

William O. Eden, alias half a dozen other names, pleaded guilty Saturday morning before Judge Samuel H. Sibley, in United States district court, on charges of passing forged postoffice money orders, and was sentenced to three years in the Atlanta federal penitentiary.

picture portrays what actually happens in many instances where lump sum payments are made to beneficiaries by trust companies, and emphasises necessity of income payments of monies replacing incomes, it was announced.

Two well-known New England bankers appear in the cast, which otherwise is composed of professionals. Robert Clark, a star of the "Vagabond King," takes the role of insurance counsellor, while Phil Crane, the family head in the picture, is played by George Van Beusen, often called Milton Sill's double. The wife is played by Muriel Campbell, who has a prominent part in the production of "Broadway."

E. F. KEHELEY TO FACE TRIAL EARLY IN YEAR

E. F. Keheley, Marietta street restaurant proprietor, who was indicted Friday by the Fulton county grand jury on a charge of murder in connection with the death of Loren Leister, 12, will go on trial in Fulton superior court early in January, according to announcement Saturday from the solicitor's office.

Keheley is alleged to have fired the shot which on Halloween night entered the brain of the Leister youth. After a valiant fight which continued for a month at a local hospital, the child succumbed Wednesday. He was passing the restaurant with some of his boy friends when the pistol of Keheley is said to have been discharged inadvertently during a quarrel with a friend.

The defendant has been held in Fulton tower in default of $10,000 bond since the shooting on a charge of assault with intent to murder. Following the child's death he was indicted on the murder charge.

COUNCIL GETS FOOLEY SCHOOL BID ON MONDAY

Approval of the bid of the Howard P. Foley company electrical bid Monday by city council will assure early start on the first five schools to be constructed from bond funds, according to predictions Saturday.

The bid has the approval of the Atlanta board of education, the bond commission and will go to council with a favorable recommendation of the school committee of council.

Other routine matters also will be considered by council at Monday's session.

Members of council have intimated that the Foley bid will be accepted, and that work will be begun Monday or Tuesday on the first of the projects by the Palmer-Spivey company, of Augusta.

Projects involved are an addition to Hoke Smith Junion High school, new buildings for Ormewood, Capitol View, Stanton and Davis schools.

AD CAMPAIGN ON, NYAL PLANNING BIG SALE DRIVE

On the heels of a nation-wide advertising campaign launched in a great number of the most prominent newspapers of the country, Stanco Distributors, Inc., selling organization of the well-known proprietary, Nujol, is planning an extensive selling drive.

Stanco Distributors, Inc., has just concluded its annual sales convention, according to the house organ, Flit News. These are said to have been "the largest in number of men attending and the most enthusiastic in point of spirit in the history of this fast-growing company."

The big Nujol newspaper campaign is now running in a long list of newspapers reaching between 5,000 and 10,000 cities. This is the largest newspaper campaign ever run on Nujol and is reported in more detail in other columns.

Stephens Statue Unveiling Mecca For Pilgrimage

Outstanding Leaders of State to Honor Confederate Leader Thursday in Washington.

UNIQUE CEREMONY FOR GEORGIAN

Headed by Governor Hardman, Large Atlanta Delegation Will Leave City Tuesday.

BY PAUL STEVENSON.

Half a century after Alexander Stephens, only vice president of the Confederacy, rounded out his distinguished career as a statesman, thousands of sons and daughters of Georgia will gather Thursday in Washington to unveil a statue of the immortal leader in Statuary hall in a unique ceremony of tribute to one of the ablest and greatest men ever produced by the comparatively young nation known as the United States of America.

When the delicate draperies drop away Thursday, disclosing the beautiful marble figure of the famed Georgian, a throng of people which will include some of the outstanding leaders of the Georgia of today will stand in solemn ceremony and dedicate this contribution to the nation in behalf of more than three million loyal and patriotic citizens of this country.

Headed by Governor Lamartine G. Hardman and his official staff, a huge delegation will leave Atlanta Tuesday afternoon from the Terminal station on a special train over the Southern railroad for the nation's capital to carry out unveiling ceremonies which will focus the eyes of the nation on Georgia and on the career of the patriotic and noble Georgian who devoted his entire life to the service of his country.

National Figures on Program.

Distinguished national leaders will join with the Georgians in paying homage to the career of the great Stephens. Charles G. Dawes, vice president of the United States; Gutzon Borglum, internationally famed sculptor; United States Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia; Dr. Garnett Quillian, of Atlanta; Dr. Sam W. Small, Constitution Washington correspondent, and Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, Atlanta minister, will deliver addresses on the program.

The beautiful statue, a gem of art, carved from Georgia marble by Gutzon Borglum, the noted genius of art of his generation, will be unveiled by Miss Ida Stephens, great-grandniece of Alexander Stephens, and Sam Venable Mason, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Mason, of Atlanta.

In the carving of this noted statue, Mr. Borglum has devoted some of the ablest efforts of his able career in producing a masterpiece which will stand for ages and ages as a monument to the beloved Confederate leader, to the sculptor himself and to the people of Georgia.

Borglum Gave Services.

Mr. Borglum, who conceived the original design for the Stone Mountain Memorial to the Confederacy, presented his services as sculptor free to the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy. He will be present formally to present these services as a part of the ceremonies. The marble for the statue was furnished by Sam Tate, of the Tate quarries, at quarrying cost while other expenses were paid by Mrs. J. M.

12 SCHOOL BOARD MEMBERS OPPOSE NEW AMENDMENTS

Go on Record Against Proposed Measures to Make Member Ex-Officio Councilman Veto.

Eleven of the 12 members of the Atlanta school board are opposed to both proposed city charter amendments on which Atlantans will vote Tuesday, and which would vitally affect administration of Atlanta public schools, according to a signed statement released Saturday bearing the signatures of board members. Commissioner Jim W. Maddox of the fifth ward is the only member of the board who failed to sign the paper.

The proposed amendments would make the chairman of the schools committee of city council an ex-officio member of the board with all rights and privileges of a regular member of that body. He would be permitted to vote, to take the floor in any issue and would be given the same rights as any other member.

Under the second proposal the board would submit to the mayor for his approval the budget of the school system for the entire year before the tenth of January. The mayor would have the right to pass upon the budget and vto it if it failed to meet with his approval. The board could override the veto by a two-thirds vote, but in case of a deadlock the city comptroller, the chairman of the fi-

Plenty A-Doing!

PEASANTS REFUSE BRATIANU'S OFFER

Action Leaves Rumanian Political Situation Deadlocked; Position of Carol Not Yet Determined.

Bucharest, December 3.—(AP)—The national peasant's party tonight rejected all conditions proposed by the liberals for formation of a national cabinet under presidency of a non-political personage.

It was known yesterday that Dr. Juliu Maniu, leader of the national peasants party, had decided to reject the proposals of Premier Vintila Bratianu for the formation of a national union cabinet.

The peasants party was asked to define its attitude toward the return of former Crown Prince Carol, but it took the position that this could not be defined without ascertaining the real sentiment of the people and the army toward the disinherited prince.

The refusal tonight leaves the Rumanian political situation deadlocked, as it has been since the death of Premier Ional Bratianu.

DEFEAT SUFFERED BY PROGRESSIVES

Wisconsin Committee Names Supporters of Administration on National Committee.

Madison, Wis., December 3.—(AP)—Progressive republican forces suffered a crushing and unexpected defeat today when the state central republican committee nominated two supporters of the national administration to represent Wisconsin on the national committee of the party.

Surprising the progressives who for many years have dominated republican politics in the state, anti-La Follette members of the committee obtained the nomination of George Vits, Manitowoc manufacturer, and Mrs. Harry E. Thomas, of Sheboygan, to fill the places on the national committee that have been vacant for three years.

Using its narrow majority, the anti-La Follette members obtained the passage of a resolution indorsing the "splendid business-like administration of national affairs under the able leadership of President Coolidge." It was the first time in two decades that the state party committee has recorded its approval of the national administration.

In nominating Mr. Vits and Mrs. Thomas for the national committee, the majority defeated the efforts of the La Follette group that backed Herman L. Ekern, former attorney general and defeated gubernatorial candidate, and Mrs. Rose Meyers, Sauk City, secretary of the state committee.

The action by the committee is subject to ratification by the republican national committee, but political leaders predicted the state committee's recommendations would be approved.

Girls Willing To Trade Ears For Fur Coats

Mother Is Ready To Sell in Order To Pay Her Bills.

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—Fur coats, expensive gowns and the plain economic necessities of life are more important to a score of American men and women than a left ear.

The twenty who have said they are willing to sell their left ear to a New York and Chicago society woman whose attorney said she is willing to pay from $2,500 to $5,000 for one to replace the portside aural appendage she lost in an automobile accident, made known their reasons and offers today.

Every few hours the attorney, Jay J. McCarthy has received a call, wire or letter from girls and men from various parts of the country.

Typical of those girls who would sell their ears for money was Miss Doris Clarke, who came to Chicago three months ago to make a living and didn't succeed as she anticipated.

"I'm tired of being without money, the nice dresses and the fur coat most Chicago girls have," she told a newspaper reporter. "I think a fur coat will do me more good than my little old left ear."

Those needing necessities were typified by a young mother who said she would be willing to sell her ear so she could pay pressing bills. A war veteran also wanted to sell his for necessities "as nobody cares how I look anyhow."

$91,000 NEEDED FOR OGLETHORPE

More Workers Needed, Officials of University Endowment Fund Drive Assert.

With the past week bringing the enlistment of many new workers, the Oglethorpe university endowment fund campaign to raise $250,000 in Atlanta to match an equal gift by J. T. Lupton, of Chattanooga, Tenn., will get under way again Monday morning with a total of $91,000 remaining to be subscribed.

The crying need of the drive is more workers, officials announce, and immediate success of the campaign is seen provided more workers are obtained to engage in the actual work of soliciting subscriptions.

Indicative of the fact that there are hundreds of Atlantans who have not subscribed simply because they have not been approached are the numerous by-mail subscriptions received at campaign headquarters in the Henry Grady hotel during the campaign.

The past week saw the enlistment of a special committee of six members which were delegated by the Civitan club to assist the other workers in the drive. Sidney Wellhouse is chairman of this committee, which is expected to make a great report at the luncheon meeting Monday at 12:30 o'clock in the Henry Grady hotel.

Particular importance is placed on the necessity of Atlanta accepting and meeting the challenge of Mr. Lupton, a Tennessee man, who has offered $250,000 to be matched by an equal amount by Atlantans, to erect a memorial to the founder of the state of Georgia.

"Atlanta cannot let this challenge go unheeded," Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe, said Saturday, "the principal subscription and the largest financial aid that Oglethorpe has received comes from a citizen of Tennessee, and the money has been given expressly for the purpose of erecting a memorial to Georgia's greatest man."

"Georgians realize too little the mighty things that Oglethorpe did for Georgia. He not only founded the state, but he gave to its citizens then, and to the citizens of a hundred years to come, a code of social and moral laws that have stood the test of time."

GILES, 'ALL IN,' WILL TAKE REST

British Airman Abandons Plan To Fly Biplane From San Francisco to New Zealand.

San Francisco, December 3.—(AP)—Declaring he was "run down, all in" and that he would "take a long rest," Captain Frederick A. Giles, British aviator who planned to fly a biplane from San Francisco to New Zealand, announced here late today that he had definitely abandoned the project. He said his backer, W. H. Rosewarne, of Detroit, probably would advocate continuance of the flight with another pilot.

U. S. SEEKS PEACE IN MINE FIELDS

Secretary Davis Calls Conference of All Labor Department Agents of Conciliation.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Serious consideration was given today by federal government agencies to the problem of restoring peace and renewing production in the northern bituminous fields.

Secretary Davis called in for conference all of the labor department's agents of conciliation in coal controversies and gave the day to a study of conditions they reported, with the possibility apparent that representatives of the industry would be summoned for additional discussion.

The outlook for the calling of such a meeting was held out more strongly when it became known that the labor secretary late last night had invited into conference with him the spokesmen for the coal miners' union, particularly those from Pennsylvania, Ohio and northern West Virginia territory. Among those he talked with were John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers; Philip Murray, vice president, and Thomas Kennedy, secretary; Lee Hall, president of the Ohio district; P. F. Fagan and James Mark, presidents of two union districts in Pennsylvania, and Van Bittner, who represents the union in northern West Virginia.

All of the union contingent left Washington today, declaring that they had furnished the labor department chief with information upon the suspension of mining which began in that territory last April when general wage agreement expired.

TWO G. O. P. FACTIONS ARE AT ODDS ON EVE OF CONGRESS SESSION

LOCAL WHOLESALE BUSINESS AT PEAK OF $534,645,200

Retail Trade Eclipses Total of Many Larger Cities, According to Census Bureau Report.

Women of Atlanta spend more for hats and hoisery than those of nine other cities selected by the United States census bureau for a detailed survey of general sales distribution, according to a report released Saturday through the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce, of which Fred T. Newell is secretary. Total wholesale trade amounts to $534,645,200, says the report.

A voluminous survey of sales, merchandise outlets, number of establishments, employees, wages and investments compiled for the government by the United States Chamber of Commerce reveals the following facts about Atlanta, as related to other municipalities.

While this city has but 38 cigar stores, the weed may be purchased in 827 establishments, including gasoline stations and butcher shops. Annual tobacco sales aggregate $3,000,000 here, and are reported from candy, coal and wood, drug and fruit, hay and feed, grocery and vegetable dispensaries.

The Versatile Jewelry Store.

Jewelry stores here purvey books and stationery, musical instruments, sporting goods and hardware, as well as diamond solitaires, while women's underwear is offered to customers along with pearl necklaces and platinum brooches.

While the city's annual hosiery and millinery sale is $2,000,000, sale of women's outer attire is considerably less in proportion to other cities.

The combined report shows that the larger portion of the retail dollar goes for food products, clothing, automobiles and home furnishings. Atlanta squanders 28 cents about the business of eating, 20 cents for clothing, 14 cents on automobiles and 8 cents on its home.

Meat and poultry sales are less, proportionately, in Atlanta, while those of candy, ice cream, soft drinks and other forms of light nourishment are larger, the report says.

Chain Stores Important.

Chain stores purvey 30 per cent of the city's merchandise, while those of Denver sell but 20 per cent, Baltimore 22 per cent and Syracuse 14 per cent.

Retail sales effected in 3,749 establishments here totaled $177,782,800. There are 1,013 chain stores and 2,736 independent concerns.

Local department stores sell less goods in proportion to Denver or Baltimore, while this city has a larger wholesale business. This totals $534,000,000, or three times the retail trade here.

The city's largest wholesale business is in cotton and yarn, with automobiles second, groceries third and electrical supplies fourth. More than one-fourth of this total is in cotton products, the survey shows.

Wholesalers Pay Less.

Less was paid out in wages by Atlanta wholesale establishments than in other cities, or about 4 cents on the trade dollar, as against an average of better than 6 cents elsewhere.

More than 10,000 retail merchandise outlets are revealed by the survey.

EMORY APPEALS LOSS OF $70,000

Battle for Emma Slaughter Bequest Will Be Carried to Kentucky's Higher Courts.

Emory University, Ga., December 3. (Special)—Emory university will fight for the $70,000 taken away from it and given to W. H. Wyman, of Mayfield, Ky., by a decision of Judge W. S. Hester in Mayfield circuit court recently, it was learned Saturday.

Colonel W. D. Thomson, Emory attorney and vice president of the board of trustees, said Saturday that the case had been appealed to a higher court in Kentucky, but that, due to calendar congestion in this body, it might be 1929 before it comes up for hearing.

The $70,000 involved was given to Emory for use in aiding medical students by a codicil to the will of Mrs. Emma J. Slaughter. It constitutes the greater part of her estate. W. H. Wyman is a nephew of Mrs. Slaughter.

Emory contends, Colonel Thomson said, that in a will drawn in 1906 Mrs. Slaughter said that if her nephew lived with her and cared for her she would will her fortune to him at death. In the contested codicil Mrs. Slaughter says that Wyman has not lived up to the stipulations, and therefore she willed the $70,000 to Emory.

Wyman holds that this will, on which the codicil is based, was drawn in July, 1906. In August of that same year, he says, Mrs. Slaughter willed her property to him, thus invalidating the will on which the codicil was formed.

Prison Yawns For Students In Colorado

National Guard Seek to Prevent Collegians Visiting Mine Areas.

Denver, Colo., December 3.—(AP)—Students of the University of Denver were threatened with arrest as military prisoners today if they attempt to conduct or address meetings of striking coal miners at or near the Leyden mine, near Denver.

Announcement of the contemplated action was made by Major Alphonse P. Ardourel, commanding national guardsmen at the mine, following reports that a group of students planned to visit the Leyden property. The mine is in the area affected by the I. W. W. strike of coal miners in Colorado.

At the state capitol it was said that Major Ardourel had warned university officials to keep the students away from the Leyden mine.

"I was not warned to keep them away," Acting Chancellor Engle of the university said. "I was merely advised they were planning to go up there. I replied that if they were it was not under university auspices and that the university had nothing to do with it."

Chancellor Engle said he would take no action if the students did go.

Major Ardourel said today that "documents found on 'Wobblies' show that I. W. W. is making a concentrated drive on the universities, and they claim they had had the most success at Denver university."

BLAKELY COUPLES' POISON TRIAL SET

Harris and Gussie Hayes Face Hearing for Alleged Murder of Two Sons.

Blakely, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—An elderly couple face trial in Early county superior court here next week on murder charges in connection with the deaths of their two sons and a daughter-in-law.

Harris Hayes and his wife, Gussie Hayes, were indicted here on October 12 after the state chemist and physicians had found traces of sufficient poison to kill in the viscera of the three persons.

The first death was that of James Hayes on June 16. His brother, Amos, came here from Detroit to attend the funeral and soon afterward became ill and died on July 9 in a Dothan, Ala., hospital. During his illness he told a nurse that he had a wife and child in Detroit, unknown to his parents, and requested her to see that the couple gave them a home.

Mrs. Amos Hayes arrived here with her infant son on August 21 and died ten days later. The woman's parents in Detroit notified a welfare worker there who informed a Blakely minister that she believed the young mother did not die of natural causes. The investigation followed.

INSURGENTS CALL FOR QUICK ACTION ON BIG MEASURES

Regulars Will Make Every Effort to Give Them Assurances Desired Before Senate Opens.

SENATE CONTROL IS NOW AT STAKE

Democrats May be Forced to Fill Subordinate Offices Despite Disinclination to Do So.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Republican party leaders of the senate and five of the western republican independents found themselves still apart tonight on questions involved in the organization of the senate at the opening session of the seventieth congress Monday.

Although Senator Curtis, of Kansas, the majority leader, gave his personal assurance that every effort would be made to have early votes on certain measures enumerated by the independents he was asked to obtain such assurance from the senators of the republican majority.

The views of the two contending groups were set forth in an exchange of letters today which left the next move in the hands of the republican leader, who is expected to make his reply before the senate attempts to organize.

No Threat in Letter.

While there was no threat in the letter of the independents asking for speedy action on farm relief, limiting jurisdiction of the federal court in issuing injunctions and an inquiry into the American policy in Latin-America, their only alternative to a refusal by the republicans to meet their demands would be an effort to upset the program for organization of the senate.

Besides giving assurances of his personal efforts to obtain votes on these three measures, Senator Curtis wrote the independents that he could not see why they should fear that any of the proposals would be "pigeonholed in committees" since, if the republicans organized the senate, the committees which would handle them would be directed by independents, McNary, of Oregon; Borah, of Idaho, and Norris, of Nebraska.

In reply, the five independents—Frazier and Nye, of North Dakota; La Follette and Blaine, of Wisconsin, republicans, and Shipstead, farmer-labor, Minnesota—said they had confidence in the committee chairmen, but that the chairmen could not report any measure or resolution unless authorized to do so by a majority of the committee.

Promise Is Sought.

"In order that we may be assured that the committees to which these measures will be referred will report upon them to the senate," their letter said, "we request that you obtain an assurance from the republican members of the foreign relations, the judiciary and agriculture committees that they will assist in reporting to

Girl Dynamite Plot Victim To Recover From Injuries

:: BARS MARRIAGE TO FORMER SWEETHEART ::

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Ottawa, Ill., December 3.—"Oh, I can't believe he did it. I can't believe it. We loved each other so."

That agonized whisper, filtering through the mass of bandages which envelop the head of Miss Iola Bradford, 23-year-old school mistress of Dana, Ill., was her first reaction today to the information that her injuries were the result of a charge of dynamite placed in the schoolhouse stove by her sweetheart, Hiram Reed, 24-year-old son of a Mossville, Ill., farmer.

Reed is in the county jail here, after making a full confession to the plot to kill the school teacher. His motive was to avoid a marriage with Miss Bradford, he said, inasmuch as she was to have become a mother within a few months. Miss Bradford will not die, her physician said today, unless an infection sets in. She had sufficiently recovered strength to be told the cause of the explosion which mangled her chest, arms and face as she was lighting a fire in the stove last Thursday morning.

Behind a pretty face, which now will be scarred for the remainder of her life, the school teacher possesses a keen mind, it was revealed in an interview. With unusual courage, she admitted that she had scorned the conventions and expressed no regret for doing so. She said frankly that she had been madly in love with Reed for two years.

"I made up my mind long ago that if I married anyone it would be Hiram," she said. "He was my ideal of a man. And I took my part in a love affair with open eyes.

"Three months ago I advised him that my physician advised me I would become a mother. He seemed to be frightened, but finally he seemed resigned to the affair, and Wednesday night he called late to see me. It was one proof of his love that he had to drive 40 miles from Mossville to my sister's home near Dana. We talked together until 1 o'clock in the morning. He said he would marry me Sunday, and that he had already bought a ring which he would send me the next day. I was so happy when he finally left."

According to his confession, Reed went immediately from his meeting with the girl to the schoolhouse a few hundred yards down the road and placed dynamite in the stove, adjusting a fuse so that the school teacher would light it when she started a fire in the morning. "I was thinking of nobody but Hiram as I walked to the schoolhouse next morning," continued Miss Bradford. "I was so happy I was singing. When I got to the schoolhouse, a dozen children were already there. I sent them out to play while I fixed the fire. I touched a match to the firewood and was stooping over, adjusting the draft, when the explosion occurred. I was able to stagger as far as the door and then fell unconscious. I don't remember any more."

The wounded girl was informed that Reed hoped to avoid prosecution for his deed by marrying her upon her recovery.

"Marry him?" she repeated doubtfully. "If he really did that, I would hardly be safe marrying him. But it still seems almost impossible to believe. It wasn't like him."

Reed today made a half-hearted attempt to repudiate his confession of Friday. But he finally told interviewers to quote him as sticking to his original confession. "No one would believe me anyway," he remarked dolefully.

"Big Bill" Edwards, Gridiron Star, To Be Married Soon

:: POPULAR CLUBMAN TO WED SCHOOL TEACHER ::

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 3.—A bachelor, at 51, William H. (Big Bill) Edwards, one of Princeton's most famous football players in by-gone years and one of the most popular clubmen in New York, is to be married. The future Mrs. Edwards is Mrs. Norma Jones Steelsmith, a school teacher of Mount Vernon, N. Y.

Their engagement was announced today by Judge and Mrs. R. G. Popham, of Merengo, Iowa, brother-in-law and sister of Mrs. Steelsmith. The wedding will take place at the Hotel Commodore on January 2.

Big Bill and his bride-to-be met at a ball a year and one half ago at the Hotel Commodore, which has been his residence for years.

Mrs. Steelsmith, a handsome brunette, is 35. She is a graduate of the Francis Shirmer school, Mount Carroll, Ills., the University of Iowa and Drake university. For the last four years she has taught at Siwanoy school, Pelham, N. Y.

Edwards, since winning gridiron fame at Princeton, has been much in politics and identified with sports. He was street cleaning commissioner under Mayor Gaynor. President Wilson appointed him collector of internal revenue in New York. He is a pro football magnate and partner in an insurance firm.

Doty, Held Incommunicado, Is Shipped to Marseilles

:: RELEASED FROM LEGION, BUT STILL GUARDED ::

Oran, Algiers, December 3.—(AP)—The French Foreign Legion tonight still had Bennett J. Doty, of Biloxi, Miss., under its control, and he was still "Gilbert Clare," the name under which he enlisted, despite notification of his release.

Regardless of the technical release given him at Sidi-Bel-Abbes yesterday, he was aboard the tramp freighter Tafna tonight somewhere south of the Balearic Islands, reduced to the regular ration of thin soup.

The French military authorities are going to take him at his word that he wants to go home and place him aboard a New York-bound liner at Cherbourg or Havre. His colonel told him he was free yesterday at Sidi-Bel-Abbes, but his sergeant told him otherwise here and he is being chaperoned as far as Marseilles on the way home.

Doty had expected to sail in a nice cabin aboard the crack steamer Gouverneur General La Ferriere, which his friends had reserved for him. Late last night, however, there came an "economy" order from some one higher up that legionnaires being returned to France, should be shipped by the slow freighter Tafna. The regimental officers here, having no leeway, obeyed orders and sent Doty with the rest, still virtually as a prisoner, disregarding the fact that Doty's passage would be paid by friends if he went on the liner, thereby saving the French government any expense for his fare.

Doty will arrive at Marseilles about noon Monday, and there he and the others will report under military escort at Fort St. Jean, where he enlisted. He may be held there for two or three days as military red tape is slow in untangling.

Doty had no time to get some "city clothes" he had planned to buy this morning. When he left he was still wearing the army's gift suit of civilian clothes, which is anything but tailor made in its appearance.

The American member of the legion, who won honors in fights with Druse rebels in Syria, and faced with fortitude the prospect of a firing squad for desertion, came close to rebellion when a non-commissioned officer aroused him in his barracks this morning and told him he must forsake for three days his newly gained liberty.

"I won't go," Doty shouted at the sergeant, but his sense of discipline instilled by 30 months of service with the hard-boiled foreign legion asserted itself. He got up, got himself ready and went docilely down into the hold of the freighter Tafna.

Despite strictness of discipline and the presence of officers, Doty managed to send a note to The Associated Press correspondent on the back of an old envelope telling of the sudden change in orders.

"They are shipping me aboard the Tafna," said the note. "Please push down to the dock."

French officers here, however, said they had to obey orders and could not let Doty travel on a passenger vessel. The officers seemed to look upon Doty's release as a bad precedent for the legion, where discipline is extremely severe.

It had been understood that Doty would be delivered to Alfred Elford, American consular agent, who had a letter supposed to contain money for Doty's passage home. The change in plans, however, prevented Doty seeing Elford and the legion started without funds.

OKLAHOMA SOLONS TO IGNORE COURT

Oklahoma City, Okla., December 3. (AP)—In the face of an adverse decision of the state supreme court, leaders of a movement to investigate the administration of Governor Henry S. Johnston announced late today that the state house of representatives would convene in special session next Tuesday as planned.

The supreme court ruled this afternoon that the legislature has no inherent right to meet on its own motion and that if a session were held any acts of the body would be "without authority of law."

Challenging the authority of the judicial branch of the government to interfere with asserted rights of the legislative branch, sponsors of the session, which has been called by four house members, declared the supreme court ruling would be ignored.

Representatives of a majority of the house membership, in issuing the session call, reiterated after being advised of the court decision that the house would meet regardless of court opinions.

Session proponents contended that the legislature is inherently endowed with power to convene itself at any time to inquire into alleged abuses by either the administrative or judicial branches. Governor Johnston, a democrat, whose administration is under fire by members of his own party, had definitely refused to call a special session.

Attorneys here expressed the belief that today's ruling was the first time a state supreme court had definitely passed on whether a legislature can meet on its own call.

"The powers of the legislature are such as are given it expressly, or by clear implication, in the constitution," the supreme court held. "In the absence of a constitutional provision authorizing the legislature to convene itself, it cannot do so, and any acts or intended acts of a member, or members thereof, if so assembled, are without authority of law, whether it be for legislative or inquisitorial purposes."

The supreme court, however, sustained the district court of Oklahoma county in refusing to enjoin leaders of the session movement from filing expense claims or issuing subpoenaes in connection with the session.

ORLANDO MAN CHOSEN TO HEAD FLORIDA MOOSE

Sarasota, Fla., December 3.—(AP)—Harry Gauthier, Orlando, was elected great North Moose for Florida at the annual state meeting of Seminole Legion, No. 81, Loyal Order of Moose, at its state convention here late tonight. He succeeds A. O. McIntosh, St. Petersburg. Charles S. Wadsworth, Sarasota, was elected South Moose, succeeding Mr. Gauthier. Other state officers elected tonight were J. Dale, Orlando East Moose; Sam Feinberg, Tampa, West Moose; Joseph T. Guffy, Jacksonville, treasurer; H. L. Miller, Palatka, guiding Moose; J. A. Coon, Sarasota, Argus; S. R. Billingsly, Ocala, custodian; Judge J. C. Madison, Jacksonville, delegate to the supreme convention, and Joseph Vehley, Jacksonville, herder.

The convention city for 1928 will probably be named by the executive committee. The state Moose convention opened here this morning and continues through Sunday. Prominent Moose officials from various sections of the nation are expected to arrive here tomorrow for the session.

BANDITS HOLD UP GROCER AND GET $45

M. Marion, 54, of 288 South avenue, who operates a grocery at Fraser and Fulton streets, was taken to Grady hospital late Saturday night with a flesh wound in his left shoulder, as the result of a gun battle with three armed negro bandits.

Mr. Marion told police that he had noticed the negroes standing around in front of his place, and when several customers had left, the negroes entered with drawn pistols. He secured his own pistol and fired and the negroes returned the shots, one of the bullets striking him in the shoulder. He was not badly injured. The bandits escaped with $45 in cash.

SCHOOL AMENDMENT MEETS OPPOSITION

nance committee of city council and the board would administer school funds.

Following is the communication signed by all members of the board.

"Atlantans on December 7 will be asked to pass a city charter amendment giving the mayor veto power over the expenditures of the board of education and appointing a member of council ex-officio member of that board.

"We are quite willing for council to know our every act and think we should cooperate with council in every way possible, but we feel constrained to point out that the ex-officio member of the board will give the ward from which he comes two representatives on the board and two votes in that ward's favor on all questions.

"This would be manifestly unfair to the other wards and we can not see how any ward can approve it.

"We would be entirely willing to have the mayor present at all our meetings to report back to council, but without a vote or veto power. We make this statement solely in justice to our respective wards. ((Signed)

STEPHENS UNVEILING IS NATIONAL EVENT

High, prominent woman philanthropist and publicist of Atlanta.

United States Senator William J. Harris, senior senator from Georgia, will preside at the ceremonies. He will have as his associates at the ceremony members of the Georgia delegation in congress, members of the Georgia societies of Washington and New York and other distinguished Georgians now engaged in various capacities in the governmental service at the capital.

Organizations which will join with the Atlanta chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy in the ceremonies will be the general organization of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; the Colonial Dames of America; the Order of the Crown; Daughters of Barons of Runnymede; Daughters of the American Revolution; Daughters of the American Colonists; Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America; American Red Cross society; United Daughters of 1812; Children of the American Revolution and various auxiliary organizations.

Large Delegations Going.

Atlanta will send a large delegation representing officially the city of Atlanta, while Fulton county will be represented by delegates. Various cities of the state will send special delegations to the ceremonies including Crawfordville, the old home town of Stephens where the statesman lies buried and where his old home "Liberty Hall," is preserved by the citizens as a patriotic shrine.

Alexander H. Stephens was a statesman of the old school, he was broad and tolerant in his views but an aggressive fighter for the principles he thought were right. He began his career as a member of the Georgia legislature and soon rose to a post in the congress of the United States. In congress he foresaw the bitter struggle coming between the north and the south and he fought aggressively the movement to secede from the union.

After he saw that secession was inevitable he accepted a place as a delegate to the provisional Confederate congress held at Montgomery, Ala. He declined to let his name be used as a candidate for the presidency of the Confederacy, but consented to accept the vice presidency as a move to promote harmony between opposing forces in the south.

Became Governor.

Stephens served ably as vice president of the Confederacy and as there will never be another Confederacy, he will go down in history as the only vice president of that government. He was imprisoned for a short time by federal forces at the end of the war and it was due to this prison life that his health was shattered. He returned to Georgia after the war between the states and soon was elected to serve again in congress. His last public office was that of governor of Georgia. He was elected governor in 1883 and died three months after he was inaugurated.

In addition to the official delegations named from the state at large, many cities will send large delegations to the ceremonies. Atlanta will send a large delegation with Henderson Hallman, of Atlanta, as chairman. Cadet corps from Emory university and other institutions will make the trip. Many people will make the trip over the Seaboard Air Line and Georgia railroads which have arranged special accommodations.

Committee's Selected.

Selection of three important committees to assist in prosecution of the pretentious program as a feature of the unveiling ceremony was the outstanding development in completion of arrangements Saturday.

Hundreds of prominent Georgians will make the pilgrimage to the nation's capitol to pay homage to Georgia and the south's famous son, who, despite physical infirmities, scaled the heights of statesmanship, wrote his name large in the history of the confederacy, and whose literary and oratorical activities stamped him as one of the outstanding figures of American history.

Thursday is the day on which Stephens will be officially recognized by the state which he served so faithfully. A statue of the illustrious Georgian will be placed in the hall of fame and senators, presidents, governors, congressmen, military units, educational institution heads and scores of other persons from all walks of life will pay tribute to the vice president of the confederacy.

President Calvin Coolidge will welcome the Georgia party at the white house at noon Thursday. Wreaths will be placed on the statues of Theodore Roosevelt, Abraham Lincoln, Woodrow Wilson and the grave of the unknown soldier by the Georgia delegation.

Units representing the state militia, the Old Guard Confederate veterans, historic military organizations, and schools and colleges of the state will entrain for Washington at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning. The special committee and other citizens will leave on a fast Southern train for Washington at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

Cadets to Attend.

More than 300 Georgia Military academy cadets are to entrain Tuesday morning. The trip will be the sixth accepted invitation to Washington as a military escort to represent the state in a like capacity. The entire unit of 300, with the battalion band, are arranging to entrain on the special train.

Colonel J. C. Woodward, president of the school, is also chief of staff to Governor L. G. Hardman, and will be in charge of welfare of the cadets. He will be assisted in his work by the regular army officers attached to the school.

Major R. T. Taylor, professor of military science and tactics at Emory university, has been placed on detached service status to enable him to conduct a detachment of R. O. T. C. students to Washington.

The Roster of the Detachment.

Cadet Major W. H. H. Jones, commanding; Cadet Captain L. D. Little, platoon commander; Cadet Captain F. W. Carpenter, adjutant and acting quartermaster; Cadet Captains Colin M. Smith, J. R. Glenn, R. B. Barling.

Color Sergeants—J. A. Jacobs and W. P. Layton.

First Sergeant—C. H. Bramlitt.

Sergeants—Bill Tuller, C. C. Cox and J. R. Turman.

Corporals—Fred H. Hadley, W. F. Sibley, P. C. Lynch, W. J. Winn, J. H. Green, W. P. Blackwelder, J. F. Nixson and J. G. Stowe.

Gunby, G. M. Heard, R. P. Jackson, S. H. Mauldin, M. A. Mitchell, R. A. Moncrief, A. J. Mooney, W. P. Mullin, C. O. Murphy, O. C. Puckett, J. N. Reid, B. L. Spencer and J. W. Stone.

Hallman Committee.

Mr. Halman anounced the personnel of the committee to receive the governors, which will go from many of the southern states to attend the exercises, as folows:

Former Senator Hoke Smith, chairman; ex-Governor Hugh Dorsey, Thomas W. Hardwick, Nat Harris, John M. Slaton and Clifford Walker, Jack Caritiners, F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson, Denny Peteet, T. T. Williams, Robert and Henry Troutman, Arthur Lucas, Dr. Harvey W. Cox, president of Emory university; Dr. M. L. Brittain, president of Georgia Tech; Colonel J. C. Woodward, commandant of the Georgia Military academy; Boyd Harris, John D. Little, Dr. Thorawell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe university; Carling Dinkler, Holland Judkins and W. C. Royer.

A commitee headed by Colonel H. A. Caruthers, of Winder, will be in charge of the veterans, who will journey to the nation's capitol to join in the ceremony.

Other members of the committee as named Saturday by Mr. Hallman are Charles Nunnally, vice chairman; L. L. Griner, Jack Mullis, Cochrau; M. M. Bryan, Jefferson; Ed. Maddox, Rome; Marion Smith and Cecil Cannon.

Mrs. W. Trox Banksion, president of the Georgia diviison, United Daughters of the Confederacy, has named the following delegation to accompany her to Washington, D. C., next week to officially represent the Georgia division, U. D. C., at the unveiling of the statue of Alexander Stephens in the Hall of Fame:

Mrs. H. O. Ball, Jackson; Mrs. Izzie Bashinski, Dublin; Mrs. W. H. McKenzie, Montezuma; Mrs. H. A. Craig, Augusta; Mrs. J. J. Harris, Sandersville; Mrs. L. T. D. Quinby, Atlanta; Mrs. W. G. Coleman, Atlanta; Mrs. Frank Harrold, Americus; Mrs. Edgar Alexander, Atlanta; Mrs. Powell Cotter, Bargesville; Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, Montezuma; Mrs. C. H. Leavy, Brunswick; Mrs. Horace Holden, Athens; Mrs. J. L. Hodges, Perry; Mrs. George F. McLeod, Abbeville; Mrs. C. F. Hunt, Thomson; Mrs. R. E. Everitt, Covington; Mrs. Charles Tillman, Quitman; Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison; Miss Lillian Henderson, Atlanta; Mrs. John A. Perdue, Atlanta, and Mrs. J. M. High, Atlanta.

Madison Bell's many friends regret exceedingly that the serious illness of his mother, Mrs. Mary Bell, prevents his attending the exercises. Mrs. Bell continues desperately ill at the Piedmont hospital. Mr. Bell first suggested that Georgia be represented in the Hall of Fame in 1901 and was to have had a prominent place on the program.

The official program of the ceremonies as announced by the Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, names the following sponsors: Misses Josephine Hardman, Lelia Venable Mason, Rose Quillian, Marjorie Woodward and Elizabeth Perdue. The governor's statuary committee is announced as follows: Dr. Garnett Quillian, chairman; Mrs. J. M. High, Mrs. Frank Harrold, Mrs. Horace M. Holden and A. L. Henson.

The statuary committee of the Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, is composed of the following: Mrs. John A. Perdue, chairman; Mrs. J. M. High, Mrs. Frank T. Mason, Mrs. Charles T. Phillips and Mrs. Stafford Seidell.

Official Program.

The official program was announced as follows:

1. Invocation, Dr. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of First Presbyterian church, Atlanta, Georgia.
2. Address by Gutzon Borglum in presenting his services as sculptor to the Atlanta chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy.
3. Unveiling of the statue by little Miss Ida Stephens, great grandniece of Mr. Stephens, and Sam Venable Mason, young son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank T. Mason, of Atlanta.
4. Address, Alexander Hamilton Stephens, by Garnett W. Quillian, M. D., of Atlanta, Ga., in presenting the statue to the state of Georgia, in behalf of the donors.
5. Address by L. G. Hardman, M. D., governor of Georgia, in presenting the statue to the United States of America.
6. Acceptance of the statue in behalf of the federal government by Honorable Charles G. Dawes, vice president of the United States.
7. Response by Honorable Walter F. George, junior senator from Georgia.
8. Benediction—Dr. Sam W. Small, of Georgia.

United States flags—Mrs. L. G. Hardman, Mrs. Charles Byrd, Mrs. J. C. Woodward, Mrs. A. P. Brantley.

Georgia flags—Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, Mrs. Robert K. Rambo.

DALTON SELECTS TWO DELEGATES.

Dalton, Ga., December 3.—Congressman M. C. Tarver and Miss Mary Louise Horan have been appointed delegates to represent Dalton at the unveiling of the monument to Alexander H. Stephens in Washington, December 8.

MACON SCHOOLS TO HAVE PROGRAM.

Macon, Ga., December 3.—In practically every school in this county on Thursday there will be informal exercises in which the children will be told of Alexander Stephens and of the unveiling of a statue in his memory in the hall of fame. The United Daughters of the Confederacy of this city expect to be represented at the Washington ceremony.

WAYCROSS DELEGATES ARE ALSO SELECTED.

Waycross, Ga., December 3.—Waycross will be represented at the unveiling of Alexander Stephens' statue in Washington, December 8, by Jack Williams, of the Waycross Journal-Herald; Lee Herrin, of the Waycross Georgian; W. D. O'Quinn, president Waycross Chamber of Commerce; J. G. Valentino, superintendent of city waterworks, and Calvin W. Parker, Georgia public service commission member.

MEMBERS OF U. D. C. FROM MILLEDGEVILLE.

Milledgeville, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Mrs. R. W. Hatcher, president of the Nancy Hart chapter of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. Martha Sibley and Miss Florine Allen are expected to represent Milledgeville at the unveiling of the monument to Alexander H. Stephens in Washington Thursday. Secretary J. L. Sibley, of the Milledgeville Chamber of Commerce, is at present endeavoring to form a party of several citizens.

HUNDREDS FLEE HOMES AS FIRE APPROACHES

Los Angeles, December 3.—(AP)—A brush fire starting in the mountains between Burbank and Tujunga, northwest of Los Angeles, raced out of control tonight before a 30-mile wind and was believed to have consumed numerous houses. Reports from La Crescenta county ranger station said hundreds of persons fled their homes.

HALLMAN THANKS UNVEILING FUND CONTRIBUTORS

Henderson Hallman, grand marshal of the Georgia delegation which will unveil a statue in Statuary Hall, Washington, Thursday in honor of Alexander Hamilton Stephens, Saturday expressed gratitude at the patriotism and public spirited demonstration of Georgia Power company officials and other leading Atlanta and Georgia concerns for augmenting the fund to send a large delegation to the national capital for the ceremony.

A shortage was imminent Friday and Mr. Hallman made the condition known to officials. They responded by making voluntary contributions which will enable the headquarters at the Ansley hotel to function without being embarrassed on account of finances.

"I just want to say a word of thanks to these officials," Mr. Hallman said. "They have demonstrated their interest and patriotism, and have relieved an otherwise exceedingly embarrassing situation."

RADIO COMMITTEE TO BE ASKED OF CONGRESS

Washington, December 3. —(AP)—Radio has become such a factor in American life that Representative Sol Bloom, democrat, New York, will ask the house to create a standing committee on radio and broadcasting.

"At present, all bills relating to radio and broadcasting are referred to the committee on merchant marine and fishers," Bloom said today. "Even if this were an appropriate committee to deal with proposed radio legislation, it is likely to be so engrossed with merchant marine legislation at this session that if it were also required to devote the time that hearings and the drafting of bills relating to radio and broadcasting would require, it would be unable to give either radio legislation or the merchant marine problem the time both merit."

LOCAL WHOLESALE BUSINESS AT PEAK

and complete details of each class of commodity are supplied. Large sales of books and stationery in five and ten-cent stories, and radio sets and supplies in auto accessory concerns are reported.

Department stores here lead in sale of women's wear, but are far behind with their sales of men's clothing. They sell more children's wear, and less shoes and millinery than specialty shops.

Chief articles sold in department store are, in order of volume: Women's outwear, dry goods and notions, house furnishings, women's hosiery, children's and infants'.

Survey Valuable.

Commenting on the census, Ivan Allen, chairman of the forward Atlanta commission, said that "a real government survey is nearly 100 per cent perfect and worth a lot to business men if they will take the time to study it. This particular survey has changed many of our opinions about Atlanta.

"To my mind the item of outstanding significance is the report showing a wholesale trade here of $534,645,200, and that Baltimore, a city of nearly three times the size, does a wholesale business of but $502,646,400. Yet we have always looked to Baltimore as one of the great jobbing centers of their section.

"This detailed statement, taken so carefully by the government, proves more than anything else the pre-eminent position of Atlanta, the gate city of the southeast, and its manifold advantages as a center of distribution."

The recently compiled survey may lead to a national census of distribution, according to Alvin E. Dodd, manager of the national chamber's distribution department, which prepared the Atlanta report. Mr. Dodd thinks that nothing is more necessary to the business man than a knowledge of sales—buying ability reflected in actual purchases.

G. O. P. INSURGENTS DEMAND ASSURANCES

the senate the three measures mentioned."

Earlier in the letter, the independents asked Senator Curtis to obtain from the senators of the republican majority the assurance that they will assist in obtaining a final vote on the measures before the adjournment of the first session of the new congress.

Should Senator Curtis acquiesce in this request, the independents' proposals would have to be submitted to the republican conference which is to be called to pass upon republican appointments to the standing committees of the senate.

There will be no difficulty for the republicans to organize the house with the relection of Nicholas Longworth, of Ohio, as speaker, but the republican old guard in the senate has a problem on its hands in seeking to pacify the western independents.

Moses Renominated.

Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, has been renominated by the republicans as president pro tempore and probably will be reelected, but a situation now is shaping up whereby there is a possibility that the democrats will have to fill the subordinate senate offices even against their own desires.

While a good start has been made on the legislative program, especially by house committees, none of the many measures with which the new congress will have to wrestle will find particularly easy sledding once they have left the barrier in the house. This will be due in a measure to the extremely narrow division between the republican and democratic membership in the senate, where the balance of power is held by the western independents, who have their own firm ideas as to the precise form the major measures should take.

Senators and representatives find now that the tax revision bill has been put in shape for house action; a number of the annual appropriation measures are ready to be reported and a good start has been made on flood relief, one of the most important of all the problems that face the new congress.

Politics Paramount.

Since house rules permit limitation of debate, there will be little difficulty in getting the important bills through that body, but there will be a wholly different story when they reach the senate. Many of the bills, including the tax measure, undoubtedly will be rewritten there.

Political questions will enter into the consideration of practically all legislation and in this pre-presidential campaign session political speeches, wherein the republican administration will be attacked and defended in turn, necessarily will slow up the legislative machinery.

While the house will begin to function in a more or less serene atmosphere, senate will open with a fight on its hands. This will be over the question of admitting Senators-elect Smith, of Illinois, and Vare, of Pennsylvania, republicans, both of whom are under fire because of campaign expenditures.

Admittedly neither has any chance of obtaining the majority necessary to insure them a seat, but friends of each are determined to fight and these contests probably will drag on for weeks. Republican leaders apparently were making little progress in efforts to obtain an agreement whereby the fights could be deferred until after organization of the senate.

Unless there is such an agreement, organization of the senate might be held up for several days. Until it is perfected congress can not receive President Coolidge's message and proceed with work ahead of it.

Boston Cardinal Condemns

ARCHBISHOP SAYS COST OFTEN MEANS FEW PRAYERS

Ornate Funeral Customs

Boston, December 3.—(AP)—Ornate funerals have come under the disapproval of William, Cardinal O'Connell, Roman Catholic archbishop of Boston.

Gaudy caskets, large floral offerings and other trappings of modern funeral practice are too often linked with neglected prayers and graves, the cardinal holds in a letter published in the current issue of the Pilot, official organ of the archdiocese. It is to be read at all masses tomorrow.

"Some of our Catholic people spend great sums, oftentimes entirely out of proportion to their incomes, on elaborate caskets and the profusion of flowers and then bury their deceased only to be quickly forgotten while the flowers decay and with them the remembrance of their dead," the letter says.

"This conduct is un-Christian and a great departure from the simple customs, both of old Christian times and of the Christian countries of our day.

Attempt Childish.

"In Christian times coffins were of simple wood regardless of the social condition of the deceased; the dead were clothed in simple garb and there was no embellishment of flowers, which indeed, may bring profit to some, but means nothing to the repose of the souls of the departed.

"The attempt to cover up the real meaning of death by gilding its surroundings is childish. It is more pathetic when we consider the neglect of the final resting places of the deceased.

"The Catholic church grants a great privilege to her children in permitting them to be interred in consecrated ground and it is a crying shame for Catholics to bury their relatives in this blessed soil and then forget all about them."

Conditions Imposed.

The letter reveals that the cardinal has directed all priests and superintendents of cemeteries to see to it that no monuments or stones be erected in the future on graves for which there has been no provision for perpetual care.

They are reminded that "graves are not property in fee simple of those holding them but are legally regulated by the by-laws of the cemetery."

Cardinal O'Connell recently criticized other funeral practices especially the use of the hymn "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere" in Catholic obsequies. His action provoked favorable comment from a number of leading Protestant rectors who agreed that the words were "inane" and "meaningless."

Christie Flanagan's Brother

:: "BUT I HAVE NO BROTHERS," SAYS CHRISTIE ::

Makes Big Raid on Americus

Americus, Ga., December 3.—He said he was a brother of Christie Flanagan, of Notre Dame football fame. Now Americus high school students are shaking their heads, as are some Americus merchants. But whoever this Eddie Ba Flanagan that Americus knew, students and merchants alike are not a bit slow in admitting that he was a smooth youngster—even if he did leave a pack of cold checks in his wake.

About 18 and a good mixer, he did not have the least trouble enrolling in the Americus High school. His credits he promised to produce shortly. The girls liked him, the boys thought he was a good fellow.

Then came the football game with Albany. Flanagan played. All Flanagans must play football! But this Flanagan contrived to suffer a smart rap which rendered him unconscious. He called and called for Christie. Christie was on his dips between groans—Christie—Christie.

After that it wasn't so hard to make friends—that is, he made friends much easier than he had. Merchants took his checks. He was allowed to board indefinitely with his bill unpaid, because he said that his parents were moving to Americus shortly. His parents, he said, were Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Flanagan, of Port Arthur, Texas.

But eventually his checks began their boomerang. At this stage young Flanagan made his exit.

Last night his "friends" had completed their "locking of the barn door after—" when they wired Christie Flanagan at Notre Dame.

"I have neither brothers or sisters," laconically came the reply from South Bend—and it came collect.

PRISONER FREED, RANSOM UNPAID

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)

Chicago, December 3.—Ransom of $75,000 was demanded for the release of Morris Roisner, of Minneapolis, one of the country's leading bootleggers, but after three days of captivity, he was released tonight, following the arrest of a dozen men believed implicated in the plot.

Roisner said his booze syndicate affairs were in no way responsible for his abduction. He came to Chicago, he said, because of a message to him that he could buy $200,000 worth of jewelry recently stolen in Cleveland. The price to him was $75,000, he told police, and his captors evidently believed he woul dhave that amount on him when they seized him last Thursday night as he left the Bismarck hotel.

But despite the story told by Roisner the police theory was that the incident was the aftermath of a huge booze conspiracy trial in Cleveland in which 112 persons were indicted. Roisner, said to have been one of the leaders, plead guilty and was sentenced to a year and a day at the Atlanta (Ga.) penitentiary. Because some of the men arrested while police were searching for Roisner were suspects in similar abductions, principally those of Jake Adler and Frank Lawler, owners of the Frolics Cafe, and that of Abe Scharlin in New York, the police did not altogether accept Roisner's version of his adventure.

The prisoners included Abe Ginsberg, a lawyer of Minneapolis, and Charles Grosscurth, of Chicago, both of whom are said to be members of a powerful booze syndicate.

STEAMER SINKING WITH CREW OF 26

New York, December 3.—(United News.)—The disabled steamship Paraguay was in a sinking condition tonight 55 miles off the Georgia coast while another steamer, The Harvester, braved mountainous seas searching for the unlighted hulk aboard which 26 men were fighting for their lives.

The Paraguay reported at 9:30 p. m., that its electric lighting system had failed and the wallowing freighter was in darkness.

Independent Wireless informed the United News at 9:45 that the Harvester reported the Paraguay's radio signals seemed to be getting stronger and it was believed aboard that they were very near the Paraguay.

It became plain that the master of the Harvester was risking his own vessel's safety in his efforts to reach the disabled Greek freighter. The condition of the sea in the region was making it a hazardous business to cruise in circles as the Harvester reported it was doing after reaching the Paraguay's last reported position shortly after 9 p. m.

The wind was described as roaring with gale intensity from the north almost directly against the Gulf stream, kicking up mountainous seas. The Harvester radioed that it experienced difficulty in putting about after running past the supposed locality of the Paraguay.

POWER COMPANIES MERGER APPROVED

New York, December 3.—(AP)—With approval of stockholders, Southern Power company and Great Falls Power company have been merged into the Duke Power company, which will conduct their business. Duke Power company heretofore owned nearly all of the capital stock of the two companies.

Kontz Is Donor Of Stephen's Capitol Painting

Relection of Judge Ernest C. Kontz as one of the committee to unveil the Alexander H. Stephens statue is a fitting mark of respect to the famous Georgian, it was learned Saturday.

Judge Kontz is the only surviving member of those who were present with the vice president of the Confederacy at the time of his death, and was a close personal friend of the celebrated statesman.

A portrait of Stephens now hangs in th egovernor's office at the state capitol. It was donated to the state by Judge Kontz, and Mr. Stephens sat for the painting when he was 46 years old. The condition on which it was presented was that it should remain in the governor's office.

Mr. Stephens and the late Anton L. Kontz, brother of Judge Kontz, were close personal friends and their friendship was spread to the judge and ripened into a beautiful companionship during Mr. Stephens' last years.

"Georgia never produced a more valuable, a greater or a more humane man than Mr. Stephens, my old friend," Judge Kontz said Saturday, in paying tribute to the memory of the illustrious southerner. "He was one of the closest friends I ever had, and he deserves all the love, admiration and honor which this great state can heap upon his memory. I am proud that my native state is recognizing him as one of her two leading sons."

MOTHER

A Cross, Feverish Child is Bilious, Constipated

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

When cross, irritable, feverish, or breath is bad, stomach sour, look at the tongue, mother! If coated, give a teaspoonful of this harmless, "fruity laxative," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food passes out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. When the little system is full of cold, throat sore, has stomachache, diarrhea, indigestion, colic—remember, a good "inside cleansing" should always be the first treatment given.

Millions of mothers keep "California Fig Syrup" handy; they know a teaspoonful today saves a sick child tomorrow. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups printed on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here, so don't be fooled. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."—(adv.)

President Buys Health Seals

Little Mona Laurent, child health crusader, is shown calling on President Coolidge at the white house to present him with his annual supply of Christmas seals sold by the Tuberculosis association to raise funds to combat the disease.

COOLIDGE SILENCE ENCOURAGESHOPES

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Convinced that President Coolidge does not intend to be "smoked out" for an amplification of his Black Hills statement, the bulk of the republican national committeemen who are assembling here for next week's meeting to select a convention city, entered more boldly today into discussions among themselves about others available for the party's presidential nomination.

Although most of them came here hopeful and some of them expectant that the president's position would be made more clear to them in some manner, a large number of those on the ground have come to the conclusion that it is useless to look for a white house elaboration.

Accordingly, they have begun cautiously to feel each other out on the best course to pursue after the committee meeting adjourns and it is the opinion of some of the most prominent members that the only thing to do is to go back home with the word that the field is open to any one.

It is the judgment of some, in fact, that this conclusion will be the most notable result of the meeting which in previous years has led to the laying of campaign plans, but many believe that while the situation will tend to clear itself as time progresses, conditions at the opening of the primary election campaign will be on a more delicate basis of political understanding than in other recent presidential years.

A significant angle of the discussions of possible candidates is that they are confined largely to the few men who have been mentioned most frequently for the nomination. Outside of Curtis, of Kansas, the names heard most often continue to be Hoover, Dawes, Lowden and Hughes, with the vice president the second choice of nearly all of the committeemen who declare one of the other three is most popular in their localities.

The most pronounced diversion from what appears to be the general trend toward considering it useless to look for a further word from President Coolidge as to his own future was the emphatic statement of Representative Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the republican congressional campaign commmittee, that the president would be the next candidate.

MARINE FLIERS LAND IN HONDURAS

Miami, Fla., December 3.—The Tropical Radio Telegraph company here received a message late today from its station in Tela, Honduras, stating that Major E. H. Brainard and his two companions on what was to have been a non-stop flight from here to Managua, Nicaragua, landed safely on the beach at Tela, Honduras, at 5:11 p. m.

Two messages were received in close succession. The first read:

"U. S. monoplane passing. Evidently looking for landing field. Our field flooded. Heading toward Ceiba. Will keep you advised."

The second read:

"U. S. monoplane just landed safely on beach at Tela."

The commandant of the naval station at Key West corroborated the story of the landing and added the information that good flying weather was experienced throughout the trip.

Tela is approximately 250 miles from Managua, by the air route. According to the radio company's report of the time of the landing, Major Brainard and his aides were about three hours behind their projected schedule when they arrived at the Honduran coast town.

They had expected to make the whole flight of 1,035 miles in ten hours which would have put them over Managua at 4:22 p. m., eastern standard time. The plane's top speed is about 125 miles an hour, which would allow a little more than two hours for the Tela-Managua leg. They landed at Tela almost an hour after the projected arrival in Managua.

Mussolini Releases Political Prisoner On Plea of Mother

Bologna, Italy, December 3.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini, taking the first step in a promised measure of executive clemency for political offenders to mark Christmastide, has given freedom to a printer on the plea of the latter's mother.

The aged woman wrote the premier that she was in grave danger of dying without seeing him again. The printer, Alceo Degli Espositi, was imprisoned last August for the clandestine production of anti-fascist tracts and manifestos. On reading the letter, the premier ordered the man freed.

REED COMMITTEE TO DELAY MEETING

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—After conferring today with a number of his colleagues, Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, chairman of the much discussed senate campaign funds committee, announced that he would not call that body together pending action by the senate to determine its status.

In the closing days of the last session a resolution by Senator Reed to continue the committee during the recess of congress was held up from passage by a determined filibuster in which Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, and Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, were the moving spirits. Senator Reed of Missouri said that while he expected a new resolution would be introduced he would not sponsor it.

Until the senate acts the request of Samuel Insull, Chicago public utilities official, and his attorney, Daniel F. Schuyler, for an opportunity to purge themselves of contempt charges will be held in abeyance. If the committee is continued no doubt they will be afforded another chance to tell the names of the other candidates in the Illinois primary last year to whose campaigns Insull made contributions.

Recalling that Insull and Schuyler already had had two opportunities to reply to questions, Senator Reed indicated that he was perfectly willing to have the senate proceed with contempt cases against them.

While Insull and Schuyler may purge themselves the senate is likely to go ahead with the contempt case against Thomas W. Cunningham, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Pennsylvania republican state committee, who has declined to tell the source of the $50,000 he contributed to the senatorial campaign of William S. Vare.

MAFIA RULE ENDS IN LAND OF SICILY

(Copyright, 1927, for The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Rome, December 3.—The dreaded Mafia, which for 60 years has sneered at the law and governments of Italy, has passed out of existence in Sicily. The last of the criminals who composed it already today are standing in the big cages in the courtroom at Palermo on trial for their transgressions. Many have been convicted. Other Mafia criminals have fled from Italy, many to the United States, where, under favorable political conditions, they are trying to set up the same machine of crime and terror which they have learned to use since childhood.

The Mafia criminals in Palermo are receiving for the first time in their lives a fair trial. The judges and jurors have been specially selected so that they might not be influenced by the terror which the Mafia ruthlessly cultivates throughout Italy. In years past when a member of the Mafia was accused of a crime the judges, jurors and state witnesses in the case and their families were subjected by violent threats of reprisals unless the accused was set free. When an extraordinarily brave judge and jurors rendered a verdict against a number of the Mafia, their homes were bombed or burned down and they and their families became the object of a desperate vendetta, which usually ended in their death or exile. State witnesses were assassinated or kidnaped. Women were dishonored without compunction. There was not even a check to this jungle tyranny of crime. In 1920 Premier Giolitti tried to stop it and failed utterly.

The man now behind the iron rod of chastism in Sicily is Signor Mori Siforme, chief of police at Bologna. The man behind Signor Mori is Premier Benito Mussolini, the fascist dictator at Rome.

SCREEN DIRECTOR HELD IN ASSAULT ON GRIDIRON STAR

Los Angeles, December 3.—(AP)—William Night, film director, and his chauffeur, Bert Trowbridge, were arraigned here today on charges of assault with a deadly weapon preferred by Edward Usher, Jr., said to be a former Michigan university football player.

Usher accused the film director of waylaying and beating him with automobile irons, a lead pipe and a pistol last Sunday morning. The former player ascribed the trouble to jealousy of Night over a former New York actress, Gene Jarvis.

Preliminary hearing was set for December 12. Bail was fixed at $10,000 each.

Older Boys' Conference Under Y.M.C.A. Auspices At LaGrange, Dec. 9-11

Remarkable Program Arranged for Meeting; Entertain Delegates in LaGrange Homes.

The North Georgia Older Boys' conference, to be held December 9-10-11 in LaGrange, Ga., is attracting great interest among local high school circles, as the time draws near for the opening program. The conference is being held under the auspices of the state Young Men's Christian association, and a remarkable program has been arranged for this week-end meeting, an annual affair in the state.

Outstanding speakers on the program include, Dr. W. A. Smart, of the department of religious education at Emory university; W. W. Orr, prominent firm member of George Muse company, in Atlanta; "Peter" Pund, of the Golden Tornado; J. Ramkin Spears, boys' worker of Macon; E. P. Hardy, Atlanta "Y" boys' work secretary, and others. H. E. Montague, state secretary for boys' work, is the "Y" worker in charge, with a committee of students from all over the state handling actual details.

Sunday schools, church boys' clubs, high schools, Hi-y clubs, employed boys' brotherhoods, Y. M. C. A. boys' departments and many other organizations are planning to send delegates. Registration with H. T. Quillian, of LaGrange, is urged, and it is requested that it be done as soon as possible. A fee of $1 is all that is required. Delegates will be entertained in LaGrange homes. Atlanta Hi-Y clubs have already appointed delegates, and it is expected that many other groups will follow their example within the next few days.

INTERESTING CONTEST AT GEORGIA AVENUE

Georgia Avenue school came back to school Monday with a determination to work hard until the Christmas vacation comes.

We are trying to have our community made beautiful by planting dogwood trees. An interesting contest is on in the school to see which aviator's side will plant the most dogwood trees by December 2.

High one is working on animals for Christmas.

Low two is studying trees and are going to plant some for Arbor day.

High two has made some Christmas trees to decorate the room.

Low three pupils are going to make some Arbor day posters.

High three is studying Switzerland and making a toy shop.

Low four students are 100 per cent in Red Cross membership.

High four is making a moving picture about Robin Hood, and Christmas calendars.

Low six enjoyed their Thanksgiving holidays very much. We were very sorry to have three people absent because of sickness when we came back to school Monday.

We are trying to have 100 per cent attendance all the time. We are trying to get every one in the room to plant a dogwood tree.

High six has been interested in getting their penmanship examination ready to send to New York for their buttons. They have also been interested in the study of Georgia.

The ungraded class is making blocks and baskets.

ORMEWOOD PUPILS REACH TEETH GOAL

Ormewood school is proud to state that their students are 100 per cent in perfect teeth.

A perfect attendance record was attained by low one last week, and the pupils are determined to keep up the good work.

An interesting program was offered by the fourth grade on Arbor day. The students planted a dogwood tree on the school grounds on that day. The class enjoyed singing for the Ormewood Improvement club on Thursday evening. They are very grateful to Mr. Hansell, who made their grade a gift of $1. Rivers Jones won the prize for selling the most candy-pulling tickets.

The pre-school mothers gave the kindergarten class a party last week. Decorations were of autumn leaves, pumpkins, and small Thanksgiving baskets filled with candy gave the table a most attractive appearance. The children enjoyed the occasion, and wish to thank the mothers for their lovely party.

CITY, STATE OFFICIALS TO GREET REV. KILGOUR

Officials of the state and city, ministers and prominent laymen will, at 3 o'clock this afternoon, take part in the installation of Rev. R. D. Kilgour as pastor of the Gospel Tabernacle on Capitol avenue.

Governor L. G. Hardman will be present to welcome the new pastor on behalf of the state, and Mayor I. N. Ragsdale will welcome the minister on behalf of the city.

Rev. Richard A. Forrest, pastor of the Toccoa Presbyterian church, of Toccoa, Ga., and moderator of the REV. ROBERT D. KILGOUR.

Athens Presbytery, will deliver the charge to the new minister, and Rev. Will H. Houghton, pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle, the charge to the congregation.

A number of teachers and students from the Toccoa Falls institute will attend the service.

Dr. Kilgour arrived in Atlanta Thursday with Mrs. Kilgour and their two-year-old twin daughters, Mary and Margaret.

The incoming pastor will speak Sunday morning at 11 o'clock on the subject, "What Is it to Be a Christian?" He will speak again at 7:30 o'clock Sunday night on "The Wonder Book."

Before accepting the call of the Gospel Tabernacle the minister was pastor of the Alliance church, of Minneapolis, and professor of Bible history at the St. Paul Bible institute, of St. Paul.

MACON BODY AGAIN FORMS YULE CLUB TO AID NEEDY CASES

Macon, Ga., December 3.—The Goodfellows club, to bring Christmas cheer to hundreds of children of the poor of Macon, has been formed again this year within the ranks of the chamber of commerce.

This is the third year for the organization to be fostered in this way, but for approximately 15 years there has been an organization to systematically distribute gifts to the poor children.

HOUGHTON BEGINS SERIES ON BIBLE AT TABERNACLE

Pastor Will H. Houghton, of the Baptist Tabernacle, begins Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock a series of sermons on Bible prophecy, the subject of the first being "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and the second, December 11, "The Four Women of the Apocalypse."

Last Sunday was a notable day in the history of the tabernacle, when there were forty additions to the church, twenty-eight by baptism and twelve by letter. The morning preaching hour was combined with the Bible school period and was made a special decision-day service.

The same hours will be observed this week, the morning preaching service beginning at 10:30 instead of 11 o'clock. The evening hour will be 7:30 as usual.

COLLINS TO CONDUCT REVIVAL SERVICES

Rev. J. Lee Collins, Tennessee evangelist, will give a series of revival services at the "Neighborhood" Church of God, Edgewood and Euclid avenues, from December 4 to December 11. Week-day services will be at 2:30 and 7:30 o'clock p. m. Sunday services 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Rev. Collins is well known to many Atlantans.

UNITED LIBERAL BEGINS LECTURES ON RELIGIONS

Series of lectures on "Religions of the World" will begin tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the United Liberal church, being given under the sponsorship of the Young People's Christian union of the church. The lectures will be given by outstanding local representatives or authorities on each religion.

The first lecture to be presented tonight will be "The Study of World Religions" by Dr. Robert F. Wheeler, pastor of the United Liberal church. It will be followed next Sunday by "The Beginnings of Religion" by Dr. Witherspoon Dodge, pastor of the Central Congregational church.

Church Dedication.

Dedication services for the Nellie Dodd Methodist church, Ridge avenue and Washington street, will be held today at 11 o'clock at the church and will be presided over by Bishop W. B. Beauchamp. The church recently was freed from debt, making possible the dedication.

O'KEEFE PLAYING BASKET TOURNEY

During book week, recently observed at O'Keefe, over 1,500 books were contributed to the library. A complete set of 30 volumes of Encyclopedia Brittanica was among these. Miss Stopher's home room brought in 273 books, winning the five pounds of candy. Many of the other classes contributed large numbers. The individual prize was won by Caroline Moore, who gave 112 books. The prize was a pound box of candy.

At the Home of the Friendless, on Thanksgiving day, the children's hearts were made gay when the car arrived with the gifts and "eats" from the O'Keefians.

The interclass basketball and football tournaments have been causing much excitement lately. The girls' games have been played off, with 3-B-50 holding the ninth grade championship, and section 2B-32 the eighth. These will play in the near future to decide the school championship. The boys have not yet completed their games.

Congratulations are extended to those making the honor roll for the first quarter. May their names all appear on the next quarter's also.

TREE PLANTING AT JOE BROWN

Joe Brown celebrated Arbor day Friday, December 2, by having an Arbor day program and tree planting.

The Arbor day exercises were held under the auspices of the P.-T. A. Music was provided by the Tech High band. At the close of the exercises the Tech High band was entertained by the school at lunch.

Eleven trees were planted. Among these were the pine, maple, dogwood, water oak, yellow oak, scarlet oak, and post oak.

The trees were planted according to a plat drawn by a landscape architect, under the direction of Assistant Superintendent Ritchie. Out of the 51 trees planted two years ago, 40 are now living and flourishing.

ATLANTA IS HOST TO 11 CONVENTIONS IN WEEK

Atlanta is quieting down after a veritable deluge of visitors and rain. During the past week eleven conventions with more than 2,400 visitors in attendance have been entertained in the city, according to Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta convention and tourist bureau. This is in addition to the immense throng attending the Georgia-Tech football game. The conventions meeting here last week were: The Asphalt association, State Association of School Superintendents, Georgia Retail Lumber and Millwork association, Dodge Brothers dealers of the south, Sigma Nu annual convention of Georgia, Alabama and Florida annual Georgia alumni meeting, Georgia Safety council, 5th Zone Chi Phi fraternity, Georgia division of Delta Tau Delta fraternity, Christian churches of North Georgia and Packard automobiles dealers.

Next week we will recuperate and make ready to give the glad hand to the Associated Batting Manufacturers, who hold their convention at the Biltmore hotel, December 15 and 16. This convention is small in size but has a representative personnel. It meets twice a year, the last meeting having been held in Memphis, Tenn.. The purpose of the meetings is to establish a friendly basis of trade between the related interests and discuss the many problems incident to their expansion. The meeting here has a double significance as the local people want to interest their members in Atlanta and territory and show them the attractive possibilities for advancement of their business here with a view to securing new mills for this section.

C. P. Green, of the Acme Rayon corporation, Cleveland, Ohio, is president. The other officers are: O. R. Burkart, of F. Burkart Manufacturing company, St. Louis, vice president; W. S. Becker, of Little Falls Fiber company, Little Falls, N. Y., second vice president; J. G. Bryan, of Oscar Smith & Sons company, Philadelphia, Pa., secretary, and T. M. Branhardt, of Barnhardt Manufacturing company, Charlotte, N. C., treasurer.

A. L. Cotton of the Thomas E. Grady & company, Inc., this city, is chairman of the publicity committee for the local dealers.

A. W. Chase is chairman of the local entertainment committee and many entertainment features have been planned for their enjoyment.

PLAINS FARMERS' SALE OF PEANUTS REACHES $100,000

Americus, Ga., December 3.—Farmers residing in Plains community west of Americus have sold more than $100,000 worth of peanuts to buyers in Cordele, Ga., and Charleston, S. C., since the beginning of the selling season in late August. Practically all of the peanuts were shipped from Plains in car lots, being sold at profitable prices. According to E. E. Cook, mayor of Plains and a prominent farmer there, the peanuts sold as high as $82.50 per ton, at which price their production insures the farmer a more satisfactory profit than cotton grown under weevil conditions and sold as high as 30 cents a pound.

WOOD CONNOR BURIED IN CHARLESTON

Bainbridge, Ga., December 3.—Interment for E. Mood Connor, who died Thursday night after a few days' sickness of pneumonia, were held in Charleston, S. C., his boyhood home today. Connor had been chief dispatcher for the Georgia, Florida & Alabama railway at Bainbridge for 16 years and was well known and beloved not only in railroad circles, but throughout the town. He was a member of the First Methodist church and a steward.

Surviving are his widow, two little girls, Mary Ann and Martha Mood; brother, T. A. Connor, master of transportation for G., F. & A., Bainbridge, and W. H., and sisters, Misses Alice and Estelle Connor, all of Charleston, who arrived here Friday to return with the body.

To the Boys and Girls of Atlanta

My Dear Boys and Girls: It has been a great pleasure to me to watch the development of our banking system in the Atlanta public schools, and to see how we are learning to save. There are two or three things in regard to our banking that I am anxious to talk to you about.

The idea of learning to save should be the first idea in banking. Of course, a great many of us have our money given to us by our parents and we save from this amount something to put in the bank. It is not sufficient that you simply ask your mother and father for some money to put in the bank. Each boy and each girl should in some way try to work for the money which they put in the bank. Regardless of how much money your father or mother may have, or how little they may have, what we deposit in the bank should be a part of our own efforts. There are a thousand ways in which we could help to earn some money. Some of us sell papers, some of us deliver papers, some of us could do service about the house, some of us could mow the lawn, others might sell some article like candy, or some of us might do work with our needle and sell it, but each one of us who is striving to have a bank account should in some way work to earn the money which we deposit.

If our fathers and mothers allow us a certain amount of money for each week, then we should save part of that money to deposit in the bank. Each of us should talk to our fathers and mothers about allowing us to have a little weekly budget. For instance, if a boy or girl comes to school and will get a glass of milk each day, that will be 25 cents. If there is to be some other little money allowed for picture shows or for books, etc., it could be added. But we should have some understanding with our mothers and fathers as to what our weekly allowance should be, and then we should out of that weekly allowance save, say, one-tenth, in order to put it in the bank. In other words, if we allowed a weekly allowance of 50 cents for milk and all other things, then we should put 50 cents in the bank, or if we wanted to save one-fifth, we could put 10 cents in the bank. But our banking should be on a systematic basis.

The third thing that I wish to speak to you about is our banking system: Christmas is coming on. There will be a great tendency to draw our money out of the bank. If we really are to make our money count and get into the habit of saving, we must not at each festival like Christmas or Thanksgiving draw all that we have put in the bank out for some specific purpose. It may be necessary to draw some of our money from the bank, but let us be careful at Christmas time not to spend all that we have saved. One of the great principles which we are trying to inculcate in you is to ask you to save something for the time when you will go to college or when you become settled in life. Let us be careful to see that this year we do not draw our money out of the bank at Christmas time to use for some selfish pleasure.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

N. A. P. S. Christmas Service Planned for December 16

A beautiful and appropriate Thanksgiving program was presented just before the holidays at the North Avenue Presbyterian school, under the direction of Mrs. George Calhoun, of Junior LL. The pupils in the lower school were the participants and as their guests the upper classes were invited. A Thanksgiving playlet was the outstanding feature of the program, performed with great success by the lower grade students.

Seventeen heavily laden baskets constituted North Avenue's Thanksgiving offering to needy families of the city. This is an annual event with the school, and always brings happiness into the homes where the gifts of the school are received.

"The Elopement of Ellen," presented by the Cecilians, the school dramatic group, was one of the finest efforts of this splendid organization, performed at the Tech Y. M. C. A. last week. The play was enthusiastically received by a large audience, which had the added privilege of hearing Clannaps, the school orchestra. This group of musicians was as attractively dressed as ever, wearing their customary capes of green and gold.

Nap's annual Christmas service is this year to be held Friday afternoon, December 16, at the North Avenue Presbyterian school. This program is one very dear to the heart of every North Avenue student, and is looked forward to every year.

Annual Exercise Try-Outs Completed at Boys' High

Selection of sponsors for the Boys' High School military unit has taken place within the past week, and now the unit can claim some feminine beauty to add to the masculinity of its appearance. The Boys' High regiment took a prominent part in the parade Saturday morning, making a fine appearance as the cadets marched along Atlanta's thoroughfares.

The sponsors who have been selected are as follows: For the regimental sponsor, Miss Margaret Harris has been chosen, with Miss Mary Elinor Kemp as sponsor of the second battalion; Company A, Miss Marjorie Beilfuss; Company B, Miss Janet McNeal; Company C, Miss Margaret Belle Isle; Company D, Miss Nell Strong; Company E, Miss Thelma Stegall; Company F, Miss Wilma Anderson; Company G, Miss Clare Jones.

Christmas exercise try-outs were completed last Wednesday at the school, and debaters and declaimers chosen. The exercises form the annual program of the Aleiphronian Literary and Debating society, an institution of Boys' High school since 1874, and are looked forward to as the outstanding event of the Christmas season. The subject for debate this year is: "Resolved, That the present high protective tariff is contrary to the best interests of American agriculture." William Spann, William Beckmann and Nathan Gershon are the affirmative debaters, while Richard Clark, Joseph Glazer and W. D. Morris will oppose them as speakers for the negative. Declaimers are Henry Kingdon and Louis Regenstein.

Rehearsal of "Three Live Ghosts" is well under way now, and the Dramatic club promises early production of its first play. "Three Live Ghosts" is the same play that was so successful in 1924, when a second performance was given by popular demand. It is expected that the forthcoming production will be equally as fine a one, owing to the marked ability of the cast. Carlos Lynes will have the lead, that of "Old Sweetheart," a shrewd, grasping cockney woman. Others in the cast are Walter Paschall, who is "Spoofy;" Richard Clark, as "Jimmie;" William Lambright, as "Bill;" Henry Kingdon, as "Rose;" Lee Laney, as "Peggy;" Randolph Echols, as "Rolton;" Ben Read as "Benson," and Emmett Rushin and Max Hall, in minor roles. Practically all are veterans in the club's work, and can be counted on for fine work.

The Boys' Hi-Y club recently held its first induction of the year, at which several new members were formally taken into the group. The new men are W. T. Hunter, Raymond Burkett, Nathan Brandon, Jack Hancock and Walter Anderson, all seniors. First-year men who were admitted include Charles Ward, Herbert Clark, Cliff Sheffield, Boifeuillet Jones and C. A. West. The club is planning to send several delegates to the North Georga Older Boys' conference to be held December 9-11 at LaGrange, Ga. Jack Weems, of the club, is the president of the conference.

American Flapper Fails To Interest Prince Bill

American flappers do not intrigue Prince William of Sweden. The royal prince, in America on a lecture tour, in a recent interview intimated that flappers of the Swedish variety had so accustomed him to the type that there were no new thrills possible from modern young womanhood.

But he is interested, he stated, in one feature of American life—the efficiency and cooperation of modern business men. This, he says, is a source of never failing amazement as he travels about the United States.

Prince William will arrive in Atlanta early Tuesday morning, next, and will deliver his famous lecture on big game hunting and exploration in darkest Africa at the auditorium on Tuesday night. He illustrates his lecture with six reels of motion pictures which advance notices state to be the most thrilling yet taken by a motion picture camera.

Enraged lions, elephants, buffaloes, gorillas, are seen charging up to a few feet of the grinding camera, only to be stopped by a bullet from the prince's rifle. Scenes are also shown of the daily life of the Bahma pygmies, most primitive race of men on the globe today.

Prince William has requested that, as far as possible, no social affairs be arranged in his honor during his stay in Atlanta. He wants to remain quietly with a few old friends who live here until the time for the lecture. Or, at the most, play a round of golf, though his golf game, he writes, is "off" because of a sore arm received while playing tennis a couple of weeks ago with Douglas Fairbanks.

The prince will be introduced Tuesday night by G. A. Anderson, leading member of the local Swedish society, in Swedish, replying in the same language.

But his lecture will be delivered in English, which he speaks with practically no accent and in a clear and powerful voice. To make certain that everyone in the audience can hear, however, special amplifiers have been installed for the occasion at the auditorium.

Seats for the lecture are on sale at the box office in the store of the Cable Piano company, on North Broad street. Reservations should be made promptly, as choice seats are going fast, it is reported. The prince comes here under the auspices of the Southern Musical Bureau, as the second in the current season's all-star artist series.

CHURCH AUTHORIZES PARSONS' ORDINATION

Examination and subsequent ordination for the ministry of Rev. A. T. Parsons, pastor of the Stone Mountain Baptist church, has been authorized by the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, of which Rev. Parsons is a member.

Rev. Parsons is a graduate of the University of Georgia and also of the divinity school of Yale university. Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, will assemble a group of ministers to form a presbytery to ordain the young minister at an early date.

ROME FIRE LOSS HITS SLUMP IN NOVEMBER

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Fire alarms during November, 1927, were less than half the number of November, 1926, and exactly a third of the figure for November, 1925. Only eight alarms occurred during the past month and four of them were turned in as the result of automobile fires from which practically no damage was caused. The biggest loss of the month was caused by a roof fire which resulted in about $200 damage.

HARRIS STUDENTS PLANT DOGWOOD

Last week we enjoyed the Thanksgiving vacation very much, and we had an extra holiday as the whole school was 100 per cent in perfect teeth. On Tuesday before the holidays, all of the children brought fruit and other good things to eat, as a Thanksgiving offering to the Associated Charities. We had quite a large offering.

The children of both kindergartens visited the Old Ladies' Home last Tuesday and entertained the ladies with a little program. All of them enjoyed it very much.

We had several visitors last week. Mr. Miller, of Emory university, gave a most interesting talk on literature to the fifth and sixth grades. Miss Myra Graves and Miss Janie Solomon, supervisors of physical training in the Atlanta schools, also came.

Friday was Arbor day and it was observed by all of the grades. High kindergarten decided to plant a dogwood tree.

Low kindergarten is beginning to think of Christmas, and they are making gifts for their mothers and fathers.

The first grades are planting bulbs in bowls here at school and dogwood trees at home. They hope to make West End even more attractive. Miss Kate Haralson, supervisor of music, visited us yesterday and we hope she enjoyed us as much as we did her.

Low six-one had an Arbor day program and invited both of the fifth grades to hear it.

HARRIET MOORE.

SPRING LOW FOUR PLANTS FLOWERS

Low two is very proud of Jack Hogg's illustration of Lindbergh's "We."

The children of low five, one made place cards for the Thanksgiving table at home.

Low four, five have planted narcissus and freezia bulbs. They have also planted a Chinese lily for their nature study lesson.

Low four enjoyed a visit from Miss Graves, and all of them are trying to bring up their athletic records.

Low three enjoyed a visit last Tuesday from Miss Ruth Weegand, supervisor of music for the primary grades.

The children of low two have formed a book club. Bernard Wilner is president and Frances Kraft is secretary.

The high first children are glad to have Eleanor Speer join their class. She is from New York.

Low one is working hard to learn to write so they can write a letter to Santa Claus.

The children of the kindergarten are very excited over Santa Claus. They are fixing up their room for Christmas.

ARBOR DAY PROGRAM IN LEE STREET CLASS

The high-one class is 100 per cent in Red Cross. They also have a new border.

High three bought 10 trees for their room. The class gave a play, "The Coming of the Pilgrims." They attended a party given by low three, which they enjoyed very much.

High four is much interested in a play they are writing in connection with geography work. They have finished all the parts and are going to present it at the P.-T. A. meeting next week.

High six furnished the Arbor day program for this school last week. The high and low sixth grades, also high five and two representatives from each of the other grades, were present. The program given was as follows:

Poem, "How the Leaves Came Down"—Ernest L. Harmon.

Story, "Our Projects"—By Lillijo Cleibon.

Poem, "A Ballad of Trees and the Master"—By Rachel Shomos.

Poem, "The Tree"—By Nell Wayne.

Poem, "Planting a Tree"—By Georgia Lee Herron.

Song, "Long Live the Dogwood"—By high six class.

"Dedication of the Two Memorial Trees"—By Charles Marks and Louise Coleman.

Miss Rainwater was with us.

The P.-T. A. gave 50 trees to the school.

NEW CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL PLANNED IN CLARKE COUNTY

Athens, Ga., December 3.—With the appropriation of $12,000 by the Clarke county board of commissioners approved, the board of education will meet next Tuesday to discuss plans for purchase of a site for the erection of a modern school at Tuckston by next fall.

The board of commissioners voted appropriation of the $12,000 for the consolidated school a few days ago and will turn it over to the board of education upon its demand.

The new building will be of brick veneer and will comprise seven rooms and an auditorium. The site has not yet been selected, but several are under consideration.

A music course, the first for that section, will be given for the benefit of the students. And the State College of Agriculture will conduct a day unit for instruction in agriculture.

Superintendent Gaines stated that, as recommended by the grand jury and approved by the commissioners and the board of education, the consolidated school will include those now at Gainesville, Tuckston and Belmont.

Correspondents Take Notice!

Attention is called to all School Page correspondents that material should be arranged in accordance with certain requirements. Only one side of paper must be used, and articles should be typewritten, if possible. Ink is acceptable, if a typewriter is not available. Letters should reach The Constitution not later than Thursday afternoon. Please follow these instructions in contributing articles.

Military Unit Sponsors Named at Fulton High

It has been a custom each year for the Girl Reserves of Fulton High to fill Thanksgiving baskets for the poor. This year they were aided in this work by donations of the other students in the school. Eight baskets, attractively decorated, were filled and delivered by the service committee, with Lois McDonald as chairman.

The Fulton High Alumni association recently presented a play, "Whose Little Bride Are You," in the school auditorium. This comedy was greatly enjoyed by a large audience.

The Fulton High Dramatic club entered the one-act play tournament at Marietta with the play "The Ghost Story." Although the club won nothing, good work was done by all those in the play. The club, which is the youngest in an Atlanta high school, is planning to present a number of plays before the completion of the school year.

The Junior Red Cross has been organized in the home class rooms. The buttons were given to the president of the home class rooms as representatives and the class that became 100 per cent first was given a prize. B-6 won the first prize and A-10 the second. Eight classes were 100 per cent when the drive closed.

The junior home economic class entertained the senior class with a tea Tuesday, November 22, in the school apartment. Every one had a delightful time. Punch and sandwiches were served during the afternoon.

The students of Fulton are always proud of the achievements of one of their fellow pupils: Miss Sarah Bowman has received the award of Golden Eagle Scout. She is assistant leader of Troop 22 and is prominent in Scout activities.

Sponsors have been elected by the military department for the different organizations. They are: Battalion sponsor, Dorothy Young; staff sponsor, Carol Wimberly; band sponsor, Ella Heybach; A company, Wanslea Sargent; B company, Emily Chambers; C company, Sarah Jackson; D company, Eunice Lee.

Song Contest Promoted At Washington Seminary

Anyone riding out Peachtree road during the seminary recess would be struck by the new gym costumes. They are in the seminary colors, blue and gold. The bloomers and pleated skirt are of blue sateen and the sweaters are of gold jersey. To say the least, they are striking!

If anyone had dropped into the seminary last Tuesday they would have thought that they were in the midst of grand opera. Never have more accomplished song-birds been heard. From the stage came tenor, alto and soprano voices in unison. Upon further investigation one would have discovered that the songsters were semnary girls instead of Galli Curci and Bori. The athletic association decided that the repertoirs of school songs and yells was exceedingly low; therefore, they had appointed a committee from each class who were to compose, with the help of their classes, three songs, or two songs and a yell. Three judges had been appointed who were to select three songs from the twelve new ones. Prizes were awarded the freshman, junior and senior classes.

The senior class of Washington seminary is very elated over the outcome of their entertainment last Friday night. The girls have already become very fond of the little girl, Elizabeth Thomas, whom they are sending to Vashti, the industrial school at Thomasville, Ga. She is so sweet and so appreciative that the seniors would like to do just everything for her. They decided to put on "The Minstrels" in order to help here more. The entire proceeds go to Elizabeth, thus the students were exuberantly happy over the success of their "show"—for it really was a success, financially and otherwise.

Miss Margaret Tate was a great help in bringing about the results. To arouse everyone's interest in such a good cause she offered a prize to the girl in school who sold the most tickets. The prize was lovely, the envy of everybody, and it caused an enthusiastic sale of tickets.

As the senior class has so many members, all of them couldn't take part in the actual performance, but each one did her part in some way. Probably the most effort was expended by Miss Peggy Gude and Miss Jean Nutting, who planned the acts. They worked long and hard for many weeks, but surely they cannot say their time was wasted, for "The Minstrels" was a credit to any producer.

The visible participants carried off all the numbers like experts. It isn't just anyone who can make an extremely mixed audience enjoy their songs, jokes, dances, and skits. Of course, their appearance helped to keep the people awake! The majority of the actors wore attractive blue suits trimmed in brilliant yellow (Washington seminary colors) which were very stunning with their tall blue hats and yellow swagger sticks. The interlocutor, Miss Jane Tway, was dressed in a white and gold suit, while the end men, Miss Jean Nutting, Miss Mary McCord, Miss Myrtis Adler and Miss Ruby Carter Adams, wore yellow suits adorned with blue. The spectators were greatly pleased that no blacked people appeared on the stage because, as they all said, the girls were so attractive they did not need to hide their faces. So the seniors were duly proud of their representatives that night; they were: Misses Jane Tway, Myrtis Adler, Jean Nutting, Ruby Carter Adams, Mary McCord, Cornelia Orme, Julia Meador, Edna Rufty, Edith Marshall, Nell Harris, Teany Raine, Phoebe Rhett, Hazel Stamps, Eleanor Johnson, Mary Francee Mather, Jenny Lind Mather, Elizabeth Kimball, Boots Walker, Bilsey Hearn, Ernestine Hornaday, Kathryn Bryant, Lena Swift and Sarah Sharp.

There was only one thing which the pupils and Miss Surtees (the seniors' faculty advisor) regretted. They were all sorry that Elizabeth Thomas could not be with them last Friday night and share their fun.

FAITH CLASS WINS BOOK WEEK PRIZE

Low kindergarten is already beginning to get ready for Christmas.

As every one in low-one has perfect teeth, the pupils want to work and get 100 per cent in health.

High and low-two hope to study about trees this week and to plant a tree at home.

Low-three is very proud to have 100 per cent in perfect teeth. Margaret Cofield has brought her health certificate. We are expecting more this week. Faustine Dobson is on the honor roll for good conduct.

High-three is now working for 100 per cent in health. Harold Landrum has already brought his health certificate.

Low-four is glad that Miss Phillips, their teacher, is able to be back with them. Our class is glad to have William Ford Amos in our room.

We are very glad to have a holiday for perfect teeth in high-four.

Low-five is making a sand table about the life of people in the old and new world.

For our prize in high-five for good book week we received the book, "Men of Iron," by Howard Pyle. We can hardly wait to read it. The donors made us appreciate it twice as much by autographing it. This morning we received a lovely note from Miss Slocumb congratulating us. We greatly appreciate it.

Doctor at 83 Found People Preferred His Prescription

AT AGE 83

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice, known to druggists and the public since 1892, as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

Then, the treatment of constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions that result from constipation was entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, which is a combination of senna and other mild laxative herbs, with pepsin.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. If grown people want to use them no one can deny them the privilege, but they should never be given to children.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you, and the better for the general health of all. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs? All drug stores have the generous bottles.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.—(adv.)

MOTHER TO SERVE 4-YEAR SENTENCE

A sentence of four years at the state farm against Mrs. Pauline Denton, 30, of Riverdale, Ga., was reinvoked Saturday morning by Judge John D. Humphries, in Fulton superior court, when the woman pleaded guilty to a charge of burglary.

Several months ago Mrs. Denton was arraigned before Judge Humphries on a charge of stealing an automobile from a local rental agency and carrying it to Dallas, Texas, where she is said to have disposed of it. She was arrested in Dallas and returned to Atlanta on this charge and three other cases charging impersonation of another. She is alleged to have impersonated another woman in obtaining the machine.

Judge Humphries sentenced her to serve one year on each case at the state farm, but placed her on probation with the condition that she would return to Riverdale and live with her husband's parents, her husband and their three little children.

While residing with them on November 22 she is alleged to have burglarized the home of William Wood on Hightower road, from which she was charged with taking as loot several articles of clothing. She was arrested by county police, who Saturday arraigned her before Judge Humphries.

Mrs. Denton told the officers, Lieutenant J. M. Carroll, and County Policemen Jack Carroll and E. W. Wilson that she committed the burglary in order to get the sentence reinvoked so that she might serve her term at the state farm.

TRIALS OF BANKERS RESET FOR JANUARY

Trials of J. S. Slicer, president, and T. J. Norman, vice president and treasurer of the defunct Colonial Trust company, under indictment in connection with the failure last September of the company, have been reset for the January term of Fulton superior court.

The cases were slated to have been brought to trial next Wednesday before Judge G. H. Howard, but upon the request of defense counsel Saturday, Judge Howard postponed the hearing until the January term. Defense counsel asked additional time to prepare an audit of the company.

The case will be prosecuted by Assistant Solicitor John H. Hudson, while the law firms of Hewlett and Dennis and Colquit and Conyers will represent the trust company officials.

The officials face trial on 18 indictments charging violation of the state banking laws and including embezzlement, forgery, false entry, receiving a commission on a loan made by them, fraudulent insolvency and other charges.

CHURCH PLANS $25,000 SUNDAY SCHOOL ANNEX

Work will be begun at once on a $25,000 Sunday school annex, it was announced Saturday following a reorganization meeting of the board of stewards of the Martha Brown Memorial Methodist church, at which George B. Lyle was reelected chairman of the board.

Committee reports showed that the church is free of any indebtedness, and the announcement concerning the Sunday school annex was made by Dr. E. F. Fincher, chairman of the building committee. The duplex envelope system was adopted by the coming year, and today was set as pledge day.

Other officers and committees appointed were as follows:

PLANS COMPLETED FOR ANSLEY HOME BENEFIT TAG SALE

Final arrangements for a tag sale on December 10 to raise funds for the Ansley Memorial Home, at 488 Crew street, have been completed, it was announced by Mrs. J. J. Ansley, founder of the cottage.

Mrs. Ansley hopes to have Atlanta churches affiliate with the cottage and direct its work of caring for the score of needy young children who are sheltered there. While much of the work has been carried on with Mrs. Ansley's own resources, she will appeal to the people of Atlanta to assist her with the home.

GROCERY, DRUG STORE LOOTED BY BURGLARS

Theft of merchandise and petty cash from the grocery of J. C. Brown, 302 Highland avenue, N. E., and the Jones Avenue Pharmacy, operated by R. P. Nicholson, was reported Saturday to police. Reports also said that a negro, James Harvey, was arrested in connection with the burglary of a Rogers store at Georgia and Capitol avenues.

Talley Honored at Banquet

The banquet at the Candler hotel given in honor of J. Frank Talley.

A brilliant affair of the past week was the banquet given at the new Candler hotel in Decatur by the Progressive class of the First Baptist church, headed by Flint Singletary and Guy Rutland in honor of J. Frank Talley, who leaves December 15 to accept a connection in Asheville, N. C.

Mr. Talley has been a resident of Decatur for the past 20 years, during which time he has been an active worker in church and civic affairs.

E. L. QUINN PRESIDENT OF LOCAL MECHANICS

E. L. Quinn was elected president of the Atlanta lodge No. 1, International Association of Mechanics, at the last regular meeting of the organization. Other officers were named as follows: William J. Purdie, vice president; Paul Chipman, recording secretary; W. L. Hardwick, financial secretary; D. M. Goodlin, treasurer; S. A. Eubanks, conductor; Marion Henderson, sentinel, and J. M. Long, trustee.

MOTORIST INJURED IN TRUCK-CAR CRASH

Head-on collision Saturday on Marietta road between an automobile and a large truck owned by the Georgia Power company sent John W. Jackson, operator of the automobile, to Grady hospital with severe bruises and cuts about the body. Doctors said his injuries were not serious.

PHILLIPS FAVORED BY G. O. P. SENATORS FOR CHAPLAIN POST

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Overlooking a host of active candidates from the Washington clergy, senate republicans today selected the Rev. Z. T. Phillips, rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Episcopalian, as its choice for chaplain of the senate, to succeed the late Rev. J. J. Muir, Baptist. His selection by the republican committee is equivalent to election.

BORDEN BURR HEADS REGIONAL SIGMA NU

Borden Burr, of Birmingham, past regent of the Sigma Nu fraternity and one-time national committeeman from Alabama, was elected president of the Georgia-Alabama-Florida Sigma Nu association Saturday morning at the final business session of a two-day rally here.

Other officers were named as follows: Allen M. Woodall, of Columbus; George S. Harris, of Atlanta, vice presidents; R. L. Fagan, of Fort Valley, secretary-treasurer; Leeman Anderson, of Atlanta, and Ray Delcher, of Tampa, Fla., committeeman, and Sam H. Worley, of Atlanta, publicity director.

The meeting was brought to a close with a reception and dance Saturday night at the Druid Hills Golf club. More than 150 visitors assembled here as guests of the Atlanta Sigma Nu Alumni association.

GARDENS OF BURBANK WILL BE HOME SITES

Santa Rosa, Calif., December 3.—(AP)—The experimental gardens of the late Luther Burbank located at Santa Rosa, which for more than twenty years attracted scientists throughout the world, are to be cut up into building lots, Mrs. Burbank, widow of the plant wizard, announced here today.

Burbank died in April, 1926, and shortly thereafter a move was started to preserve his three acres of gardens and continue his experiments. All plans, however, failed to materialize.

About one-quarter of the land, on which is situated the Burbank home, and the cedar of Lebanon, under which the botanist is buried, will be retained by Mrs. Burbank.

Big Game Over But Your Danger Has Not Ceased

The big gridiron game is over and the vast turmoil that locked Atlanta in a traffic jam Saturday is dispelled. But other tremendous crowds will gather; traffic lines will again become snarled and danger will beset you in the form of traffic accidents.

Every day they claim their victims dead and injured. You may be listed among the slain or maimed today. Why not play safe with your own prosperity and the security of your loved ones? Why not insure yourself against this great menace now?

Cheapest and most efficient protection is offered you by The Constitution in the form of the famous $7,500 travel accident policy issued by the North American Insurance company, of Chicago. This old and reliable concern already has paid more than $53,000 in claims to Constitution policyholders.

The policy, which costs only $1.25 per year, provides for payment of sums ranging from $7,500 in case of death resulting from certain accidents; heavy cash payment for permanent injuries and $10 weekly indemnity for disability resulting from the stated accidents. And the cost is only a fraction of a penny a day.

A train wreck, a crash of automobiles, the speeding wheels of an onrushing car or a burning building may leave you a victim of the ever-growing wave of accidents today.

In this paper appear regular advertisements supplying full details of the great offer. Watch for them.

This $7,500 travel, $2,000 auto and $1,000 pedestrian accident policy is issued only to subscribers of The Daily and Sunday Constitution or dependent members of a subscriber's family between the ages of 17 and 70 at $1.25 per year.

One who is now taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution or will subscribe for same through carrier in Atlanta or suburbs, through an out-of-town carrier or dealer, paying for his paper weekly, monthly or otherwise, is a subscriber and is eligible.

Those taking The Daily and Sunday Constitution by mail, either through a postofficeor rural route delivery for one year, are eligible b ypaying $1.25 per year per policy above the subscription price.

In sending applications for insurance the applicant must state name in full, give age and occupation. If beneficiary is desired, full Christian name must be given and relation of same to the insured.

$5 PEANUTS

John Staton Pays Record Price at Game.

John Staton, tall and handsome young Atlantan who once upon a time played football for Tech, had a five-dollar bill in his pocket Saturday afternoon when he went to the Georgia-Tech game.

In the usual course of events, a peanut vender came along as the game progressed, and Tech scored a touchdown. The wild enthusiasm of the moment caught John buying a ten-cent bag of peanuts from the vender, tendering the five-dollar bill to the peanuter.

Later in the afternoon, when the game was over and he was preparing to write his story of the game for The Constitution, John ran his hand in his pocket again looking for some change.

"Glory be," he exclaimed, "I paid $5 for a bag of peanuts!"

X-Rays for Beauty Bring Cancer Peril, Says London Doctor

London, December 3.—(AP)—The repeated use of X-rays in "beauty treatments" creates a serious risk of cancer, Dr. W. B. Knobel, declared in opposition to an application for a license to conduct a beauty parlor in London for the removal of superfluous hair from the face by an X-ray apparatus.

Admitting that a single application might be harmless, Dr. Knobel, who is one of the London county council's medical officers, said the council's medical staff had records of a large number of cases in which cancer developed slowly from continued treatment. In one London hospital, he declared, there was a whole ward of such cases.

The applicants for the license pleaded in vain that their apparatus had been used successfully and without complaint in America. The controlling committee refused their application.

HEAD OF FAMILY IS WAGE MAKER, SAYS TAX BUREAU

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—The question as to who is the head of a family finally has been settled by the internal revenue bureau's income tax regulations.

Regardless of who thinks they are boss of the household, the bureau says the head of a family is "an individual who actually supports and maintains in one household one or more individuals who are closely connected with him by blood relationship, relationship by marriage or by adoption and whose right to exercise family control and provide for these dependent individuals is based upon some moral or legal obligation."

The bureau found it necessary to make a ruling as numerous many-headed families had been recorded on income tax returns.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

GLENWAY WESCOTT.

The author of "The Grandmothers," Glenway Wescott, wrote the captain for this photograph, himself, in a letter from Villefranche sur Mer to his publishers, Harper & Brothers:

"I am enclosing a photograph of myself in my usual haunts which you may be able to use. The fact that every newspaper seems to prove that my friend, Louis Bromfield, is better looking than I may induce me to have some new photographs made before long. Does that indicate contemptible vanity?"

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Splendor. By Ben Ames Williams. A story about newspaper life, of newspaper men, and especially one man, a real American, is receiving much publicity at this time.

The publishers write.: "This is one of those exceptional books which has the whole-hearted approval of our entire organization. It has not been published in serial form, although Mr. Ames turned down a magazine offer equivalent to a royalty on the sale of 100,000 copies."

Mr. Williams did this to give his much appreciated readers an opportunity of enjoying it first-hand as a book. It is a story of life. American life. The central figure is a little boy, Henry Beeker, who up to the time he lost his mother, at the age of nine years, had never been as far from his home as Beacon street, had never seen the common and the public garden. The temptation to pluck a flower caused a personal contact with a policeman which frightened him so that he did not stop running until he found his feet on the old familiar cobblestones.

But life was something very real to him—it was always splendid and this young newspaperman was always looking for a brighter time just ahead. a real pageant of life's progressiveness.

"The splendor of increasing speed is on this book. (E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.)

Goblin Market. By H. deVere Stacpoole. He is one of the best travelers. This is evidenced by the number and the various creations of his stories—sailors, landsmen, men and women of every country. He has written a number of romantic stories that pleased his readers—the romance he has written now "is a romance in terms of delicate realism."

Mr. Stacpoole writes most interestingly of the life, the ways of Anthony Harrop, Marlborough Terrace, Regent's park, of which the following paragraph is a real description: "This evil house, which has broken the backs and hearts, and health of generation of servant maids, stands narrow as a tomb and high as an obelisk between Nos. 12 and 14." The first chapter tells the story of the house and the owner, who though a man of intense commercial activity finally stops long enough to see romance knocking at his door. (Doran's book, $2.50.)

Whatever We Do. By Allan Updergragg. The story is located in the Mediterranean country—in a little village where a handful of Americans are spending a week and it proves to be a week filled with many incidents of life as spent by a merry crowd in a foreign land. "The tale is keyed to a mood of carnival abandon, but beneath the rush of hilarity there runs a shadowy undercurrent." (The John Day company, New York.)

Honor Bound. By Jack Bethea, author of "Bedrock," who writes a story of a gallant fight against overwhelming odds.

The outline of the stories tells how a coal baron, desiring to have a conflict for a chauffeur, for what reason the reader can guess, selects for the position John Ogletree from the coal mines. Mr. Mortimer in some way learns something to make him believe that Ogletree was in love with his wife, having known her before his imprisonment, so he plots to have him meet death in the mines.

When this thrilling situation meets its climax the reader will be willing to accord to the author the tribute of having written one of the finest stories of 1927—it not only holds the reader's attention, but simply grips it. (Houghton Mifflin company, Boston.)

The Bartenstein Mystery. By J. S. Fletcher, who is at his very best in his last novel. And it is really one of the most interesting stories written by Mr. Fletcher. This is the beginning: Lieutenant John Lauderdale, of the forty-second lancers, called on Mr. Bartenstein to protest against his attention to his fiancee, Milicent Oxenham, whom he had loved since her young girlhood. Later that evening his valet found the famous financier lying dead before the great fireplace in the living room—and not far away a sword cane. Whose was it? There is suspense, excitement and plenty of guesses until the mystery is unravelled at the last, much to the surprise of the reader. (The Dial Press, New York.)

High Endeavor. By Anthony Gibbs, author of "The Elder Brother." The author writes most interestingly as he describes the life of the inner circles of London Bohemian life. The characters he has created to make his story overrunning with humor as well as emotion can be called John Marmaduke, Biddle, Helen and Gertie, are perfectly human and interesting.

This clever story will be received with a warm welcome for the reader perhaps has already guessed that the author is the son of Sir Phillip Gibbs, whose work stands with Americans in the first ranks of English literature. So the work of this clever young English writer will have a way paved for it in America, where the father is well known and popular. (The Dial Press, New York.)

The Gentleman in Armor. How Rene of Bar, Duke of Larraine, pursued my lady of the firelight, found Joan of Arc and led the army of the dead. By Robert J. Casey.

This is one of the most interesting stories ever told of the Duke of Lorraine who is well known for being everything from a great soldier to a lover of beautiful women.

The story goes that one day in the streets of Nancy the duke is attracted by the appearance of a shabbily-dressed girl from Doremy who is earnestly talking about preserving the liberty of France. He decides to escort her to the dauphin.

Side by side rides Rene de Bar with the Maid or Orleans where Joan raises the siege of Orleans and the king is crowned at Rheims. This is the beginning of a story so well written, so interestingly told that there is not a dull moment in it for the reader regardless of the fact whether he loves romance or history. (J. H. Sears and Co., New York).

The King's Pleasure. By Ellis Middleton, author of "The Road of Destiny." Colored picture jacket by Carroll Snell. This is another interesting story with a historical setting. The scene is laid in Maryland and the England of Charles II. The story tells how a young American went to England to try to get from the king the estates which Cromwell had taken away from his father because of his loyalty to the Stuarts.

It was in London that Nell Gwynn who had taken a fancy to young Falconer offered to go with him to see the king who instead of rewarding his father's loyalty has other plans in which he uses him for his own interests. The love story which is the strongest thread in the whole book will be most pleasing to the reader, and the author in his description is at his best. (The Dial Press, New York).

The Green Rope. A thrilling mystery story. By J. S. Fletcher, whose detective stories have been both many and interesting. This is one of the most entertaining and thrilling he has written, and it is all woven around a green rope. The mystery begins in the grounds of an old castle in England and the reader with intense interest does not lose sight of the green rope until the climax.

The reader of mystery stories likes the style of Mr. Fletcher—it is clever and reasonable as well as appealing. He knows how to develop the plot for the work of a first class detective and in this case it is centered in the search for the other end of the green rope. Alfred A. Knopf, publisher, New York.

The Messenger of the Gods. By Phyllis Bottome, who began her literary career at the age of sixteen and who has been remembered ever since as being a young and popular writer, having spent her early years in America. For more than ten years on account of a serious illness she has made no attempt to write anything at all until now. She is the wife of Captain Ernan Forbes-Dennis, of the British army.

The author has painted in her best manner a portrait of the modern girl—she is a product of the social and family life in America at the present time. She is one of the most interesting discussions of this year and will be also in 1928. In reality she is just a modern girl with modern ideas—"earnestly though misguidedly, seeking the expression of her mind and the ideal of her soul." To many she has the manner and style "it matters not." She wishes to pose as independent of family, friends and even society. George H. Doran Co., New York.

The Hoop.—By J. C. Snaith, author of "The Undefeated." "Who was the singer?" A hush fell over the whole audience from the dress circle to the crowded balconies as the voice rose going higher and higher, floating out the doors and windows. It was the mad aria from "Lucia." The audience was one with her. First applause. Then a tidal wave. Who was she?

It is the thrilling romance of Esme Topham Goodchild, an unknown girl, to the very heights of operatic fame. There was no slow struggle—it was meteoric overcoming everything in its flight, so at 24 years old Esme had achieved success.

But is that all life holds for a young girl? This is the question that comes to her later when she stops to think of her career. A career in opera, or love and a home? This is settled when the story reaches the climax. It is a brilliant novel of operatic life. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Gerfalcon.—By Leslie Barringer. A mediaeval romance—a tale of nightly endeavor, tourney, combat and siege in a kingdom beset by witches and robbers.

A young knight who has been denied his rights by a cruel uncle decides to run away to the Tourney of Belsant, and seeing there the face of a young girl he immediately falls in love with her.

The stories of the adventures of Gerfalcon, the young knight is fascinating as well as thrilling to the last chapter. (Doubleday Page & Co., New York.)

Our Mr. Dormer.—By R. H. Mottram, author of "The Spanish Farm Triology." Colored picture jacket by Carroll Snell. The author is already recognized as a master when it comes to the English novel. The story deals with the advance of a Quaker banking family—from 1813 down to the present day. Mr. Mottram understands the atmosphere of a banking family having belonged to an old family of bankers for generations. He is now in charge of the affairs of the foreign department of the Norwich branch of Barclay's bank. (The Dial Press, New York.)

BIOGRAPHY AND AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

Some Memories and Reflections of Emma Eames.—With a preface by William Lyon Phelps. This is a story of a beautiful woman and a great artist. She was not only possessed of beauty, but of a golden voice and a charming manner which made her many friends not only in the world of music but in the social world. She relates her life story in a modest but interesting way.

This inspiring story-book of a beautiful singer is bound in blue and gold and should be in every home library. (D. Appleton & Co., $5.)

Lord Northcliffe.—By R. Macnair Wilson, author of "The Beloved Physician, Sir James MacKenzie." This is a study of one of the most significant figures of our time. The author knew Lord Northcliffe intimately for years and he writes most interestingly of his devotion to his own country as well as to America.

This work is presented to the public as a tribute to one of the small group who deserve the title 'world minds.'" (Lippincott's Book, price $5.)

The Unknown Barnum.—By Harvey W. Root. The name of Barnum will not be forgotten—it will be "handed down" from one generation to another. Circumstances made him what was called at one time a "showman." He was a child of poverty but he became a man of wealth. He was also a legislator and the best publicity man the world has known. He was only a year younger than Abraham Lincoln and he was a true American. It was President Grant upon his return from abroad who made the remarks that "Barnum was one of the best-known names in the world."

The book contains an interesting study of P. T. Barnum in which the author shows the traits of character and the ability that placed him really in advance of his day as a man of prominence and as a real American. (Harper & Brothers, price $4.)

MY STORY.

The Roads to Melody. My Story. By Carrie Jacobs-Bond. Published by Appleton. It is her own story which for the first time she tells of the struggles and hardships, yes, and heartaches, that folowed her as she was climbing the road to success. It is a story of success with all these little tragedies now in the background. It was her great courage and her wonderful faith that have now placed her in the world of music and song, where she has had the pleasure of enjoying the friendships of scores of men and women of music and literature, amon gthem being Nordica, Schumann-Heinck, etc., all of whom have appreciated her as a talented artist whose poem has been sung many times:

THE END OF A PERFECT DAY.

When you come to the end of a perfect day,
And you sit alone with your thoughts,
While the chimes ring out with a carol gay
For the joy that the day has brought,
Do you think what the end of a perfect day
Can mean to a tired heart,
When the sun goes down with a flaming ray,
And the dear friends have to part?

"Well, this is the end of a perfect day,
Near the end of a journey, too;
But it leaves a thought that is big and strong,
With a wish that is kind and true.
For mem'ry has painted this perfect day
With colors that never fade,
And we find, at the end of a perfect day,
The soul of a friend we've made.

NEW BOOKS RECEIVED.

Father Takes Us to New York. By Grace Humphrey, who writes most interestingly of the time when Ruth and Robert Sheldon went to New York with their parents. They had been dreaming about a trip to New York for a long time and they didn't believe they were going to have a good time with their parents, but they changed their minds, for from the time the porter said "Shall I brush you off, please Miss?" "Is your suit case ready, Miss?" (this being a Christmas present, it was fun for these was the marvelous railway station the entrance to their big adventure of "taking in New York."

They went everywhere—they saw every place and building of note in the great metropolis, they crossed the Brooklyn bridge, and learned that Manhatian is really an island, saw Fifth avenue, Greenwich Village, Coney Island, and on and on until their dream had really come true.

This is just the book for a holiday gift. If you have been to New York you will enjoy the story. If you are planning to go it will help your dream to come true. (Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia.)

Tales of the Mayflower Children. By Pauline Carrington Bouve. With illustrations by J. Brownscombe and Mabel Betsy Hill. Would you believe it, there were children in the Plymouth Colony as well as governors, ministers and Indian fighters. The story of the way they spent their time is most interestingly told.

The author has woven her story or stories around the human side on adventures that stir the boy or girls' imagination and stimulate emulation. The story of the boyhood and girlhood life of our Pilgrim ancestors should be better understood by the children of today, and they will find this book of great assistance. (Marshall Jones company, Boston.)

CHRISTMAS BOOKS RECEIVED.

An Old-Fashioned Christmas.—A collection of stories full of cheerful Yuletide spirit. There are 13 in this book which have appeared from time to time in Country Life. The reader will find that through each story there runs a golden thread of good will—it is the same old good spirit that has been realized year in and year out at Christmas time since the time the shepherds watched their flocks on the hills near Bethlehem.

"Peace on on earth and good will toward men" reaches the heart as Christmas draws near and the spirit of good cheer fills every household. Edited by Reginald T. Townsend, editor Country Life, and published by Doubleday, Page & Co., New York.

De Night in the Front From Chreesmas.—By Milt Gross, author of "Nize Baby." The story of Mr. Goss' success is this: About four years ago he was assigned space for a cartoon but he could not create anything that would fit this space, so he wrote the copy instead of drawing it. This was the beginning of the great American game which was finally divided into two camps—those who could read Grossian aloud and those who could only try. And the story of the Feitlebaums goes on!

The author-cartoonist is married, has a young daughter, lives in New York, is 33 years old and can be taken for Charlie Chaplin. (George H. Doran Co., New York.)

The Roses of St. Elizabeth.—In the Washington National cathedral where rests the body of Woodrow Wilson there will be placed twenty beautiful stained glass windows to memorialise outstanding women of the twenty centuries since Christ.

Among these twenty windows one will be dedicated to St. Elizabeth of Hungary who lived in the thirteenth century. So beautiful were her deeds of mercy that they have been perpetuated in song and story.

A book written by an Atlanta woman and published by T. C. Page & Co., Boston, has much to tell regarding this saint of the thirteenth century. In "The Roses of Saint Elizabeth," the author, Jane Scott Woodruff, portrays Elizabeth of Hungary during her life in the old Wartburg castle as the wife of Prince Ludwig, son of the Landgrave Herman.

THE STORY OF THE CATHERINES.

The Story of the Marys.
The Story of the Elizabeths.
The Story of the Johns.
The Story of the Williams.
The Story of the Catherines.—By Grace Humphrey, with illustrations by Hattie Longstreet Price, are just the books that every boy and girl would be delighted to have. Each year a new book is received: This year it is "The Story of the Catherines"—ten famous women who bore the name of Catherine and who lived in Spain, Russia, England, Germany, France, Italy and the United States, for all the splendid women by that name have not lived abroad—America claims quite a number of them.

One of the most interesting features of this beautifully bound book is that the stories are all true and what a feast each year it brings to the boys and girls who receive this book as a gift. But that is not all the publishers are asking their young friends, for the want you to suggest what the next story shall be? You are also asked to express a wish for a certain chapter to be written. Whose name will be used for the subject?

If you will sign your name to this suggestion—"I vote for the story to be on the——" and send it to The Penn Publishing company, Philadelphia, they will know that you are interested in these books. Whose name shall come next? There's another name that is as well known in America as among the queens in other countries. Think about it and then write to the publishers. Penn Publishing Co., Philadelphia.

BOOKS FOR THE LITTLE FOLKS.

The Magic Map. By Mary Graham Bonner. Illustrations by Luxor Price. Miss Bonner is the author of "A Parent's Guide to Children's Reading." This handsome book is her ideal book for children. It is entertaining, interesting and yet full of information. In writing this book the author says she was guided by her own needs during childhood. To have geography told just it was like a delightful party traveling is something that children will appreciate. "It lives with children in all its wonderful shapes and seasons and discloses its jolliest and finest facts as well as nature's wonders."

Mr. Price, when he read the story, liked it so much that he voted a great deal of time to the illustrations and no child has ever seen a map that had as much fun attached to it. There are 15 illustrations in color and 20 in black and white. (Macaulay's Book, New York.)

Funnybone Alley. By Alfred Kreymborg, with illustrations by Boris Artzybasheff. The author, who is called the "American troubadour, of whom the "Mercure de France" says: "At the other extreme from Walt Whitman Kreymborg makes himself a little child—but the small child knows as much as the poet-prophet!

Now this book is just an imaginary world to entertain the little folks. Sam Pumpernickel and his little likable pals are its inhabitants. While it is a continuous story it is made up of prose and poems so entertainingly written that they are like jolly little friends. They are playful poems written from the child's standpoint. There are seven color plates and 50 black and white drawings of which children will never grow tired. (Macaulay company, New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Great Stories of All Nations. One hundred sixty complete short stories from the literatures of all periods and countries. Edited by Maxim Lieber & Blanche Colton Williams, head of the department of English, Hunter college, New York.

This is one of the most interesting collections of short stories from all nations that has been published, and the editors are to be congratulated on their excellent work. For instance, from Egypt, Greece, India, Rome, etc., and stories by well-known writers. The book also introduces several authors who are well known on the continent but unknown to American readers. (Brentano's, publisher, New York. Price $5.00.)

Father Mississippi. The author, Lyle Saxon, tells in this historical volume the great human story of the Mississippi. Part I.—Life on a Louisiana plantation. Part II. tells the story of the origin of the name Mississippi." Among the other interesting chapters are old steamboat days and the levees. You will also meet men and women whose diaries have been used to tell of the old days of the early pioneers, the explorers, the heroes and the heroines, the gamblers and the crooks, etc. The story of the last flood—1927—with pictures, will be read with special interest. (The Century company, New York. Price $5.00.)

Because of his particularly brilliant work in "Father Mississippi," we feel justified in calling Lyle Saxon the new chronicler of the south. He is a young southern newspaper man, formerly the literary editor of the New Orleans Times-Picayune. His short stories have attracted international attention. One of them, "Cane River," was cited with special honors by the O. Henry Prize Award and Edward J. O'Brien. He is a frequent contributor to The New Republic, The Century Magazine and other periodicals. (The Century company, New York.)

HARPER TO RETURN TO OLD CENTRAL JOB

Macon, Ga., December 3.—Colonel L. H. Harper, who left the Central of Georgia railway here a couple of years ago to enter business in Tampa, Fla., is coming back tomorrow to become superintendent of the Central's creosote plant at Vineville. R. H. Gilkey, who has been superintendent since Colonel Harper gave up the position, has been promoted by the Central and transferred to Savannah.

ADSIT RESIGNS POST TO ENTER NEW FIELD

The engineer of Georgia's greatest power development has resigned his post with the Georgia Power company.

Announcement was made Saturday that Charles G. Adsit, for more than 16 years chief engineer and later vice president of the company, will enter the consulting engineer's field with his headquarters in Atlanta.

Officials of the company in announcing Mr. Adsit's resignation, pointed with pride to his achievements with the company in the planning and construction of the chain of power projects on the Tallulah, Tugalo and Chattooga rivers in northeast Georgia. To Mr. Adsit they give entire credit for the technical and engineering features of the work that has brought into existence Georgia's chief source of power supply.

Expression of regret at his decision to sever his connection with the company by H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board, and P. S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power company, and Thomas W. Martin, of Birmingham, president of the Southeastern Power and Light company, with which the Georgia company is affiliated, were made public in connection with the announcement. As a token of their esteem, a gold watch was presented to Mr. Adsit by officials of the company at a dinner in his honor Wednesday evening at the Atlanta Athletic club.

One of the foremost engineers of the nation, Mr. Adsit has constructed more than twenty different power developments in the United States and Mexico.

ATLANTAN ON BOARD OF WHITE MOTORS

Robert W. Woodruff, prominent Atlanta business man and former president of the Coca-Cola company and W. C. Teagle, of New York, have been made members of the executive committee of the White Motor company, of Cleveland, according to an announcement received here Saturday.

Mr. Woodruff and Mr. Teagle, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, succeed Windson White and his son, Thomas H. White, who recently retired from executive positions in the company's official personnel.

Other members of the executive committee include, Walter C. White, president of the company; H. H. Johnson, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Otto Miller, also of Cleveland.

With the appointment of Mr. Woodruff on the executive committee, a more aggressive sales policy on the part of the White company in the southern states will be carried out in the near future, it was stated. Mr. Woodruff's appointment particularly was regarded as significant, marking as it does a renewal of his active participation in the management of the White Motor company. He formerly was connected with the company as general manager of the south and subsequently as vice president in general charge of the sales department.

"MEANEST THIEF"

Takes Ancient Clock From Church in Haralson.

Senoia, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—The "meanest thief yet" has turned up at Haralson. He went in the Baptist church recently and carried off the clock which for the past quarter of a century has marked time at that place for worship. The clock was highly prized on account of its age.

$500,000,000 Fire Loss.

Jackson, Miss., December 3.—(AP)—Fire originating in a dry kiln destroyed the plant of the Graham Stove & Hardware company, entailing a loss estimated by officials of the concern at $500,000. The main office of the company is at Louisville, Ky.

SACCO-VANZETTI ECHOES HEARD

Boston, December 3.—(United News.)—Faint echo of the world-famed Sacco-Vanzetti case, two juries reported here today in the cases of three women and six men who tried to aid the condemned anarchists' unsuccessful fight to defeat the electric chair.

One jury, after 23 hours and 40 minutes deliberation, decided that Powers Hapgood, youthful liberal and Harvard graduate, was guilty of making a pro-Sacco speech on Boston Common last August without a permit.

The same jury could not agree on a charge of inciting to riot, which Hapgood also faced.

A disagreement also was reported in the case of Cosimo Carvotta, who was arrested with Hapgood on charges of rioting and assaulting a policeman.

The second jury, deliberating for a shorter period, returned verdicts of not guilty in the cases of Hapgood and seven others who were charged with sauntering and loitering in connection with a Sacco-Vanzetti demonstration in front of the statehouse.

Besides Hapgood the defendants were John Dos Passos, New York playwright; Ella Bloor, of New York and San Francisco; Ellen Hayes, former Wellesley college professor; Catherine Huntington, of Boston; George L. Teeple, New York civil engineer; John H. Lawson, New York playwright, and George Kraska, of Winthrop.

Edna St. Vincenti Millay, the poetess, also faced the sauntering and loitering charge, was defaulted at the opening of the trial earlier this week when she failed to appear in court. She must now return to Boston to remove the default.

ADAIR HOTEL SITE WILL BE OFFERED

Little Rock, Ark., December 2.—(AP) Public sale of the site of the proposed William N. Young hotel here is expected soon after judgment on the $725,000 bond issue is granted J. B. Wheat, trustee, of Atlanta, by United States district court.

Final decree in the suit of Wheat against the Young Hotel company is scheduled to be handed down December 30, the company having permitted a "pro confesso" decree to be entered.

Bondholders, for whom Wheat is trustee, hold a first mortgage on the property and a foreclosure is sought. Bonds of the Young hotel were handled by the Adair Realty company, Atlanta.

BUDGET SPENT WRONG, MINING CONGRESS TOLD

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—That too much of the annual budget was spent for the maintenance of a "centralized form of government" was declared today by Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, at the closing session of the American mining congress.

Describing the changes which have taken place in the government since he was first elected to congress 33 years ago, the Indiana senator asserted that it had deviated from the principles upon which it had been founded into a strongly centralized bureaucracy.

American capital was urged to devote itself to the development of mineral resources in the southern states rather than to those of foreign countries in a resolution adopted by the congress.

A resolution, providing that the budget bureau and the departments of commerce and interior be petitioned to provide larger appropriations for the bureau of mines and the geological survey, also was approved.

WOMAN IS KILLED IN KENTUCKY CRASH

Murray, Ky., December 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Silas Vaughn, 66, was killed instantly and her son, Casey, fatally injured when their automobile was struck near Concord Crossing today by a Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis passenger train. A daughter, Mrs. Fred McClure, was seriously hurt.

ALABAMA TO BACK SMITH IF NAMED, MOORE DECLARES

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

New York, December 3.—"If Al Smith gets the democratic nomination for the presidency, the democrats of Alabama will support him," declared Judge Walter Moore, democratic national committeeman from Alabama, on his arrival here today at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Judge Moore takes a different view of opinion in the south with respect to Governor Smith's nomination from that expressed by other recent interpreters of the attitude of that section of the country.

"There has been, of course, a good deal of agitation on the subject in Alabama," he said, "and it is still going on. You don't have to put a megaphone to your ears to distinguish the sound.

"But this much can be depended on: Alabama will support for the presidency the nominee of the next democratic national convention, and there is not the slightest chance that the state will go otherwise than democratic. And if Alabama goes democratic in that election as it will—there need be no apprehension about any of the other southern states; they, too, will go democratic and if Al Smith is the nominee of the convention they all will support him."

Jackets Rise To Great Heights To Beat Bulldogs

Great Spirit Wins for Tech, Says Staton

Alexander Praised as Jackets Beat Powerful Georgia Bulldog.

BY JOHN STATON.

In that uncertain light which cast weird shadows on the field comes the vision of a golden jersey, crashing with mighty power into a maze of red. The final whistle cleaves the tension, the great game is over. The proud body carrying that jersey sags a little, then topples to the ground, utterly exhausted, completely burned out. A moment before he was a catapultic demon flinging himself into a maze of red, now he is only a tired boy with no strength left to walk from the field. Fight, fight, an indomitable spirit, a raw-hiding will kept the bodies of this man and ten others carrying on when the flesh cried out for peace.

That uncertain light reveals too the vision of a smallish man as he walks briskly from the field, hands thrust deeply into the pockets of a short overcoat, head pensively inclined towards his shoulders. His is a strong face, tempered with human kindness and a deep understanding. A faint smile hovers at his lips, his eyes flash a great pride, as this man, thinking, thinking of years to come, walks briskly from the field.

Alexander Praised.

Now you know why Tech was able to defeat a great Georgia team. The masterful strategy of Alexander and the unflinching, unfaltering fight of every Tech man is a combination which even the mighty Georgia cannot override. Tech was able, through the wisdom and strategy of Alexander and a magnificent fighting stand to whitewash the five-touchdown eleven. That same Tech was able, by sheer fight and the canny playing of Alexander to twice get into that promised land hitherto inhabited only by such teams as Yale, Mercer and Alabama.

More power to Alexander—more power to fighting Tech. They have waited, seven seasons now, for the southern conference championship. At last it has come in such an auspicious manner that one cannot deny the champions their just right.

The plan of defense which Tech employed functioned perfectly. Roughly the plan was this: Let Georgia have all the short passes they want when Superior line plays combined with an effective offensive at critical times gave Georgia Tech a victory over Georgia Saturday afternoon on Grant field, 12 to 0. The victory carried with it the championship of the southern conference as Tech has not been defeated by a member of the association. The local eleven was tied by Vanderbilt which was also tied by Tennessee and Alabama.

It was a great victory for Tech, which had not been expected to win over the eleven which defeated Yale earlier in the season, 14 to 10. The Golden Tornado, however, rose to the occasion and played one of its best games of the year. The locals tackled and blocked. They took advantage of everything and followed the ball closely.

This great game, the football classic of the south, attracted a colorful gathering of 38,000, the largest crowd that ever saw a football game in the southland. It was an enthusiastic crowd which appreciated the efforts of the players who executed their formations in a most pleasing manner.

Bad Field.

Weather conditions were unfavorable for the game. The heavy rain of the last twenty-four hours left the field in poor condition. When the struggle opened pools of water covered the surface in spots while the mud made open play next to impossible. Despite these handicaps, the game was hard fought and well played. Tech used the huddle on offense. The quarterback received the ball from center with his back to the pivot man. The center handed the ball to the quarter, who, in turn, passed it to the ball carriers. The locals used the diamond style of defense which proved effective against Georgia. The team from Athens did not use the huddle.

Signals were called from regular formations. A backfield shift was used with one and two hops in either direction.

On defense, Georgia used the box style of defense. The Georgians, however, showed a weakness on protecting their forward passes. On a few occasions a Tech player intercepted the tosses and one of these was directly responsible for one of Tech's scores.

Mizell, of Georgia Tech, had a decided advantage in the punting over Estes. The latter invariably punted the wet, heavy oval out of bounds, while Mizell generally got his kicks away in good shape for fair distance. Tech gained several yards on the ex-

'28 Dempsey, Tunney Bout Is Expected

None of Present Contestants in "Eliminations" Seem Worrisome.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—So far, at least, the latest of the winter heavyweight "eliminations" show no signs of breaking up the prospects for the third edition of the Dempsey-Tunney championship feud in 1928.

No menacing gestures are being made by any of the new figures in the tournament, such as Phil Scott of England, while some of the veterans of the elimination game seem to be a little the worse for wear.

Too many flip-flops sprained Paulino's back and kept him out of a prospective match with Scott, resulting in no little annoyance to Scott as well as the Spaniard. Knute Hansen, substituting for Paulino, knocked out Scott in one round, while Paulino, on his return to action last week, was outpointed by the Cleveland "rubber man," Johnny Risko.

Sharkey Is Out.

Jack Sharkey, a semi-finalist last year, is out of action temporarily with an injured finger that forced postponement of a match with Tom Heeney. These two are slated to meet in January in what may turn out to be one of the most important eliminations of the lot. Heeney has impressed critics with his rapid development since first appearing here a year ago. The rugged New Zealander is expected to give Sharkey a severe come-back test.

The New Battle Cry.

There's a new battle cry in town tonight—"Georgia beat Yale; Yale beat the Army; the Army won the world war and—Tech lays down international law.

Tech has beaten the great Dream and Wonder team and there is no gainsaying their right to the conference title. The man who sings an alibi for the Bulldogs is as wet as the field was Saturday BUT the man who says Georgia "quit" is wetter.

As our old friend Andy Jaffee would say, "It was written in the stars." We firmly believe that Tech would have won that game on a dry field as well as a wet one. There was no stopping that gold and white Tornado of Saturday.

The team that beat Yale and sailed through eight other games like a bark riding the crest of the wave before a spanking breeze looked to be just a bit too keen. But our opinion is that this hint of staleness was caused very largely by the fact that Tech's line was playing tag with Georgia's backfield behind the line of scrimmage. That sort of thing wreaks havoc with such tricky plays as Georgia wants to use.

There can be little doubt that the soggy, slippery ball cut down the efficiency of Georgia's passing attack materially, but the rushing of Tech's forwards played a greater part than did the slippery ball. And the ball hawk tendencies of Tech's secondary men converted several passes into Tech gains that could not be laid to the wet field.

If you talk to 10 men who saw that game you will hear 10 reasons for Georgia's defeat but in one respect those reasons will be the same. That great forward wall of the Tornado will gets its credit from them all.

And again if you talk to these same 10 men you will hear a word of praise from each for those great Georgia backs who flashed for 12 first downs despite the handicap of playing behind a line that was outrushed nearly all the way.

Estes, McTigue, McCrary, Hooks, Dudley and the rest of those backs deserve more than credit. They deserve praise of the highest. They fought to the finish against the odds of a superior line and an inspired team.

When we sing the praise of Georgia Tech we must call to mind the names of nearly a score of men. Every man of the squad who faced

GOULD WOULD CHANGE NAME OF TORNADO TO "WRECKING CREW"

BY ALAN J. GOULD.

(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Instead of the "ramblin' wreck" that they sang about, Georgia Tech's football team today turned out to be a wrecking crew. With a few spectacular thrusts it demolished the championship hopes of the hitherto unbeaten University of Georgia eleven to the decisive tune of 12 to 0, while a record-breaking southern crowd of 38,000 watched one of the biggest upsets of the year.

In a slashing, bitterly fought battle through the muddy morasses of Grant field, Tech's wreckers knocked the advance "dope" into a cocked hat, put an abrupt end to Georgia's march of triumph and simultaneously lifted themselves to the top of the southern conference heap.

To the dumfounding astonishment of about half the big crowd and hysterical delight of other half—depending upon partisan feeling—Tech uncorked an attack that caught Georgia by complete surprise, put over two touchdowns in sensational fashion and erected a defensive barrier that blocked all counter efforts of the mighty Bulldogs to turn the tide.

Tech's twin terrors in the sparkling drive that overcame the handicaps of a muddy gridiron and overthrew the vaunted Georgians, were Warner Mizell and "Stumpy" Thomason, a pair of halfbacks who displayed an utter disregard of conditions, betting odds or the heralded fame of their opponents.

Great Punting.

It was Mizell's brilliant kicking that repeatedly pulled Tech out of difficulties, while putting Georgia "in the hole," and it was this halfback's trusty right arm that hurled the pass to Durant, quarterback, for Tech's first touchdown on a 43-yard play that brought the crowd to its feet late in the second quarter. Screened by a flock of interferers, Durant plucked the wet and slippery pigskin out of the air and splashed 25 yards to cross Georgia's goal with the points that were sufficient, as it turned out, to settle the argument then and there.

This sensational play, with Georgia's supposedly best weapon turned against it and her defense completely outguessed, seemed to break some of the spirit of Georgia's game while also accelerating the Tech attack. Tech came close to tallying again before the half ended, as Mizell galloped 38 yards after intercepting a pass, and through most of the last

Rodgers Made New Manager Of Travelers

New Pilot Succeeds Famous Joe Cantillon at Head of Club.

Little Rock, Ark., December 3.—Announcement of the appointment of William K. (Bill) Rodgers, veteran minor league manager, as pilot of the Little Rock Travelers for next season was made here today.

Rodgers comes to the Southern league from Peoria, of the Three I league, where he was manager the past three seasons, winning a pennant in 1925. The new Traveler manager is 37 years old and has had 17 years of experience as a player and manager, being best known on the Pacific coast. He broke into the game in 1910 with Waterbury, Conn., as a shortstop. The next four years he played second base with the Portland club of the Pacific Coast league, and spent the next two seasons with Cleveland and Boston in the American league and Cincinnati in the National. In 1917 he went back to Portland and in 1918 became manager and part owner of the Sacramento club. He remained at Sacramento for four years. In 1922 he managed the Denver club, of the Western league, and the next two years he was manager of the Albany club, of the Eastern league. In 1925 he went to Peoria and remained there until the close of the past season.

Rodgers succeeds Joe Cantillon, whose two years' contract with the Little Rock club expired at the close of the past season.

Georgia Falls Before Tech Machine, 12-0

Thomason, Mizell, Durant and Randolph Brilliant in Victory Over Bulldogs.

BY WHITNER CARY.

The Battalion of Death charged in vain.

At 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon the Southern conference title and possible national championship recognition loomed before the Georgia football team. At 4:23 o'clock the blast from a referee's whistle was the funeral hymn to those high hopes. Within two hours and 23 minutes an inspired Tech football team had risen to heights never before scaled this season, had stopped the wild gallop of the Thousand Backs, had halted the mad thrusts of the Mask of the Red Death and in turn had twice crossed the Georgia's goal line to win a great football game by the score of 12 to 0.

Out of the misty air canopying Tech Flats there rises the Gold and White banner of Tech. Beneath the sod of that field lie buried the hopes of the eleven that was once called the Team of Destiny.

Nine times this season the Red and Black colors have been hoisted to the breeze. Nine times this season has a defeated team dipped its banners in recognition of Georgia's greatness. But this tenth time, upon the outcome of which hung fame, glory and honor, saw the Battalion of Death facing a team which would not give when giving meant touchdowns, which was alert at all times against the deadly passing attack that has made the word Georgia feared throughout the football world, which refused to believe that it was beaten until proof was furnished and which took full advantage of every break that presented itself.

Glory to Jackets.

On nine occasions this season this writer has eulogized the work of the Georgia backfield. Allow this same writer to doff his cap in humble praise of the work Saturday afternoon of three Tech backs—Mizell, Thomason and Durant. It was the work of the Tech line that halted the many desperate thrusts of the plunging Georgia backs. It was the splendid work of the Tech secondary defense that broke up time and again the aerial attack launched by the Georgians and it was the wonderful punting of Mizell that was a big contributing factor in the

Vanderbilt Comes From Behind To Down Alabama, 14-7

N. C. Staters Trim Aggies Of Michigan

North Carolina Smears 19-to-0 Defeat on M. A. on Muddy Field.

Raleigh, N. C., December 3.—(AP)—Playing in weather typical of the great lakes region and on a water-soaked field, North Carolina State upset predictions here today in turning back a heavier Michigan State eleven, 19 to 0, thereby keeping its state championship and southern conference slate clean for the season and adding an intersectional victory to its crown.

The winners made no substitutions. Bob Warren, Carolina fullback, who hails from Wisconsin, the visitors neighbors, figured prominently in the victory. The soggy field, a steady downpour of rain and chilly breezes played havoc with both teams' attempts for yardage with forward passes. Fumbles were frequent.

Aggies Threaten.

The Aggies threatened in the opening minutes of play. Led by Captain Paul Smith, who figured in four consecutive first downs from midfield after the first kickoff, Michigan State reached North Carolina State's eight-yard line, only to be hurled back.

From then on, the Carolinians figured in the gains, making 13 first downs to the Aggies' six.

North Carolina State drew first blood in the middle of the first period, gaining the offensive on Michigan State's 20-yard line when a line play resulted in a fumble. Jack McDowall skirted end for 13 yards, added four more and then one on a lateral pass. Bob Warren smashed guard for two measures and on a mixed signal fake, he plowed guard for four yards and goal.

The second and third periods saw scoreless ball, many Aggie substitutions and both teams fumbling.

The fourth period witnessed the Old North State's second threat and touchdown by steady driving from the 48-yard line with McDowall and Warren gaining four first downs. Warren hit the line again for a touchdown. A pass, McDowall to Jordan counted the extra point.

Attempts Comeback.

After an exchange of punts a few minutes later, Michigan State attempted a desperate comeback from its 34-yard line. Kurrle, substitute, got four yards on a line play. McCosh, another second string halfback, tried the line, fumbled and Crum, of North Carolina State, took it on a run for 30 yards and goal.

Michigan State intercepted a Carolina State pass on the goal line for what was first ruled a safety. After some argument, officials ruled the play a touchback and Michigan played the ball on its 20-yard line.

The work of McDowall and Warren in the backfield and that of Childress and Nicholson figured prominently for the winners. Captain Smith and Deacon, backs, and Ross and Hornbeck, linesmen played outstandingly for Michigan State.

Tech Line Given Greatest Credit

changes and on some occasions, Georgia was placed in bad holes because of Estes' poor kicks.

It was the twenty-third meeting of these two great teams of the southland. Previous to today's battle, each had won ten games and two had resulted in ties. Today's victory over Georgia gave Tech the edge and permanent possession of a cup which was donated to the team which won two out of the last three struggles.

Line Better.

Tech's victory must be attributed to the great play of its five center men. These players repeatedly broke through and smeared Georgia's plays before the runner reached the scrimmage line. They continually rushed the kickers and passers and on one occasion nailed Estes for a 15-yard loss when he attempted to forward pass on a fourth down.

As the game was played the score represents the difference of the two teams. Tech was inspired. It was up and fighting all the time and took advantage of everything. Georgia, however, fought up until the final whistle had blown but Tech was too powerful offensively and defensively. After the game, the huge crowd surged on the field and gave the victors a rousing ovation.

The struggle compared favorably with some of the big games I have seen in the north, east and far west. I was especially impressed with the tackling and blocking. Tacklers were cut down for the desired results and the ball carirers brought down with hard, clean tackles.

The formations were carefully planned and showed the results of expert coaching. Conditions, however, made it impossible to execute some of the complicated plays planned for this game and the struggle settled down to a battle between the two lines and a kicking duel between Mizell and Estes.

Georgia was a strong favorite, the wagering being as high as 3 to 1. The team which won over Yale started out as a sure winner and early in the second quarter carried the oval to Tech's seven-yard line, where it was lost on downs. Georgia took the ball deep into the locals' territory by a series of off-tackle smashes and line plunges. Estes did fine work jamming off his tackles, while McCrary shot through the middle of his line for short gains. The march was aided by a fine forward pass, Estes to Dudley, which was good for 17 yards. Tech, however, strengthened in the shadows of its goal posts and made its opponent surrender the oval on downs.

Sangor Title Contender.

Because of his recent victory, by a shade, over Bud Taylor, bantamweight king, in a match which did not involve the title, Joey Sangor is being heralded as the outstanding contender for the world's featherweight crown.

Four Conference Teams Undefeated After Hard Grind

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Four Southern conference teams stood with unbeaten records Saturday as the football season closed in Dixie, but Georgia Tech with seven victories, two more than Tennessee, apparently had the best claim on the mythical title. Vanderbilt and North Carolina State were the other two unwhipped finishers.

The final standing:

College	Won	Lost	Tied
Georgia Tech	7	0	1
Tennessee	5	0	1
Vanderbilt	5	0	2

Georgia Falls Before Tech Machine, 12-0

Thomason, Mizell, Durant and Randolph Brilliant in Victory Over Bulldogs.

gilt-edge defense of the Tech goal line. But after due praise is given each of these elements in the masterful showing made by Tech, allow plenty of space for the great offensive work of Mizell, Durant and Thomason. It was the first two mentioned that took the leading roles in Tech's first touchdown, scored in the second quarter. It was the great runing ability of Stumpy that in that third quarter accounted for Tech's second and last touchdown.

Mizell Completes Pass.

With the ball on Georgia's 42-yard line in the second quarter Mizell shot the first Tech pass of the afternoon. It was perfectly timed and brilliantly executed. Into the outstretched arms of Durant went the oval. With the ball tucked safely under his arm Durant set out on the last 20 yards to fame and glory. Tech had scored. The handwriting was seen upon the sloppy ground at Grant field. Georgia's goal line had been crossed. For the first time this season a southern team was leading the Bulldogs.

Stumpy's bid for fame came in the third quarter. Intercepting Hooks' pass on his own 15-yard line, he made a brilliant gallop of 65 yards before being nailed. From this point Randolph drove through in two mighty thrust to Georgia's 10-yard line. Again Randolph hit the line and two precious yards were added. Then Stumpy took the ball and circled left end for his contribution to the afternoon's scoring.

That is the way the Tech touchdowns were made and those two brilliant feats were the outstanding offensive features for Tech during the afternoon. For as can be seen from the statistics Tech made but four first downs.

That about tells the story of Tech's offense. But that does not tell of the brilliant chapters written by the Jacket defense. That defense exhibited Saturday afternoon will long adorn the honor roles of Tech. Georgia had its opportunity to score. Tech had its opportunity to halt that score.

Tech Outplayed.

This came about in the opening minutes of the second quarter. During the opening stanza Georgia had outplayed Tech. Had outplayed the Jackets to such an extent that when the whistle ended the quarter the ball was in the Bulldogs' possession on Tech's 32-yard line. McCrary got three yards on the third down and then on the fourth a beautiful pass, Estes to Dudley, put the ball on Tech's 16-yard line. It looked as if the Battalion of Death was on one of its deadly marches. Could Tech do that which no other team in the south had done? Dudley ripped off a yard and then this great back came right back with a neat gain off tackle that took the ball to Tech's nine-yard line. Estes got half a yard and it was fourth down and inches to go. McCrary, the reliable old battering ram that has so often torn the ranks of the opposition in ruthless fashion, was called upon. Herdis made a mighty plunge, but that Tech line which saw a touchdown but yards away rose in its might and the thrust was denied, the ball went over and Georgia's first real threat at a touchdown was history.

That bold bid in the opening minutes of the second quarter was the closest the Battalion of Death came to scoring. It made other gains as attested by the fact that 12 first downs dot its record. But so great was the defense of Tech that these first downs could not be grouped to any extent.

In calm retrospect three big incidents stand out in that game. The first came when McCrary's bold try for a fourth down gain was halted. The second was when Tech completed its forward pass, Mizzell to Durant, an the third was when Thompason intercepted Hook's pass, an interception that enabled the fleet Stumpy to carry the ball 65 yards before being downed, and which paved the way for Tech's second touchdown.

Splendid Defense Work.

The splendid work of the Tech defense halted McCrary's great effort. A mix-up between Boland and McCrary as to who should guard Thomason on forward pass defense was a big contributing factor in the successful heave of Mizell to Durant. Both McCrary and Boland thought they were to guard Stumpy and as a result Durant was left open. Stumpy's interception of Hooks' pass came on fourth down with Georgia needing four yards to go. The Tech defense was all set for a pass.

As long as men gather and partisans of each side mingle together there will always be the question of what effect the wet field had on Georgia. This writer has seen the Battalion of Death play ten games this season. Nine of them were on a dry, or comparatively dry fields. The other occasion was Saturday on a field that was practically a mire.

There is no telling how Georgia would have played on a dry field, there is no telling what defense Tech might have exhibited on a dry field or what offense the Jackets may have flashed. Those questions rest in the domain of speculation. But what is known is that Georgia's great offense, that has been supreme against all other teams, failed to function to any great extent Saturday. Whether it was the wet field or the splendid defense of Tech lies hidden beneath the moist sod of that historic battleground.

What is also known is that Tech showed flashes of brilliance and showed these flashes at the proper time, the time when touchdowns were needed. All honor and praise for the Jackets. The game was not decided on a dry field, but on a wet field and on a wet field Tech won. So give all honor and glory to the victor.

Picking out Georgia stars for the afternoon brings Smith, Jacobson and Nash into the defensive group and the brilliant work of McTigue and Dudley in the offense picture. The two Georgia guards showed up in their usual splendid way. Nash also contributed some good work. McTigue entered the affair rather late, but his ground gaining was about the best seen from a Georgia back during the afternoon. Dudley made some neat gains during the time he saw action and also was a tower of strength on the defense.

So now we come to the end of the rainbow trail. Not an end that we would have liked. Not an end that we had pictured. But fate, destiny or whatever factor shapes our ends has written and its edict must be obeyed.

This writer had pictured Georgia in the proud role of conference champion. He had frankly said as much. He has followed Georgia on ten battlegrounds since September's sun bid the south farewell. On nine occasions he has chronicled victories. Saturday afternoon he saw the Battalion of Death charge in vain for the first time. He has learned to know those members of the Battalion of Death and in knowing them has learned to love them. With heart heavy and predictions gone up in the misty air, he can truthfully say that never in glorious victory did those gallant members of what was once called the "Team of Destiny" show any greater fighting heart and soul than they did on the lone ocasion when their colors were dipped.

Like Napoleon's Old Guard at Waterloo, they marched to football death with all the dash and fight that they have shown on nine other battlegrounds. The Battalion of Death dies but it never surrenders nor alibies. Its past record speaks for itself. Although defeated by Tech and denied the conference title, it belongs to the football ages.

But why go on? My heart lies buried beneath that sodden field where on Saturday afternoon a gallant band of football players met another gallant band and fell in noble and glorious defeat. All glory to Tech, all glory to the great machine that Saturday halted the Georgia bid. But while lifting our glasses high in praise of the winner, let's pause a moment and in silence pay tribute to the Battalion of Death. Great in victory, noble in defeat, it stands as a monument to southern football. The Battalion of Death sleeps. Its spirit will go on forever. From the ashes of this defeat there will rise at Athens in the years to come another Dream and Wonder team that will march triumphant to the end of the football rainbow. Football players of Tech, I congratulate you. Football players of the Battalion of Death, I salute you as a game, splendid set of fellows whom it has been a pleasure to have known and to have written about. Farewell.

WINNER TAKE ALL

In the picture is seen Captain Ed Crowley of Tech receiving The Constitution cup, the trophy emblematic of victory in the annual Tech-Georgia game, from the hands of Captain Chick Shiver, of Georgia.

This handsome cup was placed in competition three years ago upon renewal of athletic relations between the two schools. The conditions were that it was to go into the possession of the team winning the game in 1925 and to go into permanent possession of the team which won it two years.

In 1925 Tech won the game and the possession for one year of this handsome trophy. Last year the silverware made the trip to Athens when the Bulldogs came back in the second half of that memorable game and defeated Tech 14 to 13. This year the two teams faced each other with one leg each on the cup.

Tech's great victory Saturday made the second one since the cup was put in competition and as a result the cup now becomes the permanent property of the Jacket institution.

Much interest has attached to the cup race and each team has felt a pardonable pride in having it in its possession. It was a constant reminder and tangible proof of victory.

The cup will be formally presented to the Tech captain at the annual football banquet.

Petrels Down Miami Hurricane by 13 to 0

Birds Run Up 13-Point Lead in Second Period To Beat Florida Eleven—Taliaferro Stars.

Coral Gables, Fla., December 3.—(AP)—Oglethorpe university's Petrels, heavier by more than 16 pounds to the man, today triumphed over the University of Miami, 13 to 0, in a quick moving game.

Clark Taliaferro, halfback, stood out for the Georgians, while the steady Cliff Courtney, back, and Rod Ashman, end, bore the brunt of the Miami defense.

The Hurricane, outclassed, was a far different team than that which bowed to Howard Thanksgiving day, fighting the Petrels every step of the way. Coach Cub Buck, suddenly taken ill, was on the sidelines in a closed automobile and did much to direct his team through a telephone system to the bench. A ghostly voice, dimly heard above the din of the stands, pepped up each Miami substitute as he went in to the game.

Oglethorpe made march after march up and down the field only to lose the ball to the scrappy Hurricane.

Petrels Score Twice.

Both Petrel scores came in the second period. The first was the result of a 50-yard march, started with eight and 15-yard gains through tackle by Taliaferro. At the eight-yard line Miami drew a five-yard offside penalty. From there Malsby made a couple and Garlington went through center for the score. Vaugn kicked the point. Later in the quarter something went awry in the Hurricane backfield. The center's pass went wild and, while Halfback Mills made a valiant effort to recover, the ball rolled more than 20 yards over the goal line, where Malsby fell on it. Vaughn missed the point for the extra score.

Bruce Caldwell Honored.

In spite of the fact that he was ruled ineligible for football at Yale because he had played on the freshman team at Brown, Bruce Caldwell was awarded his letter and the team also presented him with a gold watch at the end of the season. Caldwell played in all of the early season games and was not ruled off the team until on the eve of the clash with Princeton.

High Scorer

J. F. "PHONEY" SMITH.

Macon, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—Eleven consecutive games without failing to score at least one touchdown, during which he has amassed an individual total of 125 points, is the record of Joseph F. "Phoney" Smith, sensational halfback of Mercer university's football team.

In five of these contests, Smith scored all of Mercer's points. He is credited with having won more than a score of games for his team during the two years he has been on the varsity.

"Phoney" added to his fame by racing 90 yards through the great Georgia eleven for the first touchdown scored on the Bulldogs in the south this season.

In the first four games this season, "Phoney" checked up 64 points. In the seven minutes Mercer had possession of the ball in the battle with Furman, he scored 13 points and gained 190 yards from scrimmage. He ran 45 yards for one of the touchdowns, 90 for the other and kicked goal for one of the added points.

With a physique more like that of a tennis player than a football star, weighing only 160 pounds, Smith is unusually fast.

In 1925 and 1926, Smith was selected on the all-southern intercollegiate football and basketball teams.

Gene Explains Fighter's State Before Battle

"Three or Four Hours Before Championship Contest Unpleasant," He Says.

New York, December 3.—(United News.)—The mental state of a fighter in the crisis of a championship battle was described by Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, in his first formal speech over the radio. Tunney psycho-analyzed himself for his big audience.

"The three or four hours before a championship contest are anything but pleasant to either of the contestants," Tunney said.

"The whole atmosphere surrounding the city in which the contest is held is charged with nerrousness and no matter how confident or how much control a man may have of his nervous reactions, he is bound to absorb some of the atmosphere."

Fear and worry are the things that disarm a contestant, Tunney said.

Calm State of Mind.

"Before the contest of September, 1926, in which I won the heavyweight championship, I developed the faculty of closing the eyes of my mind to the importance of the event and to look upon it as an ordinary boxing match with a man who was no better physically fit than myself, who had the same number of arms as myself, and who was in every important thing just as human as myself," he said.

"I knew that I was physically fit, had a knowledge of my game accumulated over seven years of actual experience, knew my resistance as good as any man's, knew that my recuperative powers must be as good as any man's and knew that there were no super-men.

"Therefore, I had the mental advantage over my opponent, and this advantage helped more than many people realize."

Not once did Tunney mention the name of Jack Dempsey, from whom he won the title and against whom he successfully defended it at Chicago.

Tunney's opinion is that the highly temperamental and imaginative boxer, in which class he placed himself, is better than the unimaginative, dull and phlegmatic type.

"It is usually the highly nervous, temperamental type that reach the top of the sport of boxing," he said.

In Successive Ties.

Vanderbilt's football team was forced to be satisfied with ties on two successive Saturdays during the last season. These gridders were held by Georgia Tech and Tennessee.

Kansas Picks Pilot.

The University of Kansas football outfit will be captained next year by Harold Hauser, an end, who was elected leader at the close of the present season.

Suckers Pick Linesman.

Bob Zuppkes' Illinois lettermen went into the line in selecting their gridiron leader for the 1928 season. The honor was conferred on Albert Nowack, tackle and kicking star.

Alley Cat Gets Blame for Loss Of Navy Squad

Baltimore, December 3.—Spike Webb, trainer for the Middies' eleven, is authority for the statement that an alley cat cost the Navy the Army-Navy game.

"It was months ago that I first saw a mouse in my auto," Spike explained. "He was in the tool box under the back seat. He was a nice mouse, and tame. I brought him bread and fed him.

"From the time Reginald appeared—I called him Reginald—we won in everything. But he was missing just before the Notre Dame game and things went haywire. I had forgot to feed him the day before.

"I put a chocolate eclair in the tool box and he came back. I fed him camembert cheese and toasted English muffins. I didn't want Reginald gallivating off foraging before the Army-Navy game, I tell you.

"Then a couple of nights before the Army-Navy game I drove over to visit some friends and this cat jumps in the car while it is parked. I chased it out but I was too late. The cat sneered at me as he skiddooed and none of us have seen Reginald since."

Will Ritchie Is Still Hoping For Comeback

Luis Firpo Is Also Planning Return Trip to States for More Bouts.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Willie Ritchie is still working on his comeback. Ritchie feels very much encouraged because in his third start he defeated Dick Hoppe, who whipped Mushy Callahan, the junior-welterweight champion. Ritchie wants to get Callahan, and says he is sure if he has an opportunity he'll gather another world's championship.

It isn't at all impossible, although Willie is now 36 years of age. Ritchie is an exceptional athlete. He never burned himself out fighting and he never dissipated. He stopped and went into business after losing the lightweight championship to Freddy Welsh, in England, by a single point in the English system of scoring. Ritchie nearly knocked out Benny Leonard in a four-round bout after the war, and then was stopped in the last round of an eight-round bout with Leonard in New Jersey. He wasn't knocked out, but was helpless on the ropes and the referee stepped in. Ritchie always says he could easily have finished the round, which had only a few seconds to go.

A man could be beaten by Benny Leonard and still have plenty of "stuff" to beat a Callahan.

In trying to come back, seeing the chances in present-day boxing, Ritchie went through a year of preparatory training. He boxed a few exhibition contests for charity before going in for the money. Then he stopped Tommy Comiskie, of San Francisco, in four rounds, beat Dick Hoppe, a very clever and dangerous fighter, and beat Bobbie LaSalle a couple of weeks ago.

Kayoes DeHate.

LaSalle had knockedout DeHate, who had beaten Jack Silver, who had defeated Callahan. Arguing on this line Ritchie says he has a first-class chance to win the junior welterweight title. He weighs in that class at present having slightly outgrown the lightweights.

In his best days Ritchie was a whirlwind fighter. He has all the cleverness of the great crop of champions he defeated a few years ago, has looked like a master in recent bouts, and is likely to make it interesting for a lot of the boys who are now cavorting about in the money. In any case it will be worth while to follow this old-time champion's progress. He may do what so many others have tried to do. Bob Fitzsimmons was nearly Ritchie's age when he knocked out Jim Corbett for the world's heavyweight championship, and much older than Ritchie when he won his third world's championship, the light-heavyweight, from young George Gardner. A fighter with real class always lasts longer in the ring than any slugger.

Firpo May Fight Again.

Advices from the Argentine say that Luis Firpo, the well known automobile agent of Buenos Aires, intends to invade the states again and have another crack at the heavyweight title.

Luis was a sensation on his first trip, when he battled his way up to Jack Dempsey and gave Dempsey the most hectic three minutes in all his varied experience.

Paolino says that when he visited the Argentine Firpo was too fat to fight. It isn't likely that Luis will ever do any more sensational fighting, but of course, it's possible. He had no chance on his last trip, when he was arrested daily, not allowed to train, and badgered by "reformers" out of all possibility of getting into fighting trim for Harry Wills. Even at that Wills didn't do much to Luis.

Natural Fighter.

Firpo was a great natural fighter. He never learned anything about boxing. That's against his chance to "come back." When he was knocking out a row of heavies on his first visit, he was one tough hombre. Strength and a right hand punch were his assets. If he's as fat as Paolino says, he probably won't have either the strength or the punch. But if he shows up with anything at all he'll have a marvelous ballyhoo. That three minutes at the Polo Grounds won't be forgotten for a few years more. Firpo did more to Dempsey in three minutes than Gene Tunney did in two ten-round fights. And in those days Dempsey was Dempsey.

Jimmy DeForest says he's seen photos of Firpo, and Luis doesn't weigh an ounce over 250. That isn't so much for Luis. Only 30 pounds of excess baggage. Why, Willard used to carry 60 or 70 extra pounds between fights. Jeffries 30 pounds and Packey McFarland, lightweight, packed 20 pounds he didn't need when he began training for his last fight, with Mike Gibbons.

Referee Feels Blow.

Long Tom Hawkins, a dusky gent with a wild wallop, who hails from down near the Mexican border, recently whipped Chuck Wiggins, Gene Tunney's hefty sparring partner. But that wasn't the feature of the evening. In one of the mixups Hawkins pulled a new one. He missed Chuck and knocked out the referee. The spectators did the counting while the referee was on the floor. When they reached 14 the referee got up and claimed the kayo wasn't "official," and the fight went on. Wiggins says the referee was still dizzy when he held up Hawkins' hand. But he must have been a square guy, at that.

Spears Leads Last Minute Vandy Rally

Perfect Pass by Star Back Gives Commodores Victory as Game Ends.

Birmingham, Ala., December 3.—(AP) Held on an even basis during the first three quarters, Vanderbilt came back in the final period today and passed its way to a 14-to-7 victory over the Alabama Crimson Tide.

Because of the sea of mud that constituted the playing field, both teams relied for the greater part on straight line drives during the two initial periods, unwilling to risk a break through a fumbled pass.

The Commodores scored the first touchdown in a sustained drive which began shortly after the opening whistle. Armistead carried the ball over and Spears kicked goal.

Holm, Bowdoin and Brown coordinated in a dash down the field in the second period which gave the Crimson an even break with the Commodores. After Brown tore off 24 yards around left end, Holm went through the Vanderbilt center for the only Crimson touchdown and Bowdoin kicked goal.

Air Attack Starts.

The third period saw the first serious aerial work by either team. Frequent penalties marred this quarter, during which Alabama came within an ace of forging ahead of the Commodores. Brasfield carried the ball to Vandy's 13-yard line but Alabama was set back by a 15-yard penalty.

Spears got his passing arm in shape in the last quarter, and to show his versatility dashed off several gains through the line. But a few minutes before the final whistle the Commodore quarter tossed a pass to Gibson, who carried the ball across the Alabama goal line for Vandy's second touchdown. Spears kicked goal from placement.

Great Spirit Wins For Tech---Staton

they have the ball in their territory. Give them yardage on end runs in the middle of the field. But when Georgia gets near the goal, tighten up. To carry out this plan, the secondary was set loosely, and rather far back. On forward pass formations, seven men went into the line in order to rush the passer. The safety man played in rather close to give additional deep zone protection.

Gaze for a moment at the recounting of Georgia's passes. You will find that the longest completed pass was for 15 yards, while three others were completed for 12, 11 and 10 yards, respectively.

Longest Run.

The longest run Georgia made from scrimmage was 30 yards. It was a beauty. In the very shadow of their own goal a Georgian fell back as if to kick. Instead he hiked around right end for 30 yards.

Now remember that wonderful stand which Tech made in the second quarter. Georgia carried the ball to the eight-yard line, but could go no farther. That was part of the plan to stop them every time they should threaten.

Tech's offensive plan was just as simple. Give Georgia a strong, unadulterated dose of power, with just enough of the air attack to provide a constant threat. That plan, too, worked beautifully. The constant threat materialized into Tech's first touchdown, a nifty heave from Mizell for 42 yards. "Sartor resartus," some might call it. But it was a mighty good touchdown for all that. And how about power? Stumpy took one of Estes' perfect throws out of the air and returned said throw 55 yards, thereby placing the ball on Georgia's 23-yard line.

Nothing but power could have carried it over from that point. Too close to try a pass, too risky to try any trick stuff. See what happened. A buck for one, a buck for five, a buck for four, and it's first down. A buck for two, a powerful end run for 11 by aforementioned Stumpy, and it's touchdown.

"Glory to Old Georgia."

"Glory to Old Georgia!" No better team, no harder fighting team has been on Grant field this year. They gained more ground, had fewer penalties, made more first downs, and completed more passes than Tech.

But, I must say this. Give Georgia her thousand backs, her scintillating end runs, her mystery plays, her baffling air attack.

As for me, I'll take a heavy charge of short end runs, off tackle plays. Let's have the "old-time religion"—it's good enough for me.

Unusual Grid Record.

One for the book is the freak record of Upsula College of New Jersey. The football eleven of that school, in seven games, scored no points and was scored upon to the extent of 285.

Will Arrange Grid Dates.

The western conference football schedules for next season will take definite shape when the coaches of the Big Ten gather at Chicago December 2 for their annual meeting.

Big Football Upset.

One of the big upsets of the last football season was the decline of Brown, which in 1926 had one of the east's outstanding elevens.

Bulldogs Stage Desperate Fight But Bow to Jackets, 12 to 0

SNATCHES OF ACTION FROM FOOTBALL'S "MUDDY WATERS"

Georgia Out-Gains Tornado On Wet Field

Tech Fights Hard to Overcome Mighty Red and Black Attack.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Out of the mud of Grant field Saturday afternoon rose a superior Tech line. A Tech line that kept its footing in the mud and outrushed a fiercely fighting Bulldog, holding him once with the goal line a scant 10 yards away.

Georgia gained more yards from scrimmage than Tech. Georgia completed more passes than Tech and Georgia made a terrific battle of it, but Tech fought just a little harder and now the southern conference title has come back to the Flats.

The field was wet and muddy—in spots it was sloppy. But both teams managed to keep their footing. Fumbles were few and far between. Several times both teams were held for no gain, while a fiercely charging, ever alert Tech line was continually breaking through and nailing Georgia backs from behind. The Jacket forwards threw Georgia forwards for losses upon seven occasions, the Bulldogs losing 27 yards in this manner where Tech lost but seven.

Georgia Opens Up.

As predicted, it was one of the most bitterly contested football games the south has ever seen. The mud didn't afford a firm footing, but Georgia cut loose with every thing it had. There were lateral passes, fake plays and end runs in addition to splendid work by Herdis McCrary, Georgia's battering ram, who ripped his way through the center of Tech's line for three, four and five-yard gains.

Tech's entire team played a heads-up game of football, and Stumpy Thomason and Warner Mizell led the pack. Stumpy was in all his glory on Saturday's muddy grid and his 53-yard return of an intercepted pass, thrown by Estes, of Georgia, will go down in the book as one of the greatest runs ever made on Grant field.

The run came in the third quarter and led to Tech's second touchdown. Thomason was standing near his own 35-yard line playing safety, when Estes made his epochal chunk. He jumped into the air, grabbed the ball and tore out, cutting across the field. About mid-way of his wild gallop, Stumpy was almost stopped by two wildly charging Georgia men. Stump was already going, it seemed, at top speed. But he stretched his legs just a little more, and shot ahead, covering 53 yards before being halted.

Fellow Ball Closely.

Both teams were following the ball every minute, for with the field in the condition it was, a fumble was possible and probable at any moment. Tech was penalized 60 yards to 10 for Georgia, one of Georgia's 12 first downs coming from a 15-yard penalty for holding, drawn by Tech. Tech made four first downs.

Georgia used passes whenever possible, making 12 attempts. Four of them the Bulldogs completed for a total gain of 50 yards. Four of them were incompleted. But the other four were intercepted by the Jackets and the newly-crowned conference champions made a total of 95 yards in this manner. Thomason's wild jaunt of 53 yards, of course, ran up the total.

Tech's passing game, from the good it accomplished, was a complete success. The Jackets completed only one out of four. But that completed pass was a perfect toss from Warner Mizell to Durant and gained 43 yards and Tech's first touchdown.

The Tornado held a distinct advantage in one department of the game and that was punting. Mizell did it all and he made a wonderful job of it. Twelve times he booted a water-logged ball and his average for the day was 37.7 yards. That's good punting on a dry field. Estes, of Georgia, kicked ten times, and two or three short-distance spirals brought his average down to 30.

Line Outstanding.

Tech's line work was the foundation of Tech's gains from scrimmage. The Bulldogs made more from rushing than did Tech. The count was 126 yards for the Bulldogs against 87 for the Jackets. It was off-tackle thrusts by Thomason and Mizell and bull-like rushes at the center of the line by Bob Randolph that brought Tech its gains.

Georgia used Estes a greater part of the time and this fleet young back made good gains at end and off-tackle. Through the line, of course, it was the work of McCrary.

It was a great game and two great teams took part. Tech has a right to feel proud of its accomplishment and Georgia can be happy in the fact that it fought a great battle.

CUYLER SIGNS 1928 CONTRACT WITH CHICAGO

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—Hazen "Kiki" Cuyler, star outfielder of the Pittsburgh Pirates, who was traded to the Chicago Cubs for Infielder Scott, today came to terms with President William L. Veeck and signed a contract for 1928. The salary was not announced but was understood to be one of the largest on the club. Cuyler was said to have drawn more than $10,000 with the Pirates last year.

Cuyler arrived here today from his home in Flint, Mich., and was very enthusiastic about becoming a member of the Cubs. He said he was glad to get away from Pittsburgh and will give the Cubs everything he has to give Chicago a winning ball club. He was in conference with Manager Joe McCarthy, who stopped off here en route to the minor league meeting at Dallas, Texas; William Wrigley, Jr., and President Veeck.

Cuyler said he held no ill feeling toward his former employers and thought a great deal of Manager Donie Bush. He said he regretted very much that he was not playing regularly with the Pirates last season and explained that after he suffered an injury to his leg, Barnhardt played so well that he was used very seldom. He said there was no real "inside story" as far as he knew for his absence from the lineup and he was always ready and willing to play.

JUNIOR HIGH CAGERS START WORK SOON

With football about out of the way, junior high schools are beginning to think about basketball. This season does not show very much in the way of first-class teams as heretofore. Most of the schools have lost all of their best players and will have to build up new organizations.

Hoke Smith, which has copped the rag for the past three years, is not so jubilant about what it is going to have, as it lost most of the championship team and will have to recruit new players for most of the positions.

Several good players from last year will return to Joe Brown and they should go a long way in making a strong team. Last season they put up a game fight for the rag and with the experience gained should have a much better team this season.

O'Keefe will be under the direction of Coach Jasper Welch this season and from all indications will have a powerful team this year.

Last season O'Keefe did not have the experience it takes to make a first-class team, but is in much better shape for the game this season and will be hard to stop.

Bass will get its varsity team under way after the Christmas holidays, at which time a class tournament will start with hopes of uncovering some talent that will aid the team. Bass only has a few of last year's men back but these boys promise to have a great season.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

BY DICK HAWKINS

the Red Destruction Saturday played inspired football. They must have played that way to beat the team that faced them.

Mizell's punting was a great factor in the game. Any man who can average better than 37 yards on a dozen punts with the ball in the condition it was Saturday is nothing short of a wonder. Thomason, entering the game with a fragile shoulder, put the fear of the Thomasons in the heart of the Bulldog. Randolph gave as great a display of sheer nerve as ever was seen on a football field when he drove three yards through the Georgia line on the last play of the game then collapsed when the final whistle blew.

Never has a field general played a greater hand than did Durant Saturday and his scoring of that touchdown will be told many times for many months.

Epics could be written to both those teams today but they are not needed. Tech won from Georgia and there should be no aftermath.

Sea Rocket Wins Jefferson Feature

New York, December 3.—(AP)—Sea Rocket, owned by C. A. Doyle, the New Orleans sportsman, captured the $1,500 Monte Leon Hotel handicap for all ages, feature event at the Jefferson park race plant today. The victor galloped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:52 1-5, leading Golden Mac by two lengths at the finish. Fly Hawk was third.

At Tijuana, Common Gold was first home in the sixth race, a claiming event for 3-year-olds and up at a mile and 70 yards. Hands Up was second in front of Golden Laura. The time was 1:47 3-5.

CITY LEAGUE OPENING SET FOR MONDAY

A large first-night crowd is expected at the opening of the City Basketball league Thursday when the six teams make their first appearance in three games on the A. A. C. court.

It appears from all indications that the City league is headed for a big season. Three of the highest standing teams of last year have reentered and three new ones will be seen in action and from all early information some of the best talent in the city amateur circles will be seen. The schedule calls for three rounds of play and all the games will be played on the Atlanta Athletic club court each Thursday, starting at 7:30.

Joe Singleton, former Atlanta Athletic club captain, has been coaching the Gulf and the champions of last year should be better this season. The Knights of Columbus, who finished in runner-up position, have a strong nucleus in Tom Bryant and Steve Hartney as well as several others. Southern Bell is being coached and has a few more stars. It expects to be much stronger this season. Avondale is reported to have some former college stars and Rutus, Bass, former A. A. C. star, is rendering good service and time to the A. A. C. Reds.

Games will be played straight through, starting at 7:30, in the following order:

Atlanta Athletic club Reds vs. Avondale at 7:30.

Gulf Refining company vs. Knights of Columbus, about 8:20.

Southern Bell vs. Atlanta Joint Terminal, about 9:10.

League Leaders Bunched.

Fielding honors in the American Association during the past season went to Toledo by a mighty slim margin. The Hens averaged .9968, Kansas City .9967, Minneapolis .9963 and St. Paul .9962.

Score Highest Total.

What is believed to be the highest football score ever turned in was hung up by Haven High School of Haven, Kan., in the final game of its schedule against Sylvia, Kan. The final score was 256 to 0.

Spider Kelly Saw Future Of Dempsey

Told Sports Writer 9 Years Ago To "Watch This New Jack Dempsey."

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

We haven't mentioned Dempsey in print for some time, because it is very doubtful that Dempsey will ever appear again as a fighter.

The public is interested in him as a fighter, not as a retired ex-champ or a participant in law suits. When Dempsey is fighting Dempsey is news—and he has made some good hot news in his time. He may again, but I am inclined to doubt it. I doubt that he will even try.

It takes a lot of ambition to go back to fighting, just for a little more money and an uncertain chance to win back a championship.

Future Not Alluring.

At Dempsey's time of life and, "fixed" as he is, that gruelling grind of several months, then the strain and uncertainty and possible disappointment following, isn't at all alluring.

But one word more about Dempsey. I have just received from George Coxey, of New York, a clipping of a story I wrote in October, nine years ago, about "Spider" Kelly, the craftiest second who ever went into a fighter's corner.

"Seeing that 'Spider' has passed on," writes Coxey, "I thought you might be interested in this old story you wrote about him and, perhaps, find something in it to write again some time."

I did find something interesting. Remember, this interview with "Spider" Kelly, who probably knew more about ring fighting than the man who invented it, was written the year before Dempsey beat Willard, when Dempsey was just a strong young fellow floating around and fighting every couple of weeks in the tank towns.

Kelly Tells of "Find."

"Spider" Kelly had been telling me about his one great "find" as a heavyweight title hunter, one "Toothpick" Kelly, six feet six and the quickest thinker and coolest fighter and hardest hitter Kelly had ever seen. Kelly started "Toothpick" and was rushing him along, hoping to have him fight Jeffries within a year, when "Spider" discovered that "Toothpick" was subject to epileptic fits. The giant fell from a diving platform and cracked his skull on a cement floor, which finished his fighting career. He had only one more fight and was knocked out.

And now to quote from the story of over nine years ago:

"'Have you ever seen any more like him floating around?' I asked Kelly.

"Keep an Eye on Dempsey."

"'Keep an eye on this new Jack Dempsey,' said Kelly. 'He will class with Sullivan and the old-timers, if I'm right.'"

Yes, "Spider" Kelly knew his game and knew a fighter. His prediction was right. The knockout, swinging Dempsey of Toledo and many other towns, "classed with Sullivan" in his great fighting days. He will be "classed with Sullivan" and Jeffries and Fitzsimmons 20 years from now. Beyond that, who can tell?

Addition of Cuyler Gives Cubs Formidable Outfield

Perfect Boot Gives 'Gators 7-6 Victory

Florida and Maryland Stage Furious Battle on Rain-Soaked Field.

Jacksonville, Fla., December 3.—(AP)—A placement kick for the extra point after touchdown from the toe of Stanley, 'Gator end, won a lucky victory for Florida over the University of Maryland here today by a score of 7 to 6.

Playing on a sodden field, unfamiliar to both teams this season, the 'Gators scored their touchdown early in the second quarter after "Crafty Clyde" Crabtree, stellar quarterback, had returned a Maryland put to the Old Liners' 38-yard line. Middlekauff carried the ball over the Maryland goal from the one-yard line after Brumbaugh and Crabtree had alternated in a drive down the field.

Shortly thereafter, Roberts, an outstanding star of the game, slipped through left tackle, evading the Florida secondary defense for a 38-yard run across the line.

In trying for the extra point, however, Kessler chose to pass and failed.

Previously, in the first few minutes of play, Florida narrowly averted defeat when Bishop was downed behind his own goal line for what would have been a safety had the Old Liners not been ruled off side and the play recalled. The pass from center to Bishop was high and went over the halfback's head.

'Gators Threatened.

During the latter half of the game, the Florida goal was continuously in danger. Only twice was the play in Maryland territory and but for only a few minutes.

Twice the Old Liners threatened to score only to be held by the 'Gator line within a yard or two of their goal. late in the fourth period, however, a fumble by Pugh on Florida's one-yard line, lost the game for his teammates.

Middlekauff, Crabtree and Brumbaugh alternated as ground gainers for the 'Gators, while with a few exceptions, Bishop's punting from behind his own goal line repeatedly averted possible touchdowns.

Roberts, right halfback for the Old Liners, played a sensational game throughout, and frequently, behind splendid interference, reeled off gains of five and more yards.

TILDEN SEES GREAT BATTLE FOR DAVIS CUP

Boston, December 3.—(AP)—William T. Tilden II, of Philadelphia, foremost American lawn tennis player, wants the United States challenge for the Davis cup played in the European zone.

The Davis cup committee has recommended that, as in recent years, the play be in the American zone.

Big Bill revealed his hope of persuading the committee to reverse its stand when he appeared here before the annual meeting of the New England Lawn Tennis association to present his reasons and solicit support for them.

He told the association that American players ought to have sufficient time to become thoroughly acclimated for the challenge round. He expects a tremendous struggle before France's grip on the international trophy can be loosened.

He maintained that the United States was obligated to have a strong entry in France's national events as a gesture of recognition of the courtesy shown by the French players who have participated in all recent championships here.

The Davis cup committee wants to challenge in the American zone because it is convinced that more players would be available for consideration than if aspirants were obliged to compete overseas.

Its recommendations will be submitted soon to the executive committee of the United States Lawn Tennis association for approval.

Tilden said that in any case he and Frank Hunter intended to go abroad for the French national championships and, if the United States challenges in the American zone, the chances are that their services will not be available for the Davis cup team in its preliminary matches.

Widener Racers Begin Training

Louisville, Ky., December 3.—(AP) Pete Coyne, trainer for Joseph E. Widener, has joined the Widener stables wintering at Elmendorf Farm near Lexington, Ky., and is preparing to move a number of his charges to Churchill Downs for training.

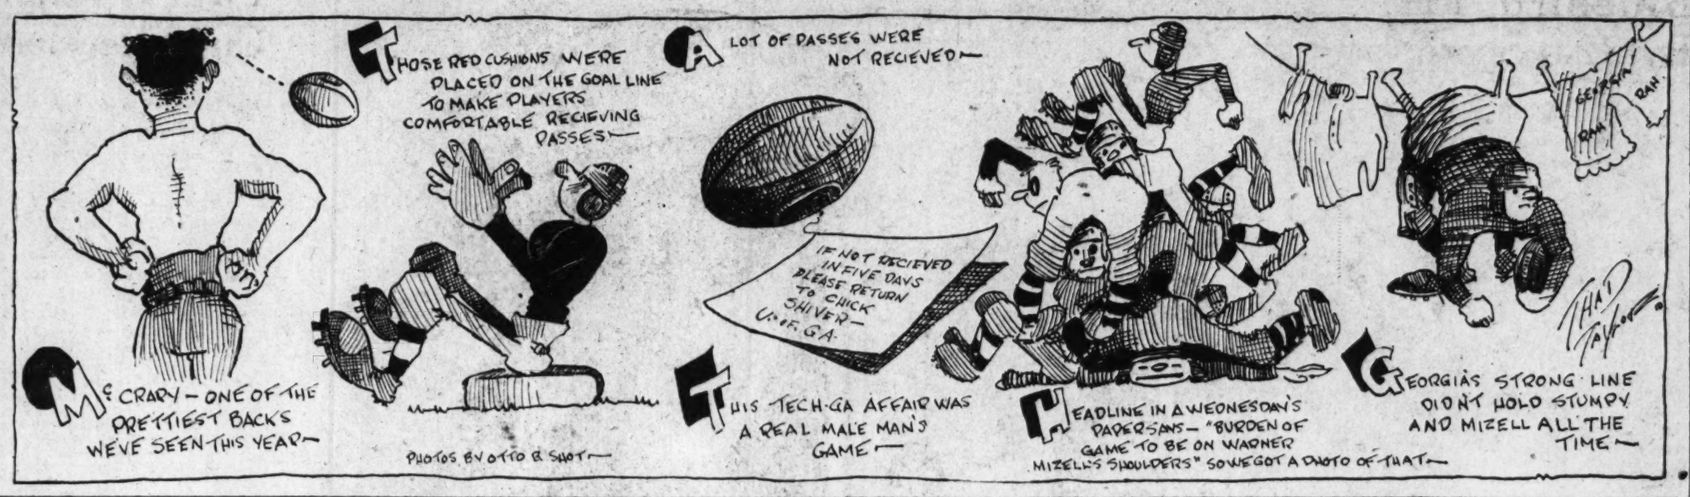
Members of the staff have expressed the hope that Earle Sande, recently suspended from Maryland tracks, will be allowed to join them in the work. Sande spent two months here last spring helping prepare the horses for racing engagements.

Chance Shot, winner of the Withers and Belmont stakes, who went off form after these events, is expected to round into shape for the handicap division next season, says Coyne. In Osmand, the Sweeper gelding who never failed to finish in the money during the past season, he believes he has a racer who can hold his own up to a mile in any company.

Dallas, Tex., Prep Circuit Drops Baseball from Card

Baseball has been dropped from the sport calendar of the Dallas (Texas) High School Athletic league, according to a recent announcement by Dr. N. R. Crozier, superintendent of schools, there. Lack of interest is the reason for the decision to drop the game.

A FEW SIDE-LIGHTS OF THE TECH-GEORGIA GAME



PENNOCK CAN MAKE RECORD; IF YANKEES WIN NEXT SEASON

:: NOW HOLDS A SERIES MARK WITH JACK COOMBS ::

New York, December 3.—(AP)—Winning of the American league pennant in 1928 by the New York Yankees would be a "big" thing for Herb Pennock.

To most of the Yankees it would mean entry into another world series and the big money cut that brings, but to Pennock, it would mean an opportunity to smash a series' pitching record which he now holds jointly with Jack Coombs, former Athletics and Brooklyn hurler.

Both won five games and lost none in series hurling. Pennock is still in the game. Coombs is out of big baseball's picture and is content to work his farm in Kennebunkport, Maine.

Pennock has a chance to set up a new mark if he can score another world series victory.

Strangely enough both broke into baseball with the same team and manager, the Philadelphia Athletics and Connie Mack.

Coombs, however, was the only one to win for the Athletics in series competition. Pennock got into one game in the 1914 fall classic, but only as a relief pitcher for his present teammate, Bob Shawkey, after the Braves had sewed up the fourth and deciding game.

"Colby Jack," as Coombs was called after he was graduated from the Maine college, did his greatest hurling in 1910, against the Chicago Cubs. Coombs won three of the four games taken by the Athletics, pitching the second, third, and fifth battles, to beat Mordecai Brown in the first and last, and Ed Reulbach in the other.

The Giants won the National league flag in 1911 and the A's captured the American circuit pennant. Coombs pitched the third game, drawing one of baseball's master boxmen, Christy Mathewson, as an opponent and beating the Big Six in 11 innings, allowing McGraw's team only three hits.

The scene changed for Coombs, and 1916 found him with Brooklyn, engaged in a series battle with the Boston Red Sox which easily won the honors. Brooklyn grabbed off one game and this was a victory for Coombs over Carl Mays.

Pennock made his world series debut in 1923, when the Yanks faced the neighboring Giants, and won the second from McQuillan. In the sixth and last battle, Pennock won a duel with Artie Nehf.

The Cardinals and "Wee Willie" Sherdel were Pennock victims in 1926. Although the Hugmen lost out finally, the star southpaw won two more games, the first by a 2 to 1 score in which he held the Missourians to three hits, and the second by a 3 to 2 count in 10 innings, in the fifth game of the series.

His fifth series victory, over the Pirates, featured by seven "perfect" innings, was his most notable. Pennock held the Pirates to three hits as his mates clouted their way to an 8 to 1 victory.

The records of the two hurlers follow:

PENNOCK.

Year	Opponent	Score of Game	Hits Allowed
1923	Giants	4-2	9
	Giants	6-4	10
1926	Cardinals	2-1	3

American Boat Types Adopted

Paris, December 3.—(AP)—American influence is felt more and more in the French pleasure boating world.

"Half-and-half" boats, auxiliaries equipped with both motor and sail, were present for the first time in impressive numbers at the recent nautical show, the second in the history of France. Another American idea has the use of twin motors of moderate horse power rather than single motors of higher rating.

Enclosed bridge decks, cabins set amidships for the housing of steering and engine controls, were favorably received. Many American-made motors were shown, and American equipment houses were well represented.

Boats of moderate price and speed and Canadian type canoes were popular with the buyers.

Has Another Year.

The contract which binds Stanley Harris to the Washington American league club has another year to run before expiration.

EPWORTH CAGE SEASON OPENS ON MONDAY

With 32 teams entered in the six leagues of the Epworth Athletic association the season will get under way this week with games on Monday, Thursday and Friday nights. Three boys' leagues of five teams each have been organized with a like number of teams in three girls' leagues, two girls' teams being as yet unassigned. There is an opening in each league for one more team, the time for entry having been extended until the middle of this week due to several members of the association being unable to decide on membership.

The leagues have been divided into three different classes according to the strength of each team, "A" being the strongest league, "B" ranking second and the "C" league comprising the teams with the least experience.

The schedule follows:

A LEAGUE.

Monday: St. John vs. St. Mark (girls) 6:30; Calvary vs. Grace (girls) 6:50; Park Street vs. College Park (boys) 7:10; St. Paul vs. Druid Hills (boys) 7:30.

B LEAGUE.

Thursday: Trinity vs. Park Street (girls) 6:30; Inman Park vs. Haygood (girls) 6:50; Calvary vs. Grace (boys) 7:10; Cascade vs. Grant Park (boys) 7:30.

C LEAGUE.

Friday: St. Paul vs. Druid Hills (girls) 6:30; Calvary vs. Grace (girls) 6:50; Capitol View vs. St. Paul (boys) 7:10; Oakland City vs. Haygood (boys) 7:30.

CUBS BEGIN PREPARATIONS FEBRUARY 12

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—The Chicago Cubs will start preparations for bringing a National league championship to the North Side park February 12, when battery men are to leave for the Catalina Island, Cal., training camp. The pitchers and catchers will reach the island three days later.

The full 40 players allowed for the training camp roster will be taken to the west coast training field. Thirty of them are pitchers and infielders. The full squad will follow the batterymen west on February 23.

The Cubs' offices have announced that the California training season will be concluded with a four-game series against the Pittsburgh Pirates at Los Angeles March 29, 30, 31 and April 1. The team then will entrain for Kansas City, where four games will be played with the American Association club.

The signing of Kiki Cuyler has removed any Cub worries over next year's outfield, the fly grabbing material including Cuyler, Hack Wilson, Riggs Stephenson and Cliff Heathcote. There is some uncertainty as to the makeup of the 1928 infield, but it is not due to shortage of talent.

Manager McCarthy has picked up several youngsters from among whom he anticipates little trouble in rounding out a pitching staff headed by Charley Root, Hal Carlson, Sheriff Blake and other veterans.

Olympic Star Probable Coach

New York, December 3.—(AP)—When the list of coaches who will aid Head Coach Lawson Robertson in handling the American Olympic track and field team next year is made up it may not be surprising to find the name of Melvin W. Sheppard included.

If so it will be a dramatic return to the Olympic limelight of a man who 15 to 20 years ago ranked among America's greatest middle distance runners, scoring notable triumphs in the Olympics at London in 1908 and Stockholm in 1912.

Sheppard is now athletic coach of the Millrose A. A. of New York, representing one of the largest metropolitan department stores. He has had conspicuous success with the athletes under his direction, particularly with long distance runners who scored an outstanding triumph recently when they won the national and metropolitan cross-country championship from the hitherto well-nigh invincible Finnish-American team.

Sheppard's success in this line, in view of the fact that America's principal Olympic weaknesses in recent years have been in distance running events, has served to bring him forward as a potential aid to Robertson. His name was put before the convention of the Amateur Athletic union, the track and field governing body, at Cincinnati and probably will be heard again when the Olympic committee meets in February to select the coaching staffs.

CUBS' NEW OUTFIELD BUILT AROUND CUYLER MAY RIVAL YANK TRIO

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—With the redoubtable "Kiki" Cuyler obtained from Pittsburgh by Chicago and teaming with "Hack" Wilson and Riggs Stephenson in the outer garden for the Cubs next year, Manager Joe McCarthy hopes to present a heavy-hitting outfield that will rival the Yankee combination of Ruth, Meusel and Combs.

On past performances the prospective Chicago trio deserves to rank close to the Yankee array in about everything but the incomparable long-distance hitting of Ruth.

In home run swatting the Cubs have as near an approach to the Babe as the National league is able to produce in the person of Wilson, the blocky-bodied Giant cast-off who walloped 30 homers last season to tie Cy Williams for the crown in the circuit.

With Cuyler batting up to his average of .343 for five years of major league competition, the Cub outfielders would have to concede little in the way of batting average points to Ruth & Co. or any other set of fly ball chasers. Stephenson, the Cubs' leading batsman last season, had a mark of .344 and the unofficial figures gave Wilson .323. Playing his biggest year, Ruth hit the dizzy pace of .356 with Combs close behind at .355 and meusel in the same high class with .334.

In a season marred by disputes with Manager Donie Bush and long periods on the bench, Cuyler batted but .303 with the Pirates in the 1927 campaign, but in his new environment McCarthy expects to see him rejoin the ranks of natural .350 hitters.

TAD JONES IS "ALL-FOR" HIS NON-SCOUTING PLAN

:: ROCKNE SAYS IT'S A TERRIBLE IDEA ::

BY FRANK GETTY,
United News Sports Editor.

New York, December 2.—T. A. D.—ones, retiring head coach of Yale university football teams, is leaving his gridiron duties in a most optimistic frame of mind.

Particularly, Tad is pleased with the present playing rules and with the non-scouting agreement he inaugurated with Harvard and Princeton.

"They are the best rules the games of football ever had," said Jones the other day, "and I still believe firmly in non-scouting."

Such is the opinion of a man who is ending a nine-year term as Yale's head coach, after having developed this fall what was perhaps his greatest eleven.

Dissension.

But not every coach feels as Tad Jones does. From afar comes the sound of tinkering instruments being made ready for the annual tinkering with the rules and agreemens.

Knute Rockne, for instance, whose 1927 team enjoyed a success comparable to that of Yale, is far from convinced that the rules are what Tad Jones claims them to be, while as for non-scouting—well, the Notre Dame coach is at his best when raising hell with that idea.

"Non-scouting is a Utopian ideal," said Rockne. "It may be all right for Tad Jones and Bill Roper as far as their schools are concerned, but, as a general thing, it adds nothing to the game except hypocrisy."

Rockne made no frontal attack upon the shift limit, because his Irish adapted themselves to the new rule as well as or better than most teams. But as for non-scouting pacts, the Notre Dame coach expressed himself in no uncertain terms.

"If football prepares boys for life, as they tell us, then non-scouting is unnatural and abhortive," declared Rockne. "All life is competition, and boys who are going out into it must be taught to watch the other fellow."

To the term "Utopian," Tad Jones retorted that his defense of non-scouting wasn't based upon any question of sportsmanship.

"It's a sound, practical idea," the Yale coach maintained. "Having adopted it at Yale we find we now have more time to devote to our own affairs."

"It makes one school suspicious of its rival," suggested Rockne. "If a pet play is broken up the first time it is tried everyone will shout, 'I told you so'!"

The rule which set the goal posts 10 yards behind the goal line is bound to come under heavy fire when the coaches get together here.

Tad Jones, who, incidentally, is a member of the rules committee, defended this as "a good move." He explained that it opened up the end zone, and met the challenge that drop-kicking and place-kicking had been virtually eliminated except as a play after touchdown by declaring that the move hadn't affected this department of the game "one iota."

Muddled Mathematics.

The Eli coach suggested that the moving back of the goal posts had improved the angle for kickers, but considering the fact that a kicker may go as far behind the line of scrimmage as he chooses, it seems that in this Tad Jones had muddled up his mathematics.

As for the lateral pass, the rule protecting this play had little effect, Jones said.

"Only one leading eleven in the east—if you call Harvard a leading eleven—made effective use of the lateral," Tad reported.

Rockne doesn't think much of the lateral pass, and nothing, or less, of the onside kick. He referred to use of the onside kick as "part of this hybrid game they play in Canada."

"Pop" Warner is out in favor of the 40 plays per quarter plan, suggested a few seasons ago and tried out in a few places—at Brown, among others.

The Stanford coach believes that the 40 play plan, whereby periods would be limited to that number of rushes, kicks or passes instead of to 15 minutes of actual playing, would eliminate a number of grievances connected with timing.

HARRY WILSON FIGURES IN SEVEN NAVY DEFEATS

:: Played Against Middies Three Years at Penn State ::

New York, December 3.—(AP)—One gun that has thundered with telling effect against the Navy football dreadnought through seven long autumn engagements has been silenced by the passing of time.

But the memory of 10 "direct hits" in the form of six touchdowns and four points after should live long with a Navy football craft that no longer will be called on to face "Lighthorse" Harry Wilson, Army leader and halfback extraordinary.

Seven years ago, as a sophomore at Penn State, Wilson fired his first salvo against the Middies in the shape of a 12-yard off-tackle dash that put the famous Killinger-to-Lightner forward passing combination in position to score. Last Saturday, as captain of the Army team, the blond halfback led an apparently beaten squad onto the Polo grounds into a second half that saw it hammer out two touchdowns and a 14-to-9 victory over the nation's future admirals.

Always Starred.

In the seven years that he has played against the Navy, three at Penn State and four at West Point, Wilson's name has figured in the final analysis of every game but one, and that was during his first appearance in an Army uniform when a recurring leg injury forced him to the side lines early in the second period after a disappointing showing in the first quarter.

He faced the Navy first on a muddy field at Baltimore on November 12, 1921. He failed to score, but he was an integral part of a 63-yard advance for the first touchdown and a 58-yard march for the second that gave Penn State a 13-to-7 victory. The next year at Washington the Navy won, 14 to 0, but the name that stood out in defeat was Wilson.

In 1924, playing as a senior on his home field at State college, Wilson came into his own. In the second period he intercepted a Navy pass and raced 35 yards for a touchdown. From the following kickoff, behind perfect interference, he galloped 95 yards through the entire Annapolis team for a score, and capped that in the final period by breaking off tackle on a double delayed pass for 7 yards and his third touchdown of the afternoon.

First Year Disappointing.

The next year, his first with the Army, saw his disappointing showing and injury in the service clash at Baltimore which the Army won, 12 to 9. The figures showed he gained nine yards, lost seven and was thrown for no gain twice.

In 1925, on a muddy field, his part in a 10 to 3 Army victory consisted of booting a goal after touchdown and scampering through the Navy left flank for 42 yards to the Navy 14-yard line. In that year he was somewhat overshadowed by a backfield trio of running mates that included Tiny Hewittzn, Trapnell and Harding.

MERCER BEARS ARE AWARDED GRID LETTERS

BY GEORGE CLARK, JR.

Macon, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—James Albert Hammock, of Coleman, was elected Wednesday night to captain the 1928 edition of the Mercer Bears.

Hammock has been on the Mercer varsity for the past two seasons and brings to a close next year a clorful career. He has been varsity center for two years.

Buchanan Loser quarterback, of Nashville, Tenn., was named alternate captain.

At the banquet Wednesday night, at which the two Bears were given recognition, 20 letters were awarded. The following received letters: Lynwood Mallard, Macon, end; Charlton Pierce, Ivey, tackle; Harvey Stipe, Carrollton, guard; Luther Ray, Macon, guard; James Hammock, Coleman, center; Harry Nightingale, Orlando, Fla., tackle; Wallace Butts, Milledgeville, end; Joe Merritt, Macon, center; Amos Godby, Somerset, Ky., end; Joe Estes, Gay, tackle; Buchanan Loser, Nashville Tenn., quarterback; Arthur Wright, Barberton, Ohio, halfback; Wilton Alderman, Fort Myers, Fla., fullback; Phoney Smith, Fayetteville, Tenn. and Walter Salter, Bartow, halfbacks; Doyle Barnes, Royston, halfback; Jimmie Matthews, Macon, halfback; W. A. Wommack, Harrison, tackle; Skinny Gear, Macon, guard; Ross Adams, Madison, guard; and manager, Bob Gilbert, Greenville.

The banquet, held at the Dempsey hotel, was one of the most enthusiastic held in Mercer history. It marked the close of the playing days of three Mercer football stars—Phoney Smith, Bit Pierce, Wally Butts. Speeches were made by each of them.

Besides the entire Mercer squad several Macon supporters were present. Among them were Harry Popper, Dr. C. L. Pennington, W. T. Anderson, Herbert Smart, Charlie Morgan, Herbert Block, and Coaches E. P. Mosley, Bernice Moore, J. D. Blair, Kay Tipton and Manager Gilbert.

SIX-DAY BIKE RACES START IN N. Y. TODAY

New York, December 3.—(United News.)—The ring of hammers and the shrill complaint of saws have been sounding in Madison Square Garden, heralding the erection of the big pine saucer around which the semi-annual six-day bike race will start its merry, monotonous whirl Sunday night.

With Reggie McNamara and his diminutive partner Georgetti, once more topheavy favorites for first honors in the long grind, 15 teams will answer the starting pistol as fired by New York state's light heavyweight champion of the world, Tommy Loughran.

In addition to 15 American riders, there are five Belgians, four Italians and a smattering of Frenchmen, Dutchmen, Germans, Australians and Canadians among the pedallers.

There is only one new face in the lot, that of Gabrielle Marcillac of France. The others have all been around and around the Garden track together.

This year's race has been enlivened in a measure by the attempts of a bike rider who did not receive one of John Chapman's invitations to peddle around town a story to the effect that level." Bike fans, who are notoriously the most rabid of their species, received the six-day race was "not on the the news with yawns of complete comprehension.

French Too, Advise Don't Bet on Bouts

Paris, December 3.—(AP)—"Betting strictly prohibited" reads the sign just posted in various parts of the Cirque de Paris boxing arena by the American promoted Jeff Dickson.

Heretofore the sign read: "Les paris sont defendus" (Bets are forbidden). A special policeman once challenged a ringside spectator whose betting was noisy and command of the French language voluble.

"Can't you read the signs," the policeman asked.

"I can talk French, but I can't read it," replied the betting man, who turned out to be from Pittsburgh. Hence the posters in English.

Million-Dollar Boat Show Opens In N. Y., Jan. 20

With every available foot of space on the three floors of the Grand Central Palace contracted for, the motor boat, marine engine and marine accessory industry of the nation will inaugurate its twenty-third annual exposition on Friday, January 20, at the Grand Central Palace, New York city.

The show will continue throughout the following week, closing on Saturday night, January 28. With more than 160 exhibitors on hand, the show is predicted to be the largest of its kind ever staged.

The exhibits will include every phase of motor boat production, with particular emphasis placed on new and revolutionary types of American lightweight Diesel engines, outboard motor boats and new cruiser models.

The value of the exhibits will total several millions of dollars. More than 100,000 persons are expected to attend.

On exhibition will be several of the nation's most famous speed boats, including Miss Ricochet, the little 151 speedster owned by R. H. Moller, of the Larchmont Yacht club, which has participated in many of the major national speed boat races this past summer conducted under the auspices of the American Power Boat association.

British Fight 'Professionalism'

London, December 3.—(United News.)—The council of the British Olympic association has reaffirmed that the organization is unanimously opposed to olympic game participation of athletes who accept payment for "broken time."

Great Britain, nevertheless, will compete in the olympic games in the interest of amateurism, the council decided.

The council passed a resolution indicating it will not let the matter of broken time, whereby olympic athletes are paid their regular salaries while they are away from their jobs competing in the olympic games, be easily forgotten. The English organization plans to make a strong fight for amateurism at the next olympic congress.

Third Base McCarthy's Problem Now

'Hack' Wilson May Be Shifted to Right Field; Kiki To Be in Center.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
(By Leased Wire to The Constitution.)

Chicago, December 3.—Hazen (Kiki) Cuyler, the young man whose attack of temperament kept him on the bench this fall while his mates, the Pittsburgh Pirates, were doing a good job of losing a world's series, will wear a Cub uniform next season.

Earl (Sparky) Adams, one of the National league's outstanding second-sackers and the mainspring of the Cubs' infield, will not come back to Chicago except as an alien athlete wearing Pittsburgh's letters. Another who loses his Chicago citizenship to become enrolled in the Pirate brigade is Floyd Pete Scott, for a couple of seasons a utility fly chaser.

The acquisition of Cuyler by the Cubs not only brings to an end a prospective free-for-all scramble in which at least four National league clubs hoped to participate, but closes one of the most unusual cases that ever arose in big league baseball.

Cuyler-Bush Row.

Cuyler, supreme in the league as a hitter and fielder, aroused the enmity of Manager Bush last spring when he referred to the new boss as a "bush-er" who thought he was going to show the major leagues something. This matter was ironed out, but trouble reoccurred when Cuyler balked on having his position changed in the batting order. Then he was fined $50 for not sliding into a base and was planted on the bench to remain there.

The absence of the star from the world's series caused more of a ruction in Pittsburgh than did the loss of the pennant. The newspapers and fans took up the cudgel for the athlete, but Manager Bush refused to yield even when the spectators at the series games turned loose a howl of protest. Bush had the support of Dreyfuss because the latter was irritated over personal remarks alleged to have been made by the player.

Adding Cuyler to their roster gives the Cubs about the most formidable collection of outfielders owned by any one club in either major. In Wilson, Stephenson, Heathcote, Webb and the ex-Pirate star, McCarthy, has more strength than he can use, so it is possible that the excess material may be used to bring into the fold an infielder of worth and experience.

In turning Adams loose McCarthy has created a big gap that, barring another trade, will have to be filled by a youngster. First choice for the vacancy is Freddy Maguire, purchased last summer from the Toledo club for a reported $30,000. Another possibility is Norman McMillan, the former American leaguer, who was drafted on the strength of a good season he put in as a member of the St. Paul American association team. Third base remains a problem that McCarthy will attempt to solve by trade.

It is a certainty that McCarthy will use Stephenson, Cuyler and Wilson as his regular outfield, but he may be some time deciding just where to play them. Stephenson probably will remain in left, as his arm is not the kind McCarthy wants in right field, where a good thrower is a menace for runners who try to go from first to third on a single. Cuyler made his name at Pittsburgh while playing center field and Wilson did the same at Chicago, but the former is the faster of the two and this may prove the factor that will force "Hack" to move to right field.

BREADON SEES BIG SEASON FOR CARDINALS

St. Louis, December 3.—(United News.)—"Flint Rhem and Lester Bell are not to be given away merely to make places on the Bench," Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis Cardinals, said in an interview with the United News.

Kiki Cuyler, recently traded by Pittsburgh to Chicago, Rhem and Bell were considered sure pieces of baseball merchandise on the winter trading counter, but Breadon insisted he was not trying to get rid of them. He admitted that "feelers had been sent out to see what was in the air."

"The chances are 75 per cent they will be with us next season when we think we will have the best season in our history," Breadon said. "I might trade Rhem if I got a pitcher of equal value.

"Bell had one bad year but he is young and I see no reason to trade him. Rhem also had a bad year but he still is a good pitcher and he told me in August that he wanted to remain with the Cardinals. I had suggested that I might arrange a transfer if he thought it would be advantageous to him but he said he wanted to stay.

"I believe McKechnie put out Rhem and Bell feelers to see what would happen but I haven't received any response. In view of their bad season I believe I would have difficulty to arrange a trade which would really reflect their value as they are both young players and valuable to us."

Breadon said it was true that Bob O'Farrell had been given a salary of $5,000 when he stepped down to allow Bill McKechnie to manage the club and for that reason, and others, he expected nothing but harmony on the team.

Foreign Trackmen Cause of Worry

The Amateur Athletic union probably will be just as well satisfied if Dr. Otto Peltzer, the crack German middle distance runner, is unable to perform in connection with his visit here owing to lack of sanction by the Teutonic governing authorities.

The barnstorming trips of European stars over the last few years have given the A. A. U. more concern and cause for worry than most of the American athletes combined.

The first and most conspicuous invader, Paavo Nurmi, became so involved in a financial tangle that it required several investigations before he left these shores with a clean bill.

Charley Hoff, Norwegian pole valuter, got into similar difficulties out on the Pacific coast and emerged less fortunately than Paavo. The vaulting Viking was barred from amateur competition although subsequently he patched up most of his differences with the A. A. U.

Illinois Given 1927 Gridiron Championship

Pittsburgh Eleven Is Second in Rating of Dickinson.

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—The national football championship for 1927 was awarded tonight to the University of Illinois under the rating system devised by Dr. Frank B. Dickinson, of the University of Illinois. The silver statue of victory atop a tall silver column was awarded the "Fighting Illini" at their annual alumni football dinner here tonight.

Scores of 95 football teams were compiled by Dr. Dickinson, in seven football conferences, including an eastern group of 25 leading teams regarded for convenience as a "conference."

The Pittsburgh team was just a shade behind the Illinois rating, with Minnesota third, and Notre Dame fourth. The trophy would have gone to Notre Dame again this year but for their defeat by the Army.

Dr. Dickinson rated the "all-American eleven teams" as follows:

1—Illinois	21.50
2—Pittsburgh	21.42
3—Minnesota	20.88
4—Notre Dame	20.83
5—Yale	20.00
6—Army	18.75
7—Michigan	18.33
8—Georgia	17.50
9—Nebraska	17.42
10—Southern California	16.35
11—Texas A. & M.	15.00

Pittsburgh's leading victory was over Nebraska," said Dr. Dickinson, in explaining his rating system, "and they were tied by W. & M. The Illinois record included victory over Nebraska would not count as heavily as the victory of Illinois over Michigan, whose only defeats were by the first and third teams in the national standing, Illinois and Minnesota."

The Dickinson system awards 30 points for a victory over a strong team, and 20 for victory over a weak team. Defeats count half as much as victories, and ties are considered as games half won and half lost. Dividing this total by the number of games played gives the final rating.

Illinois is the fourth national champion to hold the Rissman trophy, awarded under the Dickinson system. Notre Dame, Dartmouth and Leland Stanford were the previous holders.

DEVIL DOGS BEAT LOYOLA ELEVEN, 6 TO 0

New Orleans, December 3.—(AP)—A powerful attack with the use of reserves on the part of the Quantico Marines gave the Devil Dogs a 6-0 victory over Loyola university of New Orleans here today.

Suffering two or three bad breaks, the Wolves paved the way for the lone touchdown with a fumble. The Marines laid down a steady barrage in the first half, broke loose in the third period and then looked much their best in the final minutes.

A sparkling 22-yard spurt around right end by Jimmy Levey in the third quarter was Quantico's scoring play. Gotko failed to kick goal.

Twice after that and once before a steady hammering at the tackles brought the marines dangerously close.

"Wrecking Crew" New Tech Name

half it was Tech that held the upper hand.

Thomason, kept from the starting lineup and supposedly handicapped by an injured back and shoulder, showed no traces of disability as he led Tech's concluding onslaught and carried over the second touchdown. Thomason, grabbing a Georgia pass out of the air deep in his own territory on the dead run, cut across the field and dashed 63 yards, the most spectacular open-field run of the game, before he was brought down on the Bulldogs' 22-yard line. It took only three plays to put the pigskin across the goal line again, Thomason skirting Captain Shiver's end for the last 11 yards of the needed distance.

Georgia outgained Tech two to one, rolling up nine first downs to four for their rivals, but on such a gridiron as the team wallowed in there was slight chance of sustaining any advance. The closest Georgia came to scoring was early in the second quarter, when the Bulldogs passed and bucked their way from around midfield to Tech's 7-yard line. But there the big Georgia fullback, Herdis McCrary, failed by a narrow margin to make first down. Tech took the ball on downs, Mizell's ever-reliable toe booted the ball out of danger and Georgia's best opportunity to break through went glimmering.

Defense Great.

Mizell's toe and an ever-alert defense were vital factors in Tech's triumph, particularly at such times as it seemed that Georgia's running back, led by McCrary, Estes and Dudley, would break through. Twice in the critical second period, where the tide of battle shifted quickly from one side to the other, Tech's forwards compelled Georgia to wield the ball on downs. On four other occasions the hawk-eyed secondaries of Tech, Mizell and Thomason particularly, broke up the Bulldog passing game.

Tom Nash and Chick Shiver, the far-famed flankmen of Georgia's array, seldom were able to make aerial connections with the ball in addition to which they found themselves boxed in or outguessed frequently on the defense by the quick-charging Tech forwards. It was around Shiver's end that Thomason galloped for the second touchdown, but the Georgia captain never had a chance to break through the screen of interference thrown up for the ball carrier.

In the surging battle of the two lines, Georgia's huskies, with Gene Smith standing out like a rock at guard, more than held their own. They didn't yield a first down, on straight line bucking, throughout the game but Tech had other means of piercing the Bulldog defense and capitalized them.

Made Breaks.

Tech, perhaps, got such "breaks" as there were on a field where, at the start, it seemed neither team would be able to make any substantial headway through the mud. But Tech also made the "breaks."

When Georgia's line refused to budge, Tech took to the air and in one spectacular play, broke through for a touchdown. It was a perfectly executed piece of work, the only pass Tech completed all afternoon, but it was enough to win the game.

In Mizell and Thomason, too, Tech had a pair of open field barriers who overshadowed any of their rivals. These two were scoring threats any time they got their hands on the ball in a broken field. Mizell's 38-yard dash, after intercepting one of Estes' passes late in the second period, came close to giving Tech another touchdown. It planted the ball on Georgia's 22-yard line and Caddey, on the next play, barely missed connecting with a long heave from Mizell at the goal line.

Estes, in a desperate last period effort, got Georgia's overhead game in working order, two heaves being completed in a row for gains of about 11 yards each, but another toss was intercepted around midfield, breaking up the drive just before the close of the game.

Cadets Swamp Bluebird 11 By 32-0 Score

U. S. B. Completely at Loss to Stop Riverside Backs.

Mud, slippery mud, failed to halt the wild charge of the Riverside Cadets eleven over the University School for Boys team Saturday morning and when the last score was posted it was seen that a nice, fat, juicy '31 loomed opposite the Cadets' name, while the Bluebirds had to be content with a large round zero.

Billy Butler, the Riverside flash who distinguished himself against Tech High a few days ago with his sensational run back of punts was traveling in high gear Saturday morning and stepped off for several nice gains.

The Cadets started their drive early in the game, a 60-yard march putting over the first touchdown. Freeman and Proctor were the stars of this drive, with the former taking the ball over.

The Bluebirds tried to counter in this quarter with a drive that netted 30 yards before being halted.

The second quarter saw the Riverside team finish another drive with a touchdown from Fath ending the charge.

Butler began to get in his deadly work in the third quarter. His first bid to fame was a dash of 37 yards for a touchdown. Shortly after this feat Butler took a punt and galloped 52 yards for his second touchdown.

The fourth quarter saw Butler run back a punt 70 yards before being tackled. Fath made the last touchdown for Riverside after a series of fumbles had given the Cadets the ball on U. S. B. 15-yard line.

McHenry and Carpenter did most of the ground gaining for the Bluebirds, while Huntsinger and Wilkie and Green and Nix contributed some neat defensive work.

Butler and Fath shone for Riverside, although the entire team played well.

All-Army Eleven Wins Service Title

Philadelphia, December 3.—(AP)—Before a crowd of 15,000 chilled spectators, the all-Army team won the service football championship today by defeating the Parris Island Marines on Franklin field, 39 to 12.

Lieutenant P. E. (Mike) Yeomans, former West Point quarterback, made two spectacular runs for touchdowns. He also punted well and ran the Army at high speed. Yeomans played the entire game although Coach Van Fleet, former West Point back, sent in many substitutes.

Franz, left end, twice scampered across the goal line and Hutchison and Driggs each went over for touchdowns. Both Marine scores were made by Quarterback Rickman.

By winning, the Army lifted the A. J. Drekel Biddle championship trophy.

Terriers Sweep Aside Lee Team

St. Petersburg, Fla., December 3.—(AP)—Tampa's Terriers of Hillsborough High school swept aside another opponent in their quest of state championship here today when they defeated the Robert E. Lee eleven of Jacksonville, 20 to 0. The game was played in St. Petersburg as Tampa's gridiron is being used for a rodeo.

Heavy rainfall that continued until 1:30 o'clock this afternoon made the attendance smaller than expected, although the field was in good condition for the game. Lynn, tackle, and Cancella, halfback, starred for the winners, while Captain Floyd stood out at end for the Jacksonville gridders.

READY FOR BIG TIME

Lawrence Corley, known in the ring as Ted Goodrich.

This good-looking youngster, who might be a bond salesman, but isn't, is Lawrence Corley, familiar to ring followers over the south as Ted Goodrich, whom Walk Miller, manager of the late Tiger Flowers, is planning to take to New York and launch on a big-time career.

Corley is shown in the picture at the left in fighting form as he appeared on the opening card of the Ringside club here last Tuesday night. The picture at the right shows Corley in street clothes.

The husky young scrapper, who in his numerous ring battles, has managed to steer clear of that pugilistic bane—cauliflower ears—hasn't lost many scraps in a period of seven years, during which time he has fought many of the south's best fighters in his class.

Recently Corley pounded away at one Mr. Spike Webb in such effective fashion that he turned in a very handy victory over this rugged battler.

Corley has an overhand right that he can shoot in with considerable force, and this, coupled with an aggressive spirit, makes him one of the south's best and Miller should have little trouble in getting him established in New York.

Corley started in the game when he was very young, leaving The Constitution, where he was an office boy, and going under the direction of Fearless Ferns, another well-known southern scrapper. Ferns taught young Corley a great deal about the game, which added to the experience and knowledge gained during the past few years, puts Corley in a good position for a try at big-time in the boxing profession.

POLO SQUAD BEGINS WORK AT FORT MAC

Polo is coming into its own at the fort these days and a club is in process of formation. The various polo mounts are being segregated into a stable and actual practice has started. Lieutenant John Weckerling, the athletic officer, has been appointed post and regimental polo representative with the assistance of several devotees of the game, interest has been aroused to such an extent that the defeat of the Horse Guards is being looked forward to, if a game can be arranged with the latter.

As far as players are concerned the Fort McPherson team has never been represented by better poloists. Major G. H. Franke, on duty with the fourth corps area headquarters, is an excellent player and has seen service with several Fort Bragg teams of the past few years. He is rated at two goals. Lieutenant Gilbert Proctor, one of the aides to Major General Davis, has recently joined the post from Fort Lewis, Wash. Lieutenant Proctor is also a two goal man, having had quite a bit of experience with western polo teams, which are uniformly above the average of the ordinary southern teams. Captain A. G. Wing, recently from Hawaii, and an excellent horseman as well as a player, is better than a one-goal man and will be of material aid to the team. He is a member of the Twenty-second infantry. Others of the Twenty-second are Lieutenant R. T. Foster and G. P. Lynch, both well-known in local polo circles and both able to carry one or more goals.

The crying need at this time is for more and better mounts. Ponies capable of playing the game are at a premium at the fort, but it is hoped to get, in the near future, about twenty remounts from which a playing string may be developed. But this takes time, especially when it is realized that there is generally a rule that remounts cannot be played for one year after release from the depots.

Three Athletics Go for Pitcher

(By Leased Wire to The Constitution and The Chicago Tribune.)

Philadelphia, December 3.—Chick Galloway, veteran shortstop and two other Athletics players were traded to Milwaukee today for Ossie Orwall, a combination outfielder and pitcher.

Charley Bates, South Philadelphia boy, who alternated between catching and playing the outfield, also goes to Milwaukee, another player yet to be names, completing the deal announced by Connie Mack.

The Athletics obtained Orwall after spirited bidding with the New York Giants. Last summer Connie Mack watched the pitcher in action and immediately started negotiations toward acquiring him.

Orwall, the new acquisition, is 25 years old and a college graduate. He bats and throws left-handed and was considered one of the most valuable players in the American association last season.

Redskins Had Football.

Defiance, Ohio, December 3.—(AP)—The writings of an historian of a century ago have been unearthed here showing that the Indians played football then. One side was made up of braves and the other of squaws, and when one team put the ball over the other's goal the match was won.

Leads First Basemen.

Griffin, stellar first baseman of the Milwaukee Brewers, set the pace for the first sackers of the American association during the past season, finishing with an average of .995.

PASS DEFENSE GREAT

:: NEW YORK SUN WRITER PRAISES TORNADO ::

TECH ASSET--TREVOR

BY GEORGE TREVOR.
New York Sun Staff Writer.

"That Ramblin' Wreck," of which Tech's loyal sons so proudly sing, bobbed up in the path of Georgia's non-stop limited at Grant field yesterday afternoon and derailed the Red and Black Express just one game short of an unbeaten season and a national title. There are no alibis that will hold water. Georgia was beaten decisively—beaten by a better team. The soupy, marshy gridiron had something to do with shackling the fleet Red Rovers, but it was Tech's uncanny pass defense, plus a clever aerial thrust of its own at a crucial moment, plus a mobile, tight-knit, fierce charging line which outjumped its scarlet clad rivals, plus "Stumpy" Thomason, that enabled the Golden Tornado to thrash Yale's conquerors to a frazzle.

An inspired swarm of Yellow Jackets surged all over a Georgia team which was quite obviously in the throes of a reaction. In these days of high tension competition it is almost impossible for any team of impressionable youngsters to go through a stiff schedule without suffering at least one "off day." Georgia was ripe for a relapse. The sight of that quagmire gridiron was perhaps just the psychological shove needed to push Ivey Shiver's men over the ragged edge. They had never done their stuff on a muddy field.

Haunting doubt crept in. It was written in the stars that Georgia's last game should be her worst. Doubtless the Bulldogs would have traded any one of their dazzling victories—even the one over mighty Yale—for a triumph over their traditional enemies from Tech.

Tech Earned Victory.

All of which must not be construed as reflecting on Tech's magnificent victory. As that horde of Yellow Jackets played yesterday, the writer does not think this Georgia team ever saw the days it could have trimmed them. Georgia's strength has unquestionably been overrated by reason of its victory over a Yale team that was still in the experimental stage. A substitute tackle played center for the Eli's that day and his exhibition of snapping back the ball was weird and wonderful to behold. His favorite stunt was to hurl the ball clear over the head of the Yale carrier.

Viewing Tech's triumph in retrospect, the figure of stocky Thomason—for all its lack of altitude—looms up like Pike's Peak above the Valley of Monitou. We don't mean that Thomason was the most valuable man to the Tech cause. Such an inference would be unfair to Warner Mizell, who punted, planted off tackle, and backed up his line like a saffron-clad, avenging fury. Nobody will deny, however, that Thomason's spectacular dashes lifted this game from a mere mud battle to a pulse-stirring drama. Thomason reeks of color. He epitomizes that verve and dash, that effervescent elan, which we northerners associate with the glamorous south. Watching Thomason swashbuckling a red strewn path to glory one sensed something of the rollicking dash of Stewart's cavalry raiders, something of the audacity that marked Stonewall Jackson's surprise attack along the corduroy road at Chancellorsville. Thomason was a composite picture of what we expected in a southern halfback.

They call him "Stumpy"—this sawed-off chunk of trinitytrotoluol. If you must know, TNT is a little bit more devastating than dynamite. "Stumpy" stands five feet seven in his white cotton socks and every inch of that elevation is composed of muscle and fighting frenzy. He is the "fightingest" sophomore you ever clapped eyes on, a rarin' tearin' bad man on the loose, "an injun rubber idjit on a spree."

Low Slung.

Thomason gets up momentum before you realize he has the ball. This cobby, blocky chap is built like the new Ford, close to the ground. That low center of gravity helped Thomason to keep his feet in the sticky going. You couldn't upset him—at least Georgia couldn't. Coach Bill Alexander held Thomason back. Just as you would hold the ace of trumps to lead at the psychological moment. During the entire first period "Stumpy" collected splinters on the bench. From time to time, you could see him pleading with Coach Bill Alexander. Alex isn't the sort of a bird who can be rushed. He was waiting for the big shot. Borrowing a leaf from Foster Sanford's handling of Charley Chadwick, the Yale guard of '97, who played like a man possessed of demons, Coach Alexander would turn to Thomason at intervals and ask: "If I put you in—how will you play?" And quick as a flashlight detonation "Stumpy" would reply: "Like hell! coach, like hell!"

As the second period opened, Alexander jerked his finger toward Thomason. "All right, 'Stump'—you go in!" Thomason went in and an electric change flashed over the game. Tech was in a desperate position, its back against the wall, or rather its own goal line. Georgia pressure had, little by little, forced the ball to Tech's 15-yard line. Dudley, whirling like a red dervish off Tech's right tackle, swirled and twisted and fought his way to Tech's 8-yard line. The big cherry red line dug its cleats into the clammy ooze. Towels were passed around for the mud crusted players to wipe their hands and faces on. You could hardly distinguish garnet from dull gold so thick was the mire plastered upon friend and foe. Estes, a greyhound on wide sweeps, tried Tech's end. Thomason came up like a thunderbolt and laid the Red Rover low. Dudley, who picks up his knees like a high stepping harness hack, attempted to cut back off tackle. Thomason buried him in the mire. Now it was fourth down with one thin yard to go. "Bull" McCrary on a straight buck through center. Every Tech man knew it. McCrary's initial lunge carried him past Pund, Tech's wide-ranging pivot, but Thomason was waiting for the Red Terror. The mighty McCrary failed to gain that precious yard. Georgia was a beaten team from that moment. "How will you play, 'Stumpy?'" "Like hell!"

Within three minutes came the pass that won the game for Tech. By virtue of Mizell's distance-devouring punt, and a weak return kick by Estes, Tech held the ball on Georgia's 45-yard line. All afternoon Mizell outpunted Estes. Tech's savage-charging linemen harried the Georgia kicker so that the ball often glanced off the side of his foot. Chunky Durant, Tech pilot, who stands with his back to the line of scrimmage before each play, noted a glaring weakness in Georgia's secondary defense. The cherry-jerseyed wing backs were deployed far too wide and much too close to their line. There was an open space in the middle big enough to hold all the gunmen in Chicago. Well, anyway it was so big that even your slightly astigmatized correspondent saw it. Before Mizell threw the ball, we glimpsed a vision of a Tech man running for a touchdown. That dream came true with startling suddenness.

Down the Alley.

Mizell whipped the ball down the center alley into the golden arms of Durant. Georgia's backs were caught off guard. They were dreaming of that national championship, even as it slipped through their fingers. The mythical title took flight on the thrumming cleats of Durant. Guarded by two Tech interferers, he raced almost 30 yards across Georgia's goal. McCrary and Johnson gave futile chase. They were beaten clean by the shrewd Durant, who knew how to exploit a faulty defensive alignment. Verily, is it written in the book of the gridiron—"They who live by the pass shall perish by the pass." All season Georgia has made the forward pass count heavily in its victories.

On Saturday the Georgia aerials were boomerangs. Tech intercepting half a dozen of Estes' heaves. Ironically enough, it was a Tech aerial that sent Georgia skidding to defeat.

Now we come to the third period and "Stumpy" Thomason's big moment. That gritty Georgia team, fighting with a spirit worthy of the martyred Von Gammon, had forced the ball to Tech's 30-yard line. Here Estes cut loose a long pass that was intended for Tom Nash's arms. Nash crossed over toward the middle alley, but the ball, poorly directed, caromed off a Techman's chest into "Stumpy" Thomason's ham-like hands.

Thomason's Run.

We wish you could have seen Thomason on that run! It was a duplicate of Marsters' dash in the Yale bowl. Thick-legged, stubby Thomason, a vest pocket Hercules, hasn't the physical assets which distinguish Marsters, of Dartmouth, yet the Tech man reminds you of the Green ghost.

Thomason invariably heads diagonally for the nearest sideline, down which he threads his way with incredible skill. He has Marsters' knack of hugging the boundary without stepping outside. On this particular play—the one that smashed Georgia's morale—Thomason darted obliquely toward the west sideline. At midfield "Stumpy" reached the boundary, along which he stepped with the dainty precision of a tight rope walker. That spine-tingling run covered fully 66 yards. "Stumpy's" short legs twinkled like one of those old-time eye-dazzling movie films. He was finally thrown on Georgia's 22-yard line.

"Pile Driver" Randolph punched his way through the Garnet center in a series of short jabs for a first down on Georgia's nine-yard line. The stage was set for "Stumpy." They gave him the ball and told him to circle Georgia's right end. Thomason was screened by a compact cloud of yellow-jersied interferers, but a less gifted carrier would not have got across the goal line. You've heard the expression, "He hit only the high spots." Take our word for it—Thomason did just that. "Stumpy" launched his body, catapult fashion, through space, as tacklers lunged at him. The writer has never seen a back who could actually leave the ground for as long an interval of time. Thomason projected himself head first across the goal line for the touchdown that closed out all debate. Thenceforth, the game was in Tech's bag.

Tech kicked off and the slipping Dudley stung to a beserk rage, came slithering back to midfield through ten-elevenths of the Tech team. You've guessed it! The eleventh man was Stumpy Thomason. "Stumpy" dove at Dudley as the red shirt crossed the 50-yard stripe. It was one of those head-first, bone-crunching tackles that even Bob Zuppke could hear. Thomason looks like a miniature cave man, but that tackle knocked him dizzy. His head lolled from side to side like a punch drunk fighter's. "Stumpy" was out on his feet. Coach Alexander realized that his star was goofy. "Come on in," Alex wig-wagged. Not "Stumpy!" He was there to see it through. They had to drag Thomason to the bench. He dug in his cleats and refused to budge. They called out the reserves and hauled him to the side line, fighting every inch of the way. As he reached Tech's bench, Thomason keeled over in a faint. It was an exit worthy of "Stumpy."

A Big Day.

Thus ended the south's biggest athletic afternoon. Thirty-eight thousand seven hundred persons jammed the low, intimately cozy stands at Grant field, the largest audience ever to assemble for any sporting event below the Mason and Dixon line. What started as an uneventful struggle twenty-two troglodytes wallowing in a primeval sea of ooze, developed into a breath-taking football game as the soggy gridiron dried out.

A sky furrowed by ridges of cloud, palpable as lead, kindly withheld the threatened downpour. In the stands bright-eyed flappers spoke in the lilting drawl, the soft cadence typical of Dixie. "You all," "mah goodness," and "Ah doan't reckson" tripped melodiously off southern tongues. Truly a memorable day, and a memorable victory, yet one cannot help feeling a little sorry for the Georgia senior whose Bulldog-emblazoned slicer bore the terse inscription, "Georgia beat Yale, Yale beat the Army, and the army won the war!" To this the unhappy postscript must be added—"But Tech licked Georgia!" Can the Georgians laugh that off? Not any more easily than the Elis can forget the bitter figures — Georgia 14, Yale 10.

Who am de champion now?

PENNSYLVANIA IS SELECTED FOR COAST TILT

Philadelphia, Pa., December 3.—(AP) The entire University of Pennsylvania varsity football squad has been selected by Coach Louis A. Young to make the trip to California for the game with the University of California, December 31.

Thirty-four players, four varsity coaches, three freshman coaches, managers and trainers will be in the party, which will leave on a special train on December 17. A baggage car will be fitted up for blackboard drills.

Baby Stribling Faces Tough Customer Here

Kid Dorland Will Meet Stribling in Feature Bout at Ringside Club.

If the opinion of Matchmaker Jimmy Mayson and other local followers of the ring counts for anything Baby Stribling is facing his hardest fight here when he steps into the Ringside club ring Tuesday night to oppose Dandy Kid Dorland in the ten-round feature of a boxing show that calls for a total of 30 rounds.

However, the Stribling camp is confident that the youngest member of Georgia's only fighting family will be able to take care of himself, for it is said that he has improved considerably since his last appearance at the city auditorium. The fans recall Baby as a pleasing and aggressive scrapper even in those days.

Popular Fighter.

Dorland hails from Oklahamo, but more recently he has been fighting in Florida, where he scored numerous successes, thereby making himself popular with both the fans and promoters. His latest engagement resulted in a spectacular draw with Young Manuel, a Cuban boxing champion.

Freddie Boorde, who scored a decisive triumph over Casey Jones in last week's card at the Ringside club, tackles Little Jeff, from Fort McPherson, in the eight-round semi-wind-up of the Tuesday night card.

Two six-round prelims will be offered. Homer Reid meets Jones in one of them, while the other brings together Battling Maddox and Happy Smith, both local and talented boxers.

The Ringside club is located at Broad and Mitchell streets, where tickets are now on sale.

SOLDIERS MEET SOCCER CLUB AT FORT TODAY

The Atlanta Soccer club, with its best team in top form, meets the strong outfit of the 22d infantry at the fort Sunday afternoon, the game getting under way at 2:30. The Soldiers have at last gotten a permanent line-up which ought to be able to play the Atlantans to a close score without substitutions.

Since last Sunday, when the Doughboys defeated the All-Stars and showed considerable improvement over any other game played, they naturally hope to make the Soccer club extend themselves to the limit. Recognizing the importance of defense of the goal, Krall and Holloway have been assigned to that sector. The halfbacks have been given defensive drills also and those positions will be amply filled by Vinson, Rowe, Barbee and Gunter. The smaller men are to be shifted to the forward line where speed is a requisite.

The lineup will be:

ATLANTA.	POS.	22D INF.
Fullington	Goal	Weckerling
Purdie	Right Back	Krall
Jaleuk	Center Half	Belling
Jiminez	Right Half	Gunter
Day	Left Half	Rowe-Vinson
Roche	Outside Left	Turner
Alexander	Inside Left	Lassiter
Ness	Center	Tedesco
Jones	Inside Right	Hunter
Stark	Outside Right	Anderson

At Philadelphia: Frankford Yellow Jackets 0; Chicago Bears 0 (tie).

At Syracuse: Providence Steam Rollers 9; New York Yankees 0.

Learning To Play.

San Francisco, December 3.—(AP)—Descendants of China, perhaps the only large nation which doesn't have a national sport, are taking increasingly to American athletics. In Chinatown basketball leads in popularity with volley ball and tennis claiming many devotees. To some extent football and baseball are played.

New Wrestler Will Be Seen At Next Show

McDougal Will Oppose Paul Jones in Feature Match of Evening.

Jim Browning is returning to Atlanta for a match on the Wednesday night card at the city auditorium. He will meet Charley Hanson, a stranger to the Atlanta mat fans, in the preliminary to the "Scotty" McDougal-Paul Jones scrap.

Matchmaker John Contos, who is offering his fourth mat attraction of the season, is highly confident that the Atlanta fans will like Hanson. He bases that confidence on the fact that the local cash customers have always been well pleased with rough and ready grapplers, which is said to be Hanson's type of wrestling.

Experienced Wrestler.

Hanson is an experienced grappler and has met some of the outstanding grapplers in the game and been dodged by others of that class, or so he contends. In fact when Stanislaus Zbysko was champion of the world he met Hanson in a match at Nashville, Tenn., and after three hours of grappling, without either opponent having gained a decided advantage the police stepped in and stopped the match on the grounds that it was too brutal.

Hanson's version of why the police stopped the bout is that they did so at the instance of the champion's handlers, who sensed the fact that Hanson was sooner or later bound to best their charge. Hanson was trained for the mat game by Farmer Burns, former world's champion, and for two years Hanson claims to have kept Joe Stecher from appearing in any matches at Omaha. He says that the promoter there refused to give Stecher a bout until he met Hanson.

While the wrestling fans very likely are willing to accept Conto's word that Hanson is an entertaining grappler the main attraction of the show remains the return of Paul Jones. He has appeared here this season and the fans, so Contos says, have been clamoring for his return.

His Best Opponent.

Jones is the best opponent that McDougal has yet met here. On the first card of the season the Scotchman wrestled to a draw with Browning in a match that was well decorated with thrills. In his next appearance "Scotty" earned a decision over Jack Washburn, the Oklahoma giant.

While Jones is probably not as strong as either one of those grapplers he is more skilled and very much faster. In fact speed is Paul's best asset in a match and he never fails to utilize that advantage.

There is no doubt about Jones being the most popular grappler that has been introduced to the local fans in the two and one half years that wrestling has flourished here under the direction of Matchmaker Contos.

"OFF-SEASON" IN BASEBALL IS UNDER WAY

New York, December 3.—(AP)—Baseball's off-season is away to a bustling start with three managerial changes already effected, a fourth pending and other shifts affecting a half dozen of the most prominent of major league playing figures.

It won't seem like the same fields of battle another season with such veterans as Walter Johnson, Jacques Fournier, Zach Wheat, Dutch Reuther and Bob Shawkey missing, in addition to the prospects that neither Ty Cobb nor Tris Speaker will be in active uniform. The passing of such a galaxy is nothing short of an epoch in the game.

Johnson and Fournier will be teammates in the Newark International league club with the veteran handling the managerial reins in his first minor league venture since he was an Idaho rookie.

Collins "Out" as Tribe Boss.

The possibility that Eddie Collins would be offered the vacant pilot's job at Cleveland is removed by definite announcement that "Columbus Eddie" will remain with the Athletics, taking over an additional share of Connie Mack's responsibilities. At least 10 others have been suggested, however, as possible successor to Jack McCallister at Cleveland.

Bill McKechnie, returning to the helm of a National league club at St. Louis, is much better equipped for 1928 than the other two new managers, Burt Shotton, of the Phillies, and Jack Slattery, of the Boston Braves. McKechnie takes over an outfit that finished a close second last year after winning a world's championship the year before.

The Cuyler case seems to have been written off the books by the transfer of the star Pittsburgh outfielder to Chicago in exchange for "Sparky" Adams and Floyd Scott in the biggest trade of the winter season so far.

The record-breaking deal by which the White Sox disbursed the equivalent of $23,000 for Chalmer Cissell, Portland, Ore., infielder, overshadows what dickering has been done with the minors but business may pick up when the winter pow-wows start. The minor league men gather at Dallas today and the majors hold their annual meetings in New York the week of December 12.

Badger Harrier Prospects Good

Captain Johnny Zola, who set a new record for the Michigan course while leading a Wisconsin cross-country team to victory in the big ten meet at Ann Arbor, Mich., recently, held his total points down to five for the entire season, Coach Tom Jones said recently. Zola captured three firsts and a second place during the year.

Zola's running mate, Johnny Petaja, scored only ten points, with one first, second, third and a fourth. Bullamore registered 17, Wall 30 and Burgess 31.

While Zola, Petaja and Bullamore will finish school this year, Coach Jones' prospects for a fifth consecutive championship will be brightened.

Golf Is Work.

"There is more mental strain in one round of losing golf than in an entire week of work," says Frederick Pierce, New York psychologist, who proceeded to tell the executive club that golf played for $1 a hole is hard work, and not play. Valuable relaxation is obtained from the game only when the competitive element is absent, according to Mr. Pierce.

John L. Sullivan Was Original 'Boston Strong Boy'

Natural Born Fighter And Loved to Scrap

Finally Lost World's Championship in First Fight With Gloves.

BY ROBERT EDGREN

No matter how other champions may be forgotten, the name of John L. Sullivan still echoes around the world. For many years I have been receiving letters asking for stories about the great John L., and for an answer to the old question: "Was John L. champion of the world?"

John L. was champion of the world. There was a time when no one cared to dispute that. He was champion of the world with the bare fists, under London prize ring rules, before the softly padded knuckles of the Queensberry day had civilized the sport. In his first big fight with the padded gloves, when he was 34 years old, fat and flabby from much dissipation, Sullivan lost the world's heavyweight championship to Jim Corbett at New Orleans, knocked out in 21 rounds.

John L. was born in Boston. He was the original "Boston Strong Boy;" those who have borrowed the nickname since his day weren't even imitations of the great Sullivan.

Born Fighter.

In the first place, Sullivan was a born fighter. He was powerfully built, with thick arms, sloping shoulders, short neck and a fighting jaw. He had the temperament of a fighter, surly and aggressive. He had a deep, roaring voice. I've never heard another voice like Sullivan's. He was like the old Berserks, "bull-throated." He had scowling black brows and the eyes of an eagle. His whole attitude was intimidating and they say that many fighters jumped out of the ring rather than face John L.'s swift and merciless attack. In aggressiveness he was much like Jack Dempsey of a few years ago, and like Dempsey he was a tremendous walloper, was absolutely careless of being hurt, absolutely concentrated upon beating his man down in the shortest possible time.

John L. played a little professional baseball as a boy and hoped to be a big leaguer. He had a swat like Babe Ruth's. But he was always fighting. It was a word and a blow with Sullivan—or the blow first.

Mike Donovan, world's middleweight champion, had a "benefit set-to" in Boston. That's about the only way a fighter could make any money in those days when big purses hadn't been invented and men fought for side stakes put up by their backers. Donovan asked for a local fighter to box with, and someone said: "There's a young cab driver around the corner who might give you a set-to."

Makes Promising Start.

The exhibition went on, some small bouts between light men, and then Champion Donovan with the unknown John Lawrence Sullivan. Donovan was matched to defend his middleweight title in a few weeks. He felt, too, that the cab driver might be nervous, facing a champion. So he said: "I'm going to let you off easy—I don't want to risk hurting my hands." Donovan thought the novice would be grateful for this concession. But no!

"You'll be lucky if I don't break your neck," roared Sullivan, in his bull-bellowing voice.

Very much annoyed, Donovan went right to work at the bell, jabbing Sullivan swiftly and dancing around him. Members of the New York Athletic club remember old Mike—the master boxer for so many years of his later life. He was just as clever in his early days.

Terrific Punching.

Mike jabbed a few times. Then Sullivan rushed suddenly. The boy weighed 190 pounds. Donovan ducked and tried to clinch. Sullivan swung his right arm like a baseball bat, bringing his heavy fist down, club-like, on Donovan's shoulder blades. Donovan was knocked on his face so hard his nose was broken and he was "out" for the evening. Later Donovan predicted that Sullivan would be the greatest fighter in the world. It was this prediction that encouraged Sullivan to take up fighting as a sole profession, and after winning a couple of bouts, go to New York for the famous fight on a barge anchored in the Hudson river, in which he knocked out John Flood.

Fighting was a desperate game in those days. Often rival gangs raided the rings, black-jacking a winning fighter and breaking up a fight to save their bets. Men fought in the woods, in barns, wherever they could be hidden from the sheriffs. And those who sat around the ropes of hastily raised rings were, for the greater part, well armed and recognizing no law but that of superior force. The gun, the blackjack and the bowie knife settled disputes.

Sullivan thrived on the rough stuff. He could be rougher than the roughest. His name was soon known and feared.

Fights for Championship.

In 1882 Sullivan fought Paddy Ryan for "The championship of the world." Ryan was recognized as champion. At Collier, W. Va., in 1873, Ryan knocked out Joe Goss in 87 rounds. Goss, as champion of England, had invaded America and beaten Tom Allen for the international title. Sullivan knocked Ryan out bare knuckles and for a stake of $5,000 a side and the championship, in nine rounds. This was at Mississippi City.

Sullivan's title claim was then clear, but he went farther.

The next year, 1883, John L. Sullivan, who had fought a few more battles and knocked out, among others, the famous Jim Elliott, went on a nine months' tour of the country, meeting all comers and offering the immense sum (in those days) of $1,000 to any man he failed to knock out in four rounds. It isn't on record that John L. ever failed. He knocked out 50 men, including famous local fighters. He set four rounds as a limit for later fights after failing to stop Tug Wilson in Philadelphia in four rounds in 1882. After that most of Sullivan's fights were won in from one to three rounds, except the big battles with Charlie Mitchell in France, 39 rounds, and with Jake Kilrain in the Mississippi woods, 75 rounds for the world title.

Sullivan Trained Little.

In Sullivan's time fighters didn't train much. Sullivan was a wild man. He drank heavily and began to "go back" after that famous tour in 1883, when he not only knocked out all the local champions throughout the country but tried to drink all the liquor as he went along. But he still carried terror and a terrific punch.

Billy Madden, who managed Sullivan, quarreled with John L. and went to England and Ireland to find a man to whip him. After running a tournament for months he brought back Charlie Mitchell, a marvellous boxer who had knocked out all rivals, but only a middleweight. Mitchell knocked John L. flat on his back, in old Madison Square Garden, and John came up roaring with rage and nearly tore the ring down trying to knock Mitchell through the ropes. John won in three rounds, the police jumping in to save Mitchell from annihilation.

Sullivan went to England to challenge Jem Smith, champion of England, to fight him for the world's championship. There were no other boxing countries in that day, except Australia, which had not yet sent out its great heavyweights.

Democratic John L.

Sullivan met Smith at the National Sporting club, where he was introduced to the Prince of Wales, later King Edward. To put the prince at his ease John L. said: "Glad to meet you, prince; I've often heard of you."

Jem Smith was to box an exhibition with a sparring partner, and Sullivan to box an exhibition to entertain the prince. Both were called to the royal box for an introduction.

"Say, prince," roared Sullivan, "there's no use in Smith's sparring with that dub. Me either. I'd rather fight. Smith is in training to fight Kilrain and I've just come off the ship. I'll fight him now, in that 12-foot ring, for nothing, and if I don't knock him out in three rounds I'll take the next boat back."

Smith Refuses.

Smith flatly refused. Sullivan's roar and his fierce look were not encouraging. Later Smith fought Kilrain in France, and the crowd of his backers tore down the ring and stopped the fight to save their money when Kilrain was winning. Sullivan stayed in England some time to challenge Jem Smith to fight for the title, but couldn't get him into the ring. This, under English custom, eliminated Smith from championship consideration. John L. fought Charlie Mitchell at Chantilly, France, a 39-round draw in the rain and mud of a private park. Sullivan punched Mitchell all over the ring for 20 rounds, and then, being fat and out of condition from long dissipation, lost his strength and wind and became practically helpless. Mitchell hammered Sullivan as fast as he could hit for ten rounds, and then being too arm weary to hit any more found Sullivan recovering his punch and "circled" as fast as he could to keep out of danger. No more blows were landed for a time and the backers of both men agreed to call it a "draw," all bets off. Sullivan was heart-broken over being unable to knock out the much smaller English fighter, although he hadn't lost his championship. He returned to America, where Bill Muldoon forced him to cut out drinking and train for months to fight Kilrain in a battle generally recognized as being for the world's championship. This fight, in the Mississippi woods, went 75 rounds, covering 2 hours and 16 minutes, before Sullivan was able to knock Kilrain out, and it was his last great effort. He boxed exhibitions for three years, and then tried fighting again and lost to Jim Corbett.

The "rounds" in the Sullivan fights were not three-minute rounds. They were London P. R. rounds, terminated by a fall or a knockdown.

S. C. U. DOWNS WASHINGTON BY 33 TO 13

Los Angeles, December 3.—A strong, husky pack from the University of Washington came south today to meet an inspired All-American quarterback supported by an equally inspired Southern California football team. The final score was Southern California 33, Washington 13.

Any doubt that Morley Drury, captain of Southern California, merited his selection as the backfield pivot of the nation's mythical eleven was swept away in his farewell to college football.

The Trojan leader played only half a game, but in that time he scored three touchdowns and took the heart and fight out of the Husky attack. In the first quarter he intercepted two passes thrown deep into Trojan territory by Carroll, star of Washington. He galloped 76 yards for the first score. He ran 25 yards in the second quarter for his second score and in the third quarter skirted the Husky left end for a wide five-yard run to his final college touchdown.

Washington scored twice in the last half, after terrific drives the entire length of the field. Plunges and passes were intermixed to send Carroll over for both touchdowns.

S. S. A. A. CAGE SEASON OPENS MONDAY NIGHT

Having five games on the card for the opening night Monday night at the Atlanta Athletic club, the Sunday School Athletic association 1927-28 basketball season will be officially starting what is expected to be another successful season.

The quintets of the Central Presbyterian and Druid Hills Presbyterian churches are to pry the lid off the season Monday night when they meet in the initial contest. They will be followed by First Presbyterian and Covenant Presbyterian and three other games.

Play on Thursday night will be at the Central Presbyterian court when five more games are to be run off.

President Pup Phillips will toss up the first ball Monday night starting the teams on their way. Plans have been formulated for working the organization and it is expected that a banner year is in store for the association.

Glassman and Mundorff are to officiate at all games. The schedule for the week follows:

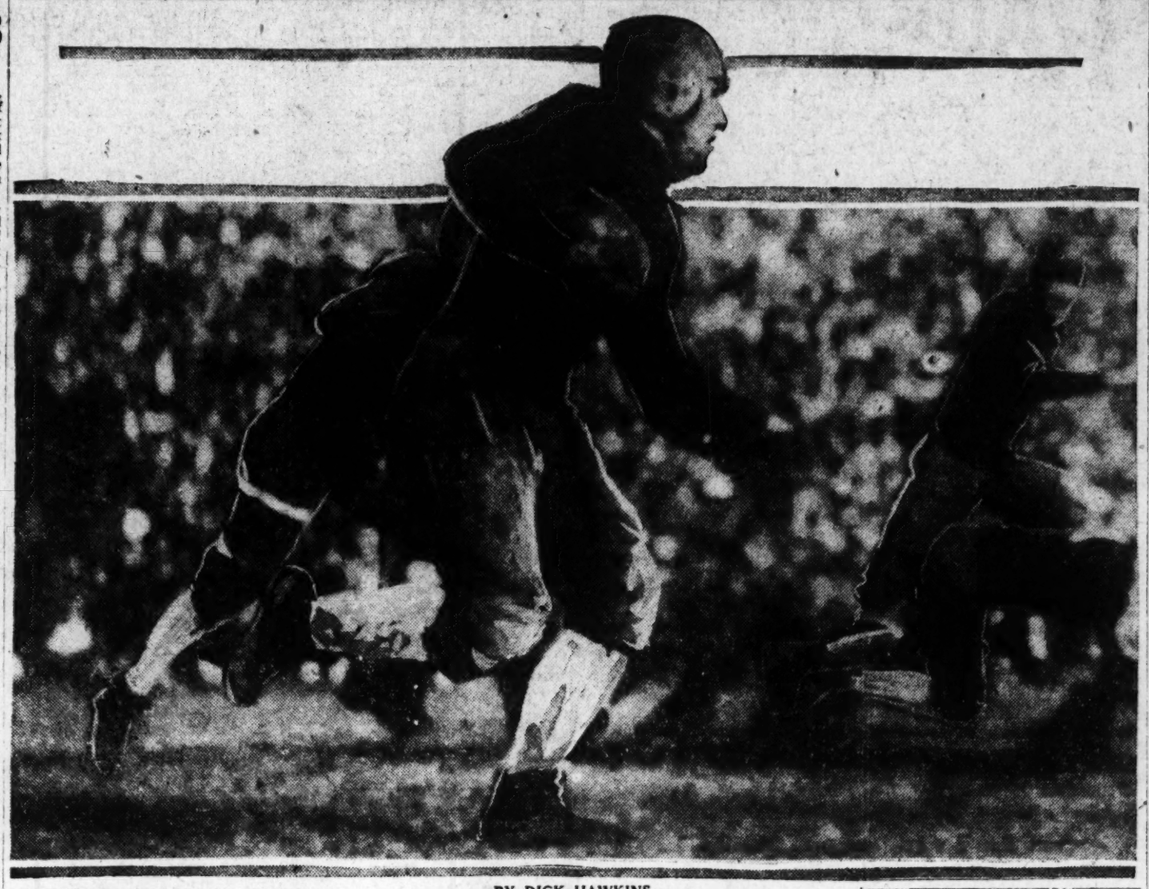
MONDAY NIGHT, December 5.
At Atlanta Athletic Club.

Central Presbyterian vs. Druid Hills Presbyterian (American) 7:15; First Presbyterian vs. Covenant Presbyterian (American) 7:40. Westminster Presbyterian vs. Bowie class, St. Luke's Episcopal (American) 8:35; Clifton Presbyterian vs. Capitol Avenue Baptist (National) 9:00; Pryor Street Presbyterian vs. Druid Hills Baptist (National) 9:55.

THURSDAY NIGHT, December 8.
At Central Presbyterian.

Triple E. class of Second Baptist vs. Inman Park Methodist (National) 7:15; Westminster Presbyterian vs. Central Presbyterian (American) 7:40; Fellowship class, West End Baptist vs. Grace Methodist (National) 8:35; Jackson Hill Baptist vs. Calvary Methodist (American) 9:00; Lutheran Church of the Redeemer vs. Capitol Avenue Baptist (National) 9:55.

"TERRIBLE THOMASON"



BY DICK HAWKINS.

As the third period of that epic battle Saturday between the Red Terror of Georgia and the Golden Tornado of Tech neared an end the eyes of the huge crowd focused on one spot. A spot behind the Tech line where a stocky, golden-jerseyed back was fighting furiously against four of his teammates.

That stocky lad was Stumpy Thomason—that terrible Thomason whose flying feet and plunging, twisting body have earned him a great name in the southern conference. Stumpy was hurt, grievously hurt, and Bo Read, his substitute, was in to take his place but Stumpy disagreed.

He had come through 10 weeks of football after five weeks of training just for that minute. It mattered not that he had just intercepted a pass on his own 15-yard line and carried it 58 yards through the whole Georgia team. It mattered not that he had followed that great play with a twisting run for a touchdown. All that mattered was that he was being taken from that game of games before the final whistle blew, that he would not have a chance to smash that wounded shoulder again and again against the wall of red in front of him.

It was an exhibition of fighting spirit that can only be the product of amateur athletics. It is a great credit to the man and a great tribute to the game that can call for the best a man has in times of stress.

Jackets Win Over Bulldogs On Soggy Grid

Undefeated Red Terror Bows Before Gold and White, 12-0.

ders of two comrades. He was out on his feet for many minutes and was literally carried from the field oblivious to the deafening cheers of the score-mad Tech followers; oblivious to everything except that Tech had won and he had earned a respite.

Fought Hard And Fair

That action of Bob Randolph was typical of the warriors on both sides of those muddy lines. They fought to the wilting point but they fought fair.

When Captain Crowley and Captain Shiver met in the center of the field at game time the hand of fate made its first move. Tech won the toss and kicked, Georgia defending the north goal.

It was Georgia's ball on its own 32-yard line and the slipping, sliding melee was on.

After the ball had changed hands twice and had been given the services of a towel many times, Mizell punted to Georgia on its own 26-yard line and McCrary, on the first play, fumbled.

Tech recovered, and after two splashes at the line Mizell passed and Estes intercepted the heave. There were two breaks in the game, one for each side and the mud treatment started again.

Estes, attempting to punt to safety, booted the ball out of bounds on his own 48-yard strip and then came another break. Randolph, on the first play, fumbled the slippery ball and it was recovered by a Georgia lineman.

Georgia tried its battering again but the gold and white wall held and the little Georgia back punted out of bounds on Tech's 18-yard line.

Watching the Ball.

Tech was playing a punting game and watching the ball for breaks, Mizell punted out 35 yards on the second down, and it was Georgia's ball on Tech's 47-yard line. On the second play McCrary fumbled but Georgia recovered for no gain. A pass from Estes to Dudley was completed but the ball was called back and the Bulldogs penalized five yards for off-sides. Estes then booted the soggy oval 50 yards over the goal and it was Tech's ball on her own 20-yard line.

Again Mizell punted without taking any chances on fumbles in the shadow of his own goal and Georgia took the ball on its own 48-yard marker. Then the fireworks started. A flat pass from Estes to Nash netted 14 yards and first down. That gave the Bulldogs confidence and they tried a double pass, but Peter Pund was through the line and the play netted a two-yard loss. Then Estes punted 37 yards out of bounds. It was a beautifully placed kick and Tech took the ball on its own 11-yard line. Mizell scooped up a low snap and booted the ball to the 32-yard line where Georgia took it as the quarter ended.

There was a whole quarter without a time out and as the ball went into play the great Stumpy Thomason went in for Bo Read at right half. From that time until he was taken out, in the third period, Stumpy threw his stocky body and quick brain into the fray with telling effect.

Right at the beginning of the second period Georgia flew through the air to Tech's 8-yard line and there the Tornado held. The ball went over and Mizell immediately punted 34 yards out of bounds.

Drive Started.

It was the Bulldogs' ball on Tech's 42-yard line and that distance was cut to 31 when Estes and Dudley made a first down in two plays. The drive was started and the Georgia stands were howling for a touchdown, but fate cupped a muddy hand over her ear. A pass from Estes to Shiver fell incomplete, and the ball went over after three fruitless plays.

Again Mizell played the waiting game and punted out of danger to Georgia's 26-yard line. It was a terrific boot and turned the tide from Red and Black to Gold and White.

In the shadow of her goal Georgia tried two line plays, but found no soft spot except the mud under feet and Estes punted 22 yards out of bounds. It was Tech's ball at mid-field.

Another exchange of punts gave the ball to Tech on Georgia's 41-yard marker and the lull preceded the storm. Two rams at the line netted Tech six yards, but a penalty cut this to one yard when the bomb broke from a clear sky.

Bob Durant slipped from the middle of that huddle through the line in a mass of Tech interferers and Mizell's pass caught him fair in the chest. He raced 42 yards for a touchdown and Georgia was stunned. Here was a line-rushing team giving the Bulldog a bitter dose of its own medicine. Never has a more beautifully executed play been seen on any field than that one. After Durant caught the pass he was confronted by a Georgia back with 30 yards to go. But Waddy was there and he took the red-shirted warrior out of the path with a beautiful flying block.

Stumpy Thomason found the soggy ball too heavy to shoot straight and the goal was missed.

When Nash kicked, Tech took the ball on its own 37-yard stripe and Mizell and Thomason ripped off 12 yards on two plays, but the ball was called back after Stumpy's gallop and Tech was penalized 15 yards for holding. Mizell punted and Georgia was forced to try anything once.

Bulldog Passes Fail.

Georgia did try a pass in its own territory and it fell in the waiting arms of Mizell, who raced back 33 yards before he was downed. Time was very short and Mizell heaved to Waddy over the goal line, but it was a bit too high and the ball went over to Georgia on its own 20-yard line. One play ended the half with Tech atop the heap by six points.

As the bands paraded before the huge crowd the Georgia supporters remembered a similar scene one year before when Tech had left the field at the end of the first half with a substantial lead and then had been beaten by the Red Terror. But fate had a different thought and fate was mistress of that game.

The first few minutes of that third period were but steps leading up to the great climax of a great game. Neither team managed to gain any great yardage and the ball changed places four times on punts when Georgia had the ball on Tech's 41-yard mark and they took to the air with dire results. A pass from Estes sailed far over the line and seemed doomed to hit the mud, but out of nowhere came the churning legs and stocky body of Stumpy Thomason, who tucked that pass under his arm and, cutting across the field, raced up the sidelines for 58 yards. That placed the ball on Georgia's 23-yard line and the drive started.

Randolph skidded out of bounds for a three-yard gain, Mizell got four yards over the broad back of Papa Hood and Randolph made it first down on Georgia's 10-yard line.

Stumpy Goes Over.

Randolph got two through the center of the line and again the blade of the guillotine struck. The ball was snapped to Stumpy Thomason and he swung wide around left end. He found his way blocked by a secondary Bulldog and cut back to go slithering across the goal for Tech's second touchdown. That run covered but eight yards in a straight line, and it doesn't take Stumpy long to cover ten times that distance, but there was more drama packed into that second than in any other hour. It was Stumpy Thomason at his best. That is all one needs to say. He missed the goal again and the score was 12-0, Tech.

When Stumpy left the ground after that great run he had to be helped and it was plain to see that his injured shoulder had been hurt again. Three plays later he staggered and weaved behind the line and Coach Alex called on Bo Read to relieve Stumpy. It took four men to drag Stumpy Thomason from the field and when he did reach the sidelines he threw himself on the ground and cried because the coach would not let him stay longer in that game with a shoulder that must have been giving him fits of pain at every move.

The quarter ended after two more plays and the final period was a mud-spattered story of a frantic Bulldog taking to the air and making first downs in the middle of the field, but failing to even threaten the goal of the victors.

It was a snapping, snarling Bulldog that rushed and faltered and passed and faltered through that final period. He who would write a brief to Georgia could take those last few minutes and compose an epic of bravery and sogged fight. Tech had the game won but those Bulldogs would not admit defeat.

Casualties On Gridiron Decreasing

Edgren Says Football Tougher Than Ever; Mick Walker Not Worried.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Well, nobody has printed a football casualty list this year. There was a time when the casualty list was the feature of the last week of each season. No football year was complete unless some reporter in Hootahotamie, I. T. dug up his carefully saved clippings and got out the old adding machine and went to work to inform the breathlessly waiting world that umpty-leven men had died with their cleats on during the six weeks before Thanksgiving day and on the great day itself.

What's the matter with football? Is the automobile going to rob it of its ancient glory? You can see the auto casualty lists along with the weather report in any daily paper. But if you see anything about a football casualty it is a report that Jim Jams, the noted Skookum High quarterback, will be out of the play for at least several weeks because he has cut his algebra class and fractured his attendance record in the lecture course on paleontology.

Game Still Hard One.

So far as I have noticed this season, football is played as hard as it ever was—perhaps harder. I haven't seen any teams curl up and call for their lip-sticks and their powder puffs. Every game I've seen has been a battle royal. But I've seen very few men limp off the field, and none carried off. Are the lads growing tougher than they used to be? We thought we had some tough babies in football in my time. I remember playing in one game, for junst a few minutes, in which we made a proud record. Two of our men and two of the rival team were packed to the city hospital in ambulances, and eight men were knocked out of the original line-up on each side before the second half was ended. We didn't have quarters then. We thought that proved we were great fighting men and probably just about as tough as any warriors in history. Perhaps it only proved we had glass arms and legs and were too delicate to play a rough game like football. Perhaps modern training has developed a new race that can take a hammering better than the old-timers ever could. Or perhaps the faster modern game, protected by a score of regulations never thought of in those old flying wedge, pile-up-and-kick-'em-in-the-ribs days, is not only better to look at, but better for the players.

Good Teams Distributed.

Yale, Illinois, Stanford, the class of the football year. There have been many other fighting teams, but none to touch these. One in the far east, one in the middle west, one in the far west. Football isn't the local game any more. A lot of us can remember when football that wasn't played by Yale, Harvard, Princeton or Pennsylvania hardly attracted enough notice to be sent over the wires. Ten men play the game today where one played ten years ago. It has become the great American game. If you don't think so, pick up any Sunday paper during the football season and try to find a three-line item about any other branch of sport. Tucked down in a corner somewhere you may discover something like this:

Elizabeth, N. J.—Sixty-three people tonight saw world's welterweight champion, John Jones, knocked out by Bud Bearcat, an unknown. Three rounds. Gate $237.

Tiger Flowers ended his long streak of hard luck last week when he died "after a slight operation."

Walker Worries No More.

Mickey Walker can go along now, defending his middleweight title, unworried by that broken contract to give Tiger Flowers a return match. No commission can tell him that he must fight Tiger Flowers or quit the ring.

Flowers was a very good middleweight, and a champion. Not the greatest of champions by a long way, but a good clean, clever, hard-fighting man. He might have been one of the greatest champions if he hadn't been forced, during the early years of his ring career, to fight many men 30 or 40 pounds heavier than himself. A welterweight, he had to fight heavies to get matches at all. And some of those big fellows can sock, clumsy as they are. It wears a man down to give away weight and take hard punches for a few years. In spite of that handicap the Tiger came along and beat Harry Greb, who was a tough man to beat.

The middleweight class seems to be unfortunate. Take the list of champions back to the original Jack Dempsey's time. The great nonpareil was beaten by Bob Fitzsimmons and not very long afterward died of tuberculosis and was buried far from his old home town. Friends found his grave and put a stone over it, years later. Bob Fitzsimmons caught pneumonia in a draughty stage and died. Kid McCoy still lives, but not under very pleasant conditions. Tommy Ryan is healthy, wealthy and enjoying life on the western coast. Stanley Ketchel was murdered, shot in the back by a jealous farm hand on a ranch where he was visiting. Billy Papke, prosperous, lives on a ranch at Altadena, Cal.; Klaus, Chip, Al McCoy, a few inconsequential others, all forgotten. Harry Greb died "after a slight operation" and now Tiger Flowers has gone the same way. Perhaps it isn't lucky to be a middleweight.

CLUB TRANSFER BRINGS ABOUT HOT ARGUMENT

Dallas, Texas, December 3.—(AP)—The right of a minor league club to withdraw and enter another league as presented in the action of the Tulsa and Oklahoma City clubs in leaving the Western league to join the Texas, occupied baseball's national board of arbitration in a late session tonight.

No decision was reached after several hours of discussion. Owners of the two clubs appearing before the board declared it was essential their withdrawal be permitted because of decreased receipts in recent seasons. Other Western league representatives fought the transfer.

Many magnates reached Dallas tonight for the meeting Tuesday, of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues. Commission K. M. Landis is expected tomorrow.

The association probably will be called upon to pass on the ownership of minor league clubs by major league members, an outstanding matter to be considered by the American association. Following recent acquisition of the Columbus club by the Cincinnati Nationals, several American association officials expressed disapproval of major league control of minor league clubs. Texas league clubs also indicated opposition to ownership of the Houston club of that circuit by the St. Louis Cardinals.

The New York Giants have accepted two semipro pitchers from Canada for the once-over during the spring training season. They are Buck Lai and Lefty Dilks.

WOMAN PATRON AIDS UNCLE SAM ON AIR

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Uncle Sam's radio programs are not all talks on poultry and hog feeding.

In addition to the extensive service of the department of agriculture, chamber music concerts by celebrated artists and lectures by men of international note are broadcast by the music division of the library of congress via NAA, the naval station in Washington.

The music auditorium in the courtyard of this famous old building of historical interest and architectural renown becomes on these occasions a temporary broadcasting studio that patrons of the arts throughout the country may hear the concerts and lectures.

That the programs are available to the radio public, Carl Engel, chief of the music division of the library, attributes to the generosity of Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, of Cambridge, Mass., and to the cooperation of the navy department.

In the autumn of 1924, Mrs. Coolidge, one of America's most munificent patrons of music, offered to the librarian of congress $60,000, later raised to $90,000, for the building of the music auditorium.

The librarian conveyed Mrs. Coolidge's offer to congress, which promptly accepted the gift. Charles A. Platt, New York architect, drew the plans for the auditorium, which seats 500 people.

To enable the library to perpetuate the work begun by her Mrs. Coolidge endowed the music division with a trust fund of $500,000. The annual income of this fund defrays the cost of concerts and lectures, all of them free of charge and all of them broadcast.

NAA broadcasts the programs.

Pershing To Talk.

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—A nation-wide broadcast of an event intended to attract a huge farmer audience has been arranged for Wednesday, December 7, when General J. J. Pershing addresses the American Farm Bureau federation convention. The WJZ chain will put that day's program on the air, beginning at 10 a. m. In addition, WLS will broadcast the proceedings of the entire convention, which opens December 5 and closes two days later.

All-American to Coach.

Harry Kipke, former All-American halfback while playing with the University of Michigan in 1922, has been signed as head football coach at Michigan State college next year. Kipke, since graduation, has been one of the assistant coaches at the University of Michigan.

TREATY ATTEMPTS ART DEVELOPMENT

BY ROGER CORTES
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Washington, December 3.—Abolition of interference in international wireless activities, fullest utilization of available frequencies and careful avoidance of any hindrance to the further development of the art, are the fundamental conceptions of the new radio conventions and regulations just negotiated here.

The two first principles are closely related and were treated as such by the delegates of about 80 countries and territories who spent seven weeks in drawing up the treaty.

The chief problem confronting the solution of the interference problem was the allocation of wave lengths to the various radio services so as to segregate as far as possible separate activities into distinct frequency bands. These in their turn would be susceptible to regional agreements to avoid interference between stations involved in similar services.

The new allocation in its general lines is as follows: From 10 to 100 kilocycles reserved to long distance transoceanic service; from 100 to 500 kilocycles assigned to ship to shore and aircraft services; 500 to 1,500 kilocycles set aside for broadcasting; the remaining frequencies between 1,500 and 600 kilocycles apportioned into about 40 different bands divided into about five kinds of services including amateurs.

This distribution offers the advantage that with additional regulations also promulgated fixing both standard procedure for the maintenance of any given service and strict precedence for messages, communications should be free in the future from the frequent interruptions which were the rule up to now when any station had the right to begin transmission at any time on any wave length.

The convention furthermore includes provisions calling for strict surveillance that all stations in international service shall emit waves free from harmonics and that these stations be kept reasonably in step with the advancement of the science of radio. A further great reduction in ether disturbances is seen in the convention article barring any installation of sparks sets of over 300 watts after January 1, 1930, and the total abolition of these by January 1, 1940.

The general sense therefore of the convention and regulations is that henceforth all services be held within definite frequency bands and that their manner of communicating within these be so standardized as to allow no room for disturbances.

To this end the regulations already existing in the previous London convention of 1912 were further corrected and standardized, with all loopholes discovered since then carefully closed.

The intention not to cramp the development of radio is especially visible in the allocation of the short waves, namely of the frequencies whose use is still largely in the experimental stage. These frequencies have been evenly distributed among mobile, fixed and amateur services with a few very narrow bands for broadcasting. The allocation was left loose on purpose to allow commercial organizations and amateurs plenty of scope for experimental work.

The convention officially recognized the amateur and allows him certain specific rights, in addition to the exclusive use of certain frequencies. The chief of these is the right to engage in international communication with other amateurs provided the internal legislation of both countries allows this traffic, and provided the messages transmitted are of a private nature.

Special attention was directed to matters affecting safety of life at sea. The London provisions on this subject were maintained, with additional safeguards added regarding the absolute necessity of keeping the 500 kc. frequency always available for the dissemination of S O S calls. The convention also recommends the installation in ships of automatic distress signal receivers.

The new problem of distress signals from aircraft was also dealt with, in regulations similar to those in force for ships. Other new services contemplated by the allocation of special wave lengths and the promulgation of special regulations were radio compass, radio beacon, weather bulletin and general aircraft services.

The convention is destined to go into force January 1, 1929, for a period of five years. A further conference has been called for 1932 in Madrid at which the treaty will be brought up to date and the regulations further improved.

Violinist on Air.

WALTER EDELSTEIN.

New York—(AP)—Walter Edelstein's violin is a frequent attraction in programs broadcast over the Columbia network. His playing has been a feature of the Musical Album of Popular Classics.

New Radio Tube.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—A new tube, intended as a radio frequency and containing a fourth element designed to eliminate oscillation, has been announced. Engineers claim an enormous amplification factor for the new instrument.

RADIO-ING The Air Waves.

BY WILL SMITH.

This will be radio's greatest winter. Every listener understands the full significance of that prophecy, for winter is the time of best reception, when atmospherics are reduced to a minimum and signals from distant stations come through with vigor foreign to the summertime.

Due to the large number of stations operating on the congested broadcast span of wave lengths, distant reception during the past two winters has not been satisfactory, except in individual instances.

Now channels have been cleared, so that the heterodyning nuisance on most wave-lengths will be reduced to a remarkable degree, and it is only a question of a few more months when the radio commission will have advanced further in its comprehensive program to adjust the entire situation—something which everyone concedes is a monumental task.

"While we know that there is most demand for the reception of local stations with clarity and volume, we find that nearly everyone, now and then, seeks the thrill of hearing a good program from some far-away station. At least, that is the way old Dial Twister feels about the matter.

There is the keenest interest in coast to coast reception. Certainly, many more people than ever before will hear stations new to them and this constitutes a source of greater enthusiasm for radio.

It will be recalled that the radio commission in a recent statement called attention to the fact that DX was "the life blood of radio," constituting the romantic appeal. The phonograph brought music into the home, but radio possesses the miraculous faculty of bringing it in from a distance. That does have a "kick" in it.

Of course, our Stromberg-Carlson with its phonograph pick-up, which permits us to use a talking machine when we feel like it, is a decided advance over the old type radio confined to the ether alone.

With DX possible with more "punch" to it, it seems to us that there will be hardly a fan who will not be able to spread a good yarn of "what I heard last night" to his confreres in business and social life.

French "Tuners-In" Have Nightly Riddle

Paris, December 3.—(AP)—Every radio fan in Paris gets a chance to take the place of the speaker at a local transmitting station and share his glories for a few brief moments. To attain his ambition he has to be the first to ring up the transmitting station on the telephone and give the answer to a riddle. It is then his turn to proceed to the station next evening and from the speaker's stand ask all the listeners-in another.

OLD SPEAKING TRUMPET SERVES AS RADIO HORN

Onset, Mass., December 3.—(AP)—When the fire department of the little town of Onset tunes in on a program the firemen listen to a reproduction sent through the silver horn of an old-time speaking trumpet.

A quarter of a century ago, when every fire chief felt that he needed a trumpet for bellowing his commands the fire department won a fire drill competition and this particular trumpet.

Changing styles left it a handsome but useless trophy until Assistant Fire Chief Clayton Bishop obtained a radio-phonograph attachment, placed it on the small end of the horn and surprised the boys. The tone quality is said to be unexcelled.

NEW COMMISSIONER LIKED BY RADIO FANS

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Harold A. Lafount, new member of the federal radio commission from the far west, is characterized by radio men here as the "representative at large for the radio listeners of America."

HAROLD A. LAFOUNT.

Mr. Lafount, a veteran business man who says he has no particular ax to grind in his new position, has been a real radio enthusiast for seven years. As a listener he has kept pace with the development of broadcasting, having had in his home six types of receiving sets and a large assortment of accessories. Consequently he is regarded as possessing the "not too rabid" fan's viewpoint.

"The will of the people should be the chief determining factor in the regulation of broadcasting," Mr. Lafount says. "Facilities for hearing the programs they like best should be provided for them. I wonder if broadcasters don't forget the fact that the aggregate investment of listeners in receiving sets is far in excess of the sums expended by any of the transmitting stations."

Mr. Lafount disclaims any technical knowledge of radio, his only active interest being in reception of worth-while programs. He asserts he has no special policies to place before the commission, but will endeavor to help his colleagues solve the various problems of allocation.

SELECTIVITY DE LUXE

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—With the Monday silent night a thing of the past for this reception area, those listeners who build their own are beginning to concentrate more than ever on the receiver that will cut through the locals.

An increasing inquiry to dealers has been noted, and most of these have related to some of the new 10-tube hookups that have recently appeared. Even the manufactured receiver is receiving attention in this connection.

RADIO AMATEURS TO HELP SEARCH FOR MISSING MAN

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—When Commander George M. Dyott's expedition penetrates the Brazilian jungles this winter in search of Colonel P. H. Fawcett, British explorer missing since May, 1925, it will have the cooperation of 12,000 amateur radio operators of America.

The American Radio Relay League has promised Commander Dyott that its members will be on the watch for messages from his party. Most of these messages will be sent between midnight and 5 a. m., to be picked up by amateurs or experts of the Naval Research Laboratory at Bellevue, Md. The expedition will have a high frequency transmitter.

The expedition is being financed by a group, including friends of Colonel Fawcett, who are anxious to learn if he and the members of his party are still living. Dispatches from Lima, Peru, reported Roger Courteville, Brazilian engineer, as saying that he found Fawcett and his party on a farm 20 miles from a telegraph station. Commander Dyott discredits this report. He believes that Colonel Fawcett has been killed by Indians or is being held captive.

Commander Dyott plans to sail for Rio de Janeiro December 10, and expects to be in the jungles early in January. In addition to the search for Colonel Fawcett, the expedition will see for traces of an ancient civilization, the quest of which drew the Fawcett party into the wilderness.

"OLD HOME TOWN" SKETCHES FEATURE S-ROEBUCK HOUR

Featured in "Sketches From the Old Home Town," the Foundation Four will return on the Sears-Roebuck program on WSB Wednesday night during the 7 to 8 o'clock hour. This quartet, which has a wide radio following, will be assisted in three home town skits by the Sears-Roebuck instrumentalists, J. N. Dilleshaw's fiddlin' duo, and Paul and John, "the two disciples of harmony."

The ketches will bring back memories of the "Barber Shop quartet," "Ye Old Tyme Minstrels" and "An Old Tyme Straw Ride." Several novelties will be included in the broadcast. A half-hour dinner-concert will precede the hour's productions.

Paul and John, in vocal harmonies, and the Joe Wages old-time trio, of Athens, Ga., are booked as the Monday noon dinner-bell entertainers. Nell and Neva Long, vocal duo; "Billy" Lanham, blind tenor, and Lawrence Smith, tenor, are to appear on Wednesday noon. Friday noon's artists will be Harry J. Pomar and his Sears-Roebuck Players and Paul Crutchfield, radio tenor. The dinner-bell programs will be broadcast between 11:30 and 12:30.

Mrs. R. F. Whelchel will talk to home-makers at 10:05 daily, following the opening weather and cotton market news. Uncle Lewis and his Junior R. F. D. club feature is broadcast at 10:25 Saturday morning, followed by Lawrence Smith and Harry Cooper, popular entertainers.

Old Sets Still Good.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—A recent unofficial survey of the radio receiver situation has developed that many of the sets first to appear on the market are still performing. These include both home constructed machines and those built in factories.

'FRIENDLY' STATIONS MARKS FOR PICKARD

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Some so-called "friendly-to-farmer" broadcasting stations will receive scant consideration from the federal radio commisison in future allocation of wave lengths if the sentiment of Sam Pickard, agricultural member of the commission, prevails at the council table.

Mr. Pickard, who was formerly director of radio activities of the department of agriculture, declares he has little tolerance for the type of station that clutters up the air channels with sales talks to farmers on "the merits of certain brands of overalls, raspberries and mowing machines."

"I abhor the obvious attempts of a certain class of broadcasters to make the farmers their financial prey by petty attempts of service to them," Mr. Pickard said.

"After careful study of thousands of letters from rural citizens, it is my conclusion that entirely too many members of the broadcasting fraternity have only selfish interests at heart with little inclination and small facilities for contributing programs of exceptional service and entertainment merit.

"It is this class of broadcasters who are most persistent in their demands for favorable consideration by the commission, basing their claims upon service to agriculture. It is often members of this same group which farmers in letters to the commission blame for interference that renders their radio equipment next to useless. This group must stand aside and make way for stations qualified to contribute the greatest good to the rural audience."

FANS SEEKS LEGAL BAN ON MAN-MADE STATIC

Little Rock, Ark., December 3.—(AP)—A proposed ordinance here would declare a public nuisance any electrical equipment radiating waves detrimental to radio reception. The bill, twice read before council, has been approved by Mayor Charles E. Moyer, himself a radio enthusiast, and by the lighting and public utilities committee.

The bill provides that all equipment which "radiates electrical waves of such lengths as to distort radio reception between 7:00 and 11:00 p. m." must be removed or repaired within five days after complaint has been made to police, or the owner will be subject to a fine of $25 on first conviction and $50 on the second.

The complainant, under the bill, would be expected to supply officers with information as to location of the objectionable equipment. Opponents of the measure say difficulty might arise from efforts of "leak hunters" to invade a man's home in search of interference. They also argue enforcement would be impossible.

Mayor Moyer says he sees "no reason why the ordinance should not be passed."

STUDEBAKER ENDURANCE RECORDS ARE GIVEN PRAISE

SHOW SUPREMACY OF ENGINE TYPE USED, IS CLAIM

Yarbrough Pays High Tribute to Motors That Establish Amazing Records in Runs.

Supremacy of the automobile engine of medium crankshaft speeds was definitely established when three strictly stock Studebaker Commanders each shattered all world's records for endurance by traveling 25,000 miles in less than 25,000 minutes at the Atlantic City Speedway in official tests early in November."

This is the statement of J. E. Yarbrough, local Studebaker dealer, who discussed the Commander's sweeping victories yesterday.

"There are many conspicuous features of the record-breaking performances of the Commander," said Mr. Yarbrough. "In the first place no automobile, in fact, no man-made machine, has ever gone so far, so fast before. Every official stock car record for endurance and speed, regardless of price or power, is now held by the Commander. That an automobile could maintain an average speed of 65.31 miles an hour for 25,000 consecutive miles, stops for oil, gas, water and change of drivers included, is the greatest automotive achievement of history.

"The Commanders that have made these official records were powered with the Studebaker Big Six engine. This power plant is technically known as a medium-speed engine. Many other manufacturers use high-speed motors. At a speed of 60 miles an hour, the Commander crankshaft turns 2,200 times a minute. At 60 miles an hour, the high speed engine has a crankshaft speed ranging up to 3,600 revolutions per minute.

"In the difference in engine speed lies the supremacy of the Commander. Let us assume that the average competitive engine has a crankshaft speed of 1,000 revolutions per minute more than that of the Commander. It is plain to be seen that the extra 1,000 revolutions per minute will definitely shorten the life of the motor.

"Every single working part of the high speed motor has to do about one-third more work than the same part in the Commander motor does. The crankshaft has to travel farther and faster. Naturally, it must wear out sooner. Valves open and close with greater rapidity. Tappets, timing gears, pistons, in fact, every vital part of the high speed motor is subjected to greater strains and greater wear. Obviously, the Commander motor, while capable of delivering sensational speed to the car itself, can last longer, stand up better and go farther with less wear and fewer repairs."

Nash Xmas Week To Be Observed Throughout U. S.

Announcement is made that, in keeping with the Christmas spirit, Nash showrooms here and throughout the country have been attractively and appropriately decorated for a country-wide "Give a Nash for Christmas" week.

Amid Yuletide surroundings "open house" will be maintained by Nash dealers during this period from December 4 to 11 inclusive. The public is invited to visit the showrooms and to inspect at leisure the various models in the Nash line of cars, ranging in price from $865 to $1,990 f. o. b. factory.

There are 24 models in the three series of Nash cars, thus affording the Christmas buyer an opportunity to select just the car in keeping with his purse that would "best surprise the family."

It is of further interest that special easy terms for these Christmas purchases have been announced.

The new Nash models on display are distinguished by features and appointments which make them by far the greatest values ever offered by the Nash Motors company. Every car in the line is a 7-bearing crankshaft six; all have 2-way 4-wheel brakes, exceptional steering ease, fast pick-up and remarkable riding comfort contributed by new secret process alloy steel springs.

The remarkable performance of these cars is matched by their beauty. Skillful selection of color combined with the finest quality upholstering and appointments gives each model the beauty and luxury of custom craftsmanship.

These features, it is pointed out, make every Nash model eminently suitable as a gift which will provide lasting enjoyment for the entire family.

Among the 24 models there is a car for every imaginable purpose. The body styles range from two and four-passenger roadsters and cabriolets to the big, luxurious Ambassador, leader of the Nash line. Many who have contemplated the purchase of a second car as a Christmas gift for family use have found in the smaller Nash models of limited pasenger capacity a car which is ideal for this purpose, because of the performance and comfort which they offer at low prices.

The local Nash showroom will be open evenings until Christmas, so that everyone in this locality will have an opportunity to thoroughly examine the Nash models for 1928.

Boston, December 3.—(AP)—The tropical Radio Telegraph company received a radio message today from its station a tPuerto Barrios, Guatemala, reporting a "very pronounced earth tremor at 2:12 this morning, lasting there seconds." No further details were given.

Prosperity of Company Reported by Seiberling

Akron, O., December 3.—(Special.) F. A. Seiberling, president of the Seiberling Rubber company, has issued the sixth annual report of his company, reported the declaration by the directors of an initial dividend of $1 per share on the common stock and predicted an advance in tire prices "in the near future."

This annual report is for a period of only 10 months as the fiscal year was changed at the last stockholders' meeting to run from November 1 to October 31.

Net sales for the 10 months amounted to $12,367,114.04, and net operating profit before charges for depreciation and federal taxes was $1,356,707.90. After all allowances and payment of dividends on preferred stock the net amount passed to surplus was $970,428.40, making a total surplus applicable to the common stock of $2,861,671.30. The 10 months' addition to surplus compares with $359,117.01 added in the previous fiscal year.

The dividend of $1 per share on the common stock is payable December 15 to stockholders of record November 28. According to the balance sheet issued for October 31, there are outstanding 9,211 shares of 8 per cent preferred and 218,857 shares of common stock of no par value.

"While there was an increase in unit sales of substantially 15 per cent as against the same period a year ago," Mr. Seiberling reports, "the dollar value of sales for the two periods was approximately the same, due to price reductions during the last 10 months.

"Tire prices today are at their lowest level, but will advance in the near future. The limited buying of the Ford Motor company during 1927 affected tire production directly. The re-entry of Ford with his new car should stimulate the entire automobile industry and result in a substantial increase during 1928 in tire sales, both for original equipment and for replacement.

"The spectacular rise in crude rubber prices during the past week is suggestive and the heavy purchasing reported from our 5,000 Seiberling dealers on a trade acceptance basis indicated that the retail tire trade anticipates an upward trend in prices. What is happenning is that the British restriction act, commonly known as the Stevenson act, is functioning to force crude rubber prices to a still higher level. The bootlegging of crude rubber through irregular channels of sale is being controlled and the British restriction act is thus increasingly efficient."

New Fords Are Products Of Giant Creative Labor

Detroit, December 2.—(Special.)—Six months ago Henry Ford announced the coming production of "a new Ford car, superior in design and performance to any now available in the low-priced, light-car field." Last week the new car was shown for the first time outside the Ford organization, to a group of newspapermen and correspondents, at the Dearborn laboratories of the Ford Motor company.

What the correspondents saw was an automobile as new as the forecasts had represented it to be. They saw bodies with beauty of line and color, and with every accessory that has come to be associated with cars of a much higher price class. They saw performance that would compare favorably with almost any automobile of the day—speed, pick-up, flexibility, power. What they did not see, however, was the six months of preparation back of that car, which in magnitude and accomplishment is unique in world industry.

When Mr. Ford announced to the public that he was to introduce a new car he had not only conceived this car, but it was already well on the way to materialization. In the years that the Model T had been produced many inventions, ideas, improvements had presented themselves which did not fit into the scheme of the model T. Many of these things were retained, against the day when new ideas of automotive efficiency would pave the way for a new car. The formal announcement, last May, was principally significant because it marked the end of production of the model T as a complete unit.

Great Creative Task.

Cessation of production of the model T, did, however, turn the full force of the vast organization of the Ford company to the problem of creating and producing a new car, with the exception of that part of the facilities necessary for the production of model T replacement parts. This meant opportunity for the reconstruction of not one plant, but many. Thirty-three assembly plants in the United States, the Ford Motor company, of Canada, and twelve plants in foreign countries had to be considered. A greater problem still, the fountain-head of the parts to feed the branch plants had to be rebuilt almost from the ground—the great Ford industries at Highland Park, at Fordson, and along the River Rouge.

Impressive figures almost without end could be quoted to illustrate the magnitude of this task. There have been estimates that the job cost as high as $250,000,000 to accomplish. This figure is too high—how much so, Ford officials will not say. But it was a staggering total of millions, unquestionably.

Strange as it may seem, however, Henry Ford did not figure in terms of millions. He was building a new car—a car which would be as much of an improvement of its day, as the model T was back in 1908. Engineers took certain basic principles and built around them a new car. When it was completed it was very close to the car that Mr. Ford had visualized. It was then that Mr. Ford gave voice to a statement that has been frequently quoted since: "I will represent the public."

New Tooling Process.

Even his engineers did not sense the full significance of this simple statement at the time. The plants were being re-tooled. Re-tooling an automobile plant designed to produce thousands of automobiles in a day is no simple matter. Giant machines weighing many tons and costing thousands of dollars had to be designed and built. Countless thousands of smaller tools and precision instruments had to be manufactured. Orders were placed with machinery manufacturers for many of these machines. Others were built in the Ford plants. But Mr. Ford was "representing the public." A small change meant the reconstruction of great machines which required four months to build. But if this change meant a slightly greater gasoline mileage, or a trifle more of acceleration in traffic the machines were rebuilt. And so the story went. Mr. Ford stated again and again that he was not building a model to meet a specific date or a predetermined price. His aim was fixed on an automobile that would be as revolutionary in 1927 as the Model T was in 1908.

These are some of the reasons, in the opinion of members of the Ford organization, why cost figures of the transition from the Model T to the Model A mean little. In the final analysis, they say, most of this expense will be absorbed in greater production and in higher plant efficiency. The maximum production in the days of the Model T was 8,400 per day. The reconstructed Ford industries will have a capacity even greater than that. This will not be reached for some time, but the capacity is there, to be approached as market demands indicate.

Mr. Ford has stated that the coal and iron mines, the glass plant and other "feeder" industries of the Ford Motor company exact no profit—that the only source of profit is the Ford car. But these "feeder" industries have been enlarged and strengthened during the period of transition.

The assembly line at the Fordson plant today is creeping slowly, as compared with the normal production, but each day sees increasing speed. Back of that assembly line, in the units where the parts are made which feed the assembly, a more impressive idea of what has taken place in the Ford industries may be had.

Limits Are Narrow.

Working limits which would do credit to some of the finest automobiles of today are being imposed in many departments. Variations of more than one ten-thousandths of an inch are not permitted in many parts. The speed that characterized production of the Model T is being attained, but it is speed with almost uncanny accuracy. Henry Ford is demonstrating that his mass production methods can be applied to the manufacture of any type of car, without sacrificing the mechanical accuracy which is essential to maximum performance of the finished automobile.

He is demonstrating something else, at which engineers are marveling—he is utilizing methods which had been pronounced impractical. Electrical welding of essential parts, such as the rear-end assembly, is being employed, with a consequent strengthening of the car, and elimination of sources of noise and trouble. Spun steel forgings are being used in a way that is new to the automotive industry. New features of four-cylinder motor design have resulted in greater power and flexibility than had been anticipated. And so the story goes—a story of new methods, revolutionary principles of manufacture, of design.

This is some of the background of the new Ford car which is to be encountered by those who dig into the story of the happenings of the last six months. It is a story which will be many more months in unfolding, as the American and foreign assembly plants swing into line for the production of complete cars.

DEPUTY BADGES SOLD FOR $750, SENATOR CHARGES

Los Angeles, December 3.—(AP)—Charges that certain motion picture executives, prize fight promoters and others in southern California had paid as high as $750 each for diamond studded badges of state deputy fire marshals, enabling them to speed and break other traffic regulations at will were under investigation here today by a state legislative committee.

State Senator H. A. Williams, who filed the charges, declared the deputy mahshals "never did any fire fighting" and were a menace to public safety.

A survey of automobile casualties in California for the first ten months of 1927 showed 1,110 fatalities and 3,533 serious injuries.

Oakland in Announcement Of Rice's Gridiron Picks

First announcement of the all-American football team, the nation's mythical eleven of leading 1927 gridiron stars, came appropriately enough through courtesy of the builders of the All-American automobile, the Oakland Motor Car company.

Grantland Rice, who succeeded the late Walter Camp as dean of American sport writers, announced his all-American football selections on Friday, December 2, at 7:15 p. m. eastern standard time, during a special 15-minute "All-American" radio program over the 29 stations of the General Motors corporation "hook up," the largest group of sending stations ever assembled for broadcasting regular programs. The Oakland Motor Car company, one of the General Motors "family," was "host" during the brief but important all-American announcement program, which included also a medley of American college songs. A majority of the 4,000 Oakland-Pointiac dealers throughout the country tuned in on the program and held open house with a general invitation to the public in general and football fans in particular.

Printed announcements of Grantland Rice's all-American team will appear in Collier's Weekly of the following week and in the newspapers of December 4.

The Oakland Motor Car company's first regular turn as "host" during the General Motors weekly 'family party" will come on Decemberd 5 between 9:30 p. m., and 10:30 p. m., eastern standard time. This program will be in the nature of a celebration over Oakland's first formal appearance on the air and of its "radio scoop" of December 2 in being the first to announce Mr. Rice's all-American selections. The public also is invited to listen in on the December 5 hour of entertainment at the Oakland Pontiac showrooms.

The weekly December 5 program may be picked up by tuning in on any of the following 29 stations in the General Motors "hook-up."

Buick Dealer Uses Plane To Reach Convention Early

Flint, Mich., December 3.—(Special.)—Rejecting as too slow the special train which brought his fellow-dealers from the Oklahoma City Buick branch territory to Flint recently, William A. Burke, Buick dealer of Okmulgee, Okla., hopped off in his fast biplane and beat the crowd here.

Burke has been a flier for about 12 years. He makes constant use of his plane in his business as a Buick dealer. The trip to Flint was made in two stages, a friend accompanying Burke to Chicago, from which point Burke came on alone.

After touring the Buick factory with S. S. Lindsey, Oklahoma City Buick branch manager, and other Oklahoma territory dealers, Burke flew to the General Motors proving ground near Milford, where the visitors spent a whole day inspecting the facilities of that institution. He then departed for home via air, with a stop-over in Detroit.

Burke's plane is a Travel Air, equipped with Wright whirlwind motor. It is capable, Burke said, of 160 miles an hour. Even without pushing it to capacity, the 1,200-mile round trip to Flint was accomplished in a fraction of the time required on the ground, enabling Burke to reach home and resume business a full day ahead of his companions.

Lack of funds has compelled Germany to give up completion of its housing program.

ROOF TILING FEATURES BUILDING AT CONSTITUTION'S HOME

Haynes Manor Dwelling Shows Exterior Progress

Workmen Lay Roof and Start Brick Veneering; Novel Improvements Added to Second Demonstration House in Important Construction Phases.

BY ERNEST RUBIN.

Devoting their labor during the past week to exterior portions of the model demonstration house being sponsored by The Constitution in the beautiful Haynes Manor subdivision, the skilled group of workmen from the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, well-known builders in charge of construction, had accomplished, before the sabbath called a brief halt for rest, practically all the roof tiling and a large portion of the brick veneering.

When these two important phases at the building are completed visitors to the site will behold for the first time a practical view of the model home as it will appear from the outside when ready to be opened to the Atlanta public for inspection.

The tiled roof is a feature destined to gain the attention of prospective home owners and home builders in Atlanta and in sections throughout the entire nation. A new products, conceived in the minds of builders whose works have lasted for centuries, made up of the oldest of materials, and built by a southern manufacturer possessing skill and experience that have brought national recognition in the building trades, will be introduced to the public through the tiling of the Haynes Manor home. The quality of this material will typify the undertaking in which The Constitution is cooperating with the Home Owners' institution in a national campaign for encouraging better building and demonstrating to the home-owning public the economy of building from nationally-known products.

Double Tile Roof.

When you call by to see the progress being made at the model home construction scene in Haynes Manor you will be struck by the beauty of the roof, which bids fair to be the most outstanding achievement of its kind in Atlanta. You will note how the workmen have adapted the old-fashioned method of laying wooden shingles in order to cover the roof with tile two layers deep. Pick up from the ground one of the tiles. It measures 6 by 12 inches, but the roof shows an exposed surface of only six inches square for each tile. A second view of the roof as you come close to the model home will reveal that this effect has been accomplished by overlapping the tiles nine inches with what is known as a three-inch headlap, making two layers of tile and three thicknesses at the head of the tiles. A range of color shades varying from dull red through rustic brown to a gunmetal produced over the assembled roof gives a harmonious blending effect of marked beauty.

Examine the tile you have in your hand again. It is a southern product, made from the clay of Georgia and Tennessee by B. Mifflin Hood Brick company. A workman nearby, or better yet, an official of the company who may be on the grounds to inspect the finishing touches of the tiling work, will tell you the interesting story of this tile. He will tell you The Constitution model demonstration home is the third building on which tile of this character has been used since Oglethorpe set foot on Georgia soil. Its production has resulted from a tour of the world by the president of the Hood Brick company combined with ceramic research on the part of skilled faculty of the Georgia Tech ceramic engineering department and the staff of the Hood company.

Old English Effect.

"The name of these tile is Yorkshire Shingle, and they reproduce the old effect of shingle tile of old York, England," you will be told. "The result is accomplished by blending the best southern clays and fire-flashing them with long flame coal so as to get a weathered, aged, brown effect. Five years ago there was not a single roofing tile plant in the entire south and we were dependent upon the north entirely for roofing tile. There became such a shortage of roofing tile during the Florida boom that the Hood Brick company quickly changed five plants to roofing tile and now is shipping this product to 24 states.

"The Constitution model home will have the first installation of Yorkshire tile in Atlanta. This roof will be a faithful reproduction of old England and will improve with age. We know of roofing tile jobs that were constructed back in pagan times before the birth of Christ that are still rendering service and we know of no material that has so long a life and so much beauty as burned clay roofing tiles. Now that there are five roofing tile plants in our section of the country the average man can live under a tile roof, which was formerly the privilege of only the wealthy, in fact, in southern Europe the poor as well as the rich, live under tile roofs because they have figured out that it is the cheapest of all roofing material because of its long life and all Europe is wedded to the natural.

"We talked with the architects of the various countries and asked them why so much roofing tile was used in their country. In Japan it was because it was fire resisting, in China because of its long life, in Spain because it was the coolest permanent roof, in Italy it was precedence because the Romans did it, in Germany it was because they felt not for themselves only but for their children's children's children, in France it was because it expressed more ideally art, style and beauty, in Scandinavia it was because it gave the best shelter, in central and southern England because it was the nearest available good, natural material and when treated artistically gave the greatest amount of character."

BY L. PORTER MOORE
President, Home Owners Institute, Inc.

The English exterior design of this attractive small home is a forthright product of simple arrangement, carefully thought out to lighten housekeeping tasks. The designer is Oscar T. Lang, A. I. A., of Minneapolis, and the plan is designated No. 286-S. The cost of construction in the New York district is estimated by Arthur Bates Lincoln, consulting architect of Home Owners Institute, at between $11,000 and $12,000, and financial arrangements on this home would probably be very liberal, as its good constructional features and popular style would incline mortgage officials in favor of a substantial loan. The space content is estimated at 21,500 cubic feet.

The living and dining room arrangements are particularly notable in that each supplements the other in apparent size. The wide wood-burning fireplace is within view from the dining room table and the wide doorway brings both rooms into practically one unit, a convenient feature when entertaining.

Adapted to Built-In Items.

Design adapts the home well to the built-in features which increase the livability of the home. The numeral 1 on the first floor plan indicates the clothes chute, which might be converted into a built-in incinerator; 2 is the automatic electric refrigerator in the kitchen; 3 the wall unit for the automatic heat regulator; 4 is the concrete hearth for the fireplace.

A large clothes closet which might be converted into a convenient first floor lavatory is indicated at 5; 6 is the cedar-lined closet in which may be stored, safe against moths, clothing and other things which may be out of use in certain seasons.

The master bedroom contains, at 7, an ingenious combination of two mirror doors on the closets opening so as to face each other, and forming, with one mirror affixed to the wall, a triple arrangement for dressing. The chimney of the house runs up along the outside wall of this bedroom, and a fireplace might be easily installed here.

The home is a particularly good example of the convenience and comfort of the modern home set against a background of authentic period architectural style.

The outline of specifications recommended by Home Owners' institute to enhance and make enduring the livability of this attractive home is as follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be poured concrete or concrete block made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with waterproofing compound. Exterior walls of stucco, as shown on plans; chimney of common brick; all flues lined. Fireplace of selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator installed in chimney with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. White pine for exterior millwork and interior trim; oak floors; steel bridging for floor joists. Interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required in detailed specifications.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all finishing hardware for doors and windows, for closets and casework. The contractor will furnish a cofrect list of hardware and is to put it on in a careful, workmanlike manner. All hardware on exterior openings to be of brass or bronze.

Stucco Work—Where shown on plans walls shall be finished with three coats of Portland cement stucco. Finish coat colored and textured as directed.

Casement Windows—Copper steel casement windows recommended.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or even wood lath. We suggest you obtain alternate bids on metal lath and wood lath. Insulating lumber or plasterboard may be used if desired by owner.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipes, valleys and flashing to be sixteen-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of asphalt, slate-surfaced, copperclad or asbestos shingles, to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion, with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electric wiring from meter to all outlets, including all panel boards, junction boxes and all other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters.

Plumbing—A complete system and fixtures ready to use shall be provided, as shown on plans and in accordance with local regulations. Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal-fired hot water heater. If sewer connections are not available, use of reinforced concrete septic tank is recommended.

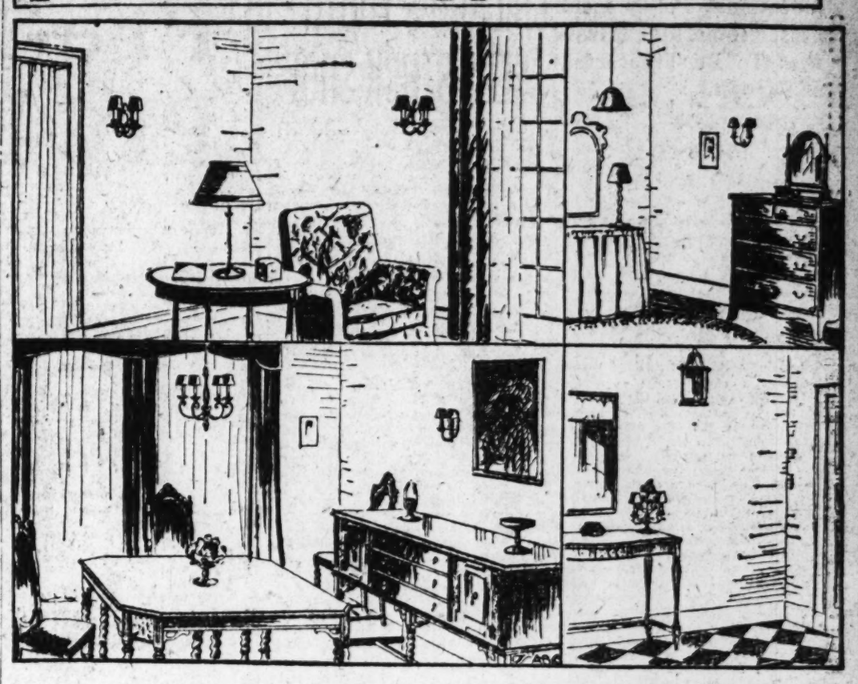
Tile Work—Tile floor and wainscot in bathroom, with built-in china accessories.

Heating—Steam, hot air or hot water boiler, coal, oil or gas fired.

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred), used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

FURNISHING THE HOME ∴ MARIAN MOORE



LIGHTING AND COMMON SENSE

Some people seem to think tht correct methods of lighting the home are dictated by some secret order of decorators, or by arbitrary rules handed down from no one knows whom. Not so; this is just another phase of interior decoration in which suitability is the governing factor. With suitability as the basic consideration, the problem is immensely simplified. In fact the whole mode of procedure, including the proper equipment, fixtures and the placement of fixtures, switches, outlets, etc., can be determined upon by constant reference to two common-sense principles:

1. There shall be no glare—no light shining into the eyes of the occupants of the room. An unshaded light is an offense against comfort and, therefore, against good taste.

2. There shall be a flood of light on the work in hand. This calls for portable lamps, properly shaded and conveniently placed.

These two common-sense principles clearly indicate that in every room in the house the lights should be placed to facilitate the customary activities carried on therein.

Out of these two principles let me draw a few practical suggestions which apply to all rooms.

1. All side lights should be shaded. Unshaded lights not only create discomfort, due to glare, but they are inartistic because they produce harsh outlines, strong shadows on the walls—no twilighty effects in corners and under tables—no repose, no poetry, no beauty. All lights, therefore, should be shaded from the eyes by either a cap-shade or a shield. Faddy frivolities, such as cut glass bead shades, which deflect the light in all directions, slightly tinted glass shields and imitations of old-time colonial wall fixtures, with only a glass chimney to take place of a proper shade, are definitely ruled out by these common-sense considerations of comfort and beauty.

2. The proper height for wall fixtures is about 5 feet 6 inches from the floor, except, of course, when placed above the mantel.

3. Do not place wall fixtures in the middle of a nice wide wall section; you will need the center space for wall decorations above a furniture group; the wisest place generally for fixtures is about 12 inches from door and window openings.

4. Insist on many baseboard outlets; have twice as many as you think you may need, and in the course of time you will find that you have just enough.

5. Place a control switch on the more convenient side of the door through which each room is usually entered, but let each fixture have an individual switch as well.

Now let us study the different light requirements of each room as indicated by common sense or suitability:

Hall—A center light of the lantern type is usually sufficient for the average sized entrance. A certain quaintness of design is permissible, but no freakishness. Old-fashioned wrought iron lanterns are lovely in Old English or English cottage homes, brass and light metal lanterns in colonial halls, or in halls in modest homes, but the light should never be too white or too brilliant; an impression of calm, order, charm and reticence should greet the visitor, and this means: subdued lights. If there is a mirror, then side-fixtures, torcheres, candlesticks or candelabra should be placed on each side of it.

Living Room—There should be shaded side fixtures (either single or twin lights) for general illumination, plus a lamp of the floor or table type for each chair group. These lamps should be proportioned to the size of the group to which they belong; they should be just tall enough and the shade exactly shaped to throw the light where it is needed, and that is not in the eyes of the occupant of the chair.

Ceiling lights in rooms of average height are anathema, for they cannot readily be shaded to protect the eyes. There should be extra outlets to accommodate new lamps or permit occasional changes in the furniture arrangement; in the meantime these outlets will come in handy to conect the vacuum cleaner, the percolator, the radio or the chafing-dish without disturbing any of the lamps.

Dining Room—A cluster of upstanding candles is hung in the center of the room above the table; these should be shaded. If the room is large enough to warrant it, there will be side lights as well, shielded, and placed symmetrically on opposite sides of the room. A pair of electric candelabra on the buffet is sometimes preferred. When candles are used on the table, any or all of the electric lights may be dispensed with.

Bedroom—People must see to dress, and most folks like to read in bed; Strickland Gillilan says, you remember:

"Heaven is a bed
With a light overhead
And an uncut magazine!"

Therefore the dressing table and the bed must receive special attention. There may be twin wall lights on each side of the mirror, or a pair of tall boudoir lamps supplemented with a drop-light or the drop-light alone; the boudoir lamps must be tall enough, else the light strikes the face from below and throws unnatural shadows; the shades should be just resting on the globes, so that they can be removed instantly. The bedside lamps, too, must be tall enough for reading; most models are too low. In fairly large rooms, and in guest rooms, there is often an easy chair with a small floor lamp, or a small writing desk with its own little desk lamp. Don't forget the light in the clothes closet.

Bathroom—A light in the center, one on each side of the mirror; and be sure to have a switch in the most natural place, by the door, so that people who are not familiar with the house may find it easily. Provide outlets for curling-iron, radiant heater, and so forth.

Kitchen—The range, the sink, the inside of the icebox, the work table, the kitchen cabinet and the inside of all cupboards should receive plenty of light. This does not necessarily mean one light for each of these points, but plan your lighting scheme so that there are no dark corners. Individual switches will make for economy. Moreover, have enough separate plugs for your electric appliances: flat iron, toaster, egg-beater, etc. You may want to use several of them at one time and will be glad of the additional outlets.

Stairs—The hall light is seldom sufficient for the whole stairway. Provide other rosettes or wall fixtures where needed, with a double control switch so the lights may be turned on and off from the top and bottom of the stairs.

Question: My dining room walls are hung with a floral paper, the background of which is a light tan. This room opens into the hall and the French doors which separate the two rooms are always open. As the hall is very small, would it be all right to paint it like the background of the dining-room wallpaper?

Answer: Yes. Or, if the hall is rather dark the walls might well be painted in a slightly lighter tint of tan—cream, perhaps.

Batteries of Ample Size Necessary to Home Pl

When installing a self-contained electric plant for the home in a community without service, it is of the utmost importance to see that the batteries are of adequate capacity, if the plant is of the non-automatic type.

If the batteries are too small, the excessive work they are called upon to perform will very quickly wear them out, but batteries of adequate or more than adequate capacity will remain in service indefinitely. In addition, a plant of good size will permit the addition of electrical facilities to enhance the convenience of the home.

Now Using Twice as Many Electric Home Appliances

A report compiled by the General Federation of Women's clubs through "Electrical Merchandising," shows that 3,189,777 families out of 5,013,891 reporting use electric irons; 1,175,612 out of 5,110,844 reporting use washing machines, and 1,848,537 out of 5,340,670 use electric vacuum cleaners.

The survey indicates that the average sale of electric appliances per wired home has increased from $10.88 in September of 1925 to $22.08 in the period just completed.

Gymnasium in Doorway.

The ordinary doorway will accommodate athletic apparatus that will delight the heart of any boy, while usually there is some door in the home high enough so that a man can swing on a trapeze placed there. Trapeze and flying rings can be made interchangeable and quickly unhooked when not in use. Care should be taken to see that the fastenings are anchored solidly into strong woodwork.

Believers in Jacksonville Believe in

BRICK & TILE construction

BRICK AND TILE—enduring burned clay products—lead all other building materials in Jacksonville! 71.893% of the permits for new buildings in the Florida metropolis, during July, August and September, 1927, were for brick and tile construction. Figures include all buildings costing $5,000 or more:

Solid Brick	16	Buildings	13.228%
Brick Veneer	40	"	33.057
Hollow Tile	4	"	3.307
Brick and Tile	12	"	9.921
Tile-Stucco	11	"	9.064
Concrete Block	6	"	4.959
Frame	28	"	23.148
Brick-Stucco	1	"	.826
Stone and Brick	3	"	2.480
	121	Buildings	100.000%

Were this percentage to be based on the value of the buildings, rather than on the number of permits, brick and tile would have an even greater lead over other forms of construction. If you contemplate building soon, by all means mail the coupon below.

Baptists Meet Tuesday In Augusta; May Adopt Schools Control Plan

Educational Policy Held Most Important Business To Be Transacted at Session.

Augusta, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—For the first time in its history of 105 years, the Georgia Baptist convention, meeting here December 6 to 8, will be asked to adopt a policy for educational institutions of the convention.

The tentative report, prepared by the committee on educational policy, will set forth the attitude of the convention toward schools it owns, or with which it is affiliated.

The convention owns and controls the following colleges and secondary schools: Mercer university, Bessie Tift colege, Norman Park institute, Brewton-Parker institute and Locust Grove institute.

The following institutions "have been, or are now," the tentative report says, "affiliated with the convention: Shorter college, Piedmont institute, Mary P. Willingham school and Chattahoochee High school."

Policy Outlined.

The tentative policy outlined for the institutions owned by the convention would say that the convention "expects the trustees of its schools in the discharge of their trust to obey the instructions of the convention as they may be given from time to time; to require of those they elect to the faculty of administration and instruction that they be exemplary in their personal conduct and loyal to the ideals and practices of Georgia Baptists; to promote sound educational policies; to conduct the business affairs of the schools upon safe and honorable terms, and to cultivate a sympathetic understanding of their work in the light of the convention's obligations to other interests and causes."

The tentative policy plan also would require regular audits of the books of institutions; would hold the trustees personally responsible for obligations for buildings or equipment created without the consent and approval of the convention, "unless the funds for the discharge of the same are in hand."

Commenting upon the policy plan, the Christian Index, the weekly publication of the state Baptist convention, says:

"Elsewhere will be found the tentative report of the commission on educational policy. This commission was appointed last year at Valdosta to study the question of an educational policy for the Georgia Baptist convention.

"The convention is now 105 years old, and should, by this time, have sufficient experience to set up a policy for the future with regard to its educational institutions. It is passing strange that such action was not taken at the time the convention went into the school buiness in 1833, and certainly it is interesting to reflect that with the passing of the years the convention did not see the practical wisdom of setting up certain objectives for its educational work and placing certain limitations upon the financial policies of the institutions. It is not likley," the Christian Index continues, "that there would ever have been so many institutions organized, nor would there have been so many casualties."

The Christian Index urges that the report of the commission on educational policy have "right of way so that there may be a full discussion and that all may understand its meaning before the vote is taken. . . . For our part," the publication continues, "we would say that it seems to indicate the lines along which we may safely and constructively travel in our effort to provide education that is distinctly Christian. The report saves us from future embarrassment with reference to finances. The convention will be in position to know right where every institution is in its financial obligations. The report also clearly sets up the proposition that if the convention is going to own and control the schools it must recognize its responsibility to support these institutions. This is sound reasoning, and the convention is wise to get clearly before our people this fundamental principle of ownership and support."

The first session of the convention is to be held Tuesday evening, December 6. A tentative program calls for enrollment and organization; an address by John D. Mell, Athens, president of the 1926 convention; recognition of denominational representatives and visitors; distribution of reports; convention sermon, Rev. Leon M. Latimer, Griffin. Addresses by Arch C. Cree, Atlanta, executive secretary and committee reports are scheduled for the third day of the convention, December 8.

NORTH CAROLINA NEGRO TEACHER STANDARD HIGH

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—North Carolina stands high among the southern states in the preparation and training of negro teachers, the interior department reported today following an inquiry in the state by Dr. Ben W. Frazier, teacher-training specialist of the department.

Expenditure for education of both white and colored students in the state climbed from $2.87 in 1901 to $39.62 in 1926 for each student, and now there are 5,309 colored teachers in rural and city schools teaching 169,212 students, a great increase, the report said. In 1870 there were only 490 colored teachers, most of whom taught in the country districts. It was estimated that in 1950 the schools for colored students will need 6,701 teachers.

Former Wife of Oil Millionaire Accused Apartment Burglar

Hollywood, Calif., December 3.—(AP) Mrs. Mattie McCauliffe, identified as the former wife of a millionaire oil operator, was held in jail here today with her husband, McLaurine G. McCauliffe, in connection with the investigation of apartment robberies in which loot valued at upwards of $300,000 was taken.

The couple was arrested last night on charges of suspicion of burglary when police identified them as the man and woman who inspected apartments here recently shortly before the places were robbed.

Police said the woman formerly was the wife of August P. Minchew, wealthy western oil operator. She was said to have left a luxurious home in Denver when she met McCauliffe.

"Any woman who tries to make a crook go straight is just a fool," she told police.

McCauliffe insisted he was innocent.

CHICAGO'S YOUTH SEES STOCK SHOW

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—The shrill voices of thousands of rollicking Chicago school children, many of whom had never seen a live cow, sheep or pig before, echoed about the tanbark arena of the international livestock exposition as it closed its twenty-eighth annual exhibition today.

Awestruck at the princely animals of North American farms and agricultural colleges, the city children listened eagerly as their guides explained why this and that animal was better than others.

Thousands of North American farmers, whose exhibits in grain and livestock made this year's exposition the greatest success in history, were homeward bound tonight with new glories and bigger bank accounts. Their exhibits were shown to a record attendance, more than 350,000 people swinging through the exposition's turnstiles.

The "tall corn state" of Iowa appended another sobriquet—the livestock state—when its farmers outclassed all other states and Canada in animal husbandry competition. The Hawkeyes went home with 36 championships and 109 blue ribbons. Montana farmers scored the best in the grain and hay competition for championship honors, while Canada won the most ribbons.

Widow of Coli Says Division Of Fund Unfair

Marseilles, December 3.—(AP)—American generosity appears to have failed to bring the solace intended to the widow of Captain Francis Coli, companion of Charles Nungesser in an ill-fated attempt to cross the Atlantic by air last May.

Mme. Coli is deeply dissatisfied with the apportionment of the Coli family share of the fund subscribed in America for the Nungesser-Coli families. The apportionment was completed recently and Mme. Coli is starting an active campaign of protest.

She has written a long and bitter letter to Premier Poincare, expressing the hope that he will give consideration to the situation in which she has been placed. She desires that the French government compensate in some form for what she alleges to be injustice on the part of the committee handling the fund.

The committee allotted 593,000 francs (roughly $23,720) to Coli's mother and father and 97,000 francs (roughly $3,880) each to the widow and three children, which represents a monthly income of $20 apiece, Mme. Coli points out.

Another thing which rankles the widow is the French law governing inheritances. By this at the death of Coli's father and mother, what is left of the 593,000 francs must be divided into two equal portions, one going to Coli's brother, who, she says, doesn't need it, the other being divided again among three daughters.

Mme. Coli says that if Coli were called upon again to risk his life it certainly would not be for his brother.

Altogether she claims that the object of the subscribers—to try to remedy the injustice of fate by making easier the lot of their bereaved families—has hardly been attained in the apportionment. This has resulted, she says, from the fact that the fliers' mothers were consistently kept in the foreground, while she, the widow, and her children were kept in the background. She asks if their American benefactors ever knew of the existence of herself and her children.

ATLANTA ARTIST TO HAVE PAINTINGS ON DISPLAY HERE

The exhibition may be viewed by the public on Sunday and Wednesday afternoons and is open to members of the Atlanta Art association during the regular museum hours. The subjects of the artist's work were gathered during an extended sketching trip thrdough France, Spain and Morocco. This is the second individual exhibition of Mrs. Oliver's work, though the pieces to be displayed have not been previously shown.

ATLANTA YOUTH HEADS GEORGIA LITERARY GROUP

Athens, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—Hoke S. Wofford, of Atlanta, has been elected president of the Demosthenian Literary society of the University of Georgia. Other officers chosen were Thomas F. St. John, Athens, vice president, and Ike K. Hay, Covington, critic. Wofford is senior cheer leader. He succeeds Arthur M. Gignilliat, Pineora, whose term expired.

SAILOR'S ACQUITTAL BY FRANCE UPHELD

Pensacola, Fla., December 3.—(AP)—When the steamship West Nohmo reached port from Axim, West Africa, today the captain asked the United States district attorney's office to investigate the killing of a member of the crew, an American citizen, by a Greek sailor, who is said to possess naturalization papers, the slaying having taken place on French soil in West Africa.

The sailor who took the life of his companion claims that he acted in self-defense. This claim was sustained by the French authorities and the seaman, whose name was Hursoris, was freed, but the captain wanted to be sure of his ground and had the district attorney investigate, with the result that the seaman's acquittal by the African court under a French magistrate was upheld.

Bridges Approved.

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Applications approved today at the war department included: By the James River corporation, Norfolk, Va., on revised plans for a bridge over Nansemond river, near Lee's landing. By the South Carolina highway department, plans for a bridge over Lynches river near Johnsonville.

—$13,500—Within a block of North Decatur road and Emory university, in the very best section of Druid Hills, we have recently completed a beautiful red brick bungalow containing seven rooms, large living room, music room, dining room, kitchen, three large bedrooms, two tile baths, plenty of closets, and every modern built-in feature, daylight basement, furnace heat; large lot fronting 100 feet on wide thoroughfare, within two blocks of community stores and car line. Very reasonably priced and will take small piece of property in exchange.

—$18,500. In Druid Hills exclusive section, we have an unusually well constructed two-story home, containing eight rooms, large living room, beautiful sun parlor, dining room, breakfast room and kitchen with every modern built-in feature. Four large bed rooms and two full tile baths, extra lavatory and toilet on first floor, full daylight concrete basement, steam heat and tile roof. Situated on a large lot 100x200 with eastern exposure. This is one of the best buys we have had to offer in this section in some time.

—$10,850—Steam heat, tile roof. Beautiful new red brick, containing six rooms, three bedrooms, full tile bath, the very best plumbing fixtures, painted walls, marble mantel, every modern convenience. A large shady lot 270 feet deep, near car line and stores, and only a few blocks from school.

—$13,000—Just what you have been looking for, a beautiful home less than a year old. Owner has spent over $1,000 to beautify, now business reasons necessitate him to sell at great sacrifice. 7 rooms, sun parlor, two tile baths, clear oak floors, beautifully decorated throughout, a perfect lot, 100x300, massive white oak trees, tennis court, flowers and shrubbery. You will have to see this home to appreciate its beauty and value.

—$1,500 reduction for quick sale. Beautiful seven-room home, tile roof, steam heat, two full tile baths, papered and painted walls, beautifully decorated throughout, large daylight basement, walls and floors concrete, equipped with servant's lavatory, clothes chute, laundry and coal room. Large elevated lot, 90x300, shade trees and shrubbery planted, two-car garage. Will take good building lot in trade.

GASOLINE

Atlanta Motorists:

On Wednesday, December 1, 1927, I raised the price of GASOLINE to 19c per gallon, and as my word is "The Power in GAS PRICES," you see we have 19c gas in Atlanta today. Before I raised the price of GASOLINE I did everything I could to keep the price at 16c per gallon. Due to a small amount of patronage, which did not warrant me keeping the price at 16c, necessitated the advance.

Just wanted you to know that I tried to give you low price gas, and in the future will endeaver to do so, I am,

Yours for low price gas,
G. S. BUNCH.

THE CONSTITUTION'S REAL ESTATE REVIEW

CONDUCTED IN THE INTEREST OF DEVELOPMENT OF ATLANTA AND THE SOUTH

Figures Prove Real Estate Activity High, Haynes Says

Rumors that real estate activities among Atlanta brokers have not been on a par this year with business of the past years, notwithstanding the unusually large number of big transactions closed recently, were refuted when a group of real estate men gathered together at an informal meeting last week and started tallying sales and leases handled during the 11-month period.

This statement was made by Eugene V. Haynes, well-known figure on realty row, on the eve of issuing a list of sales in his own properties aggregating $532,000.

Mr. Haynes is of the opinion that local realty dealers have been "talking pessimism" until they had themselves believing in conditions that do not exist. It took an actual reduction to figures for the brokers to convince themselves that the year showed satisfactory increases in transactions over the preceding years.

A list of properties sold by Mr. Haynes follows:

To C. W. Deen, 1424 Peachtree.

EUGENE V. HAYNES.

$90,000; residence in Haynes Manor to H. R. Cannon, $65,000; 762 Peachtree street to Mrs. N. S. Collier, $50,000; northwest corner Spring and Alexander streets to Massell Realty company $50,000; residence in Haynes Manor to Bolling Jones, Jr., $35,000; southwest corner Spring and West Peachtree place to Prudential Trust company, $30,000; 435 Spring street to Better Homes, Inc., $20,000; 1120 St. Augustine place to H S. Copland and T. D. Strickland, $20,000; industrial lot on Murphy avenue to W. B. Willingham, $10,000; 18 Bonaventure avenue to J. I. Hosford, $10,000; House and lot, 515 Lakewood avenue, to H. Germazian, $3,500; 18 Bennett street to J. F. Smith, $2,000.

Lots in Haynes Manor:

Lots 8 and 9, block 5, to Arthur H. Voegel, $12,500; lots 7 and 8, block 4, to S. C. Orr, $10,000; lot 3, block 4, to Mrs. Ruth Windham, $9,000; lot 26, block 6, to E. F. Munn, $6,000; lot 17, block 2, to J. Groves Cohen, $5,000; lot 13, block 2, to Allen Gottschaldt, $5,000; lot 14, block 2, to O. I. Freeman, $5,000; lots 1 and 2, block 4, to T. W. Windham, $12,000; lots 25 and 26, block 4, to Better Homes, Inc., $6,000; lot 24, block 4, to S. L. Meiere, $3,000; lot 12, block 2, to Earle R. Greene, $4,000; lot 20, block 6, to Francis Clarke, $6,000; lot 13, block 3, to E. W. Stribenger, $3,000; lot 4, block 14, to Miss Katherine Wood, $2,100; lot 23, block 4, to Mrs. Edith Watts Broward, $4,000; lot 3, block 14, to Miss Carrie E. Meckel, $2,400; lots 4 and 5, block 3, to Norris Construction company, $6,000; lot 6, block 11, to Mrs. Alma Archer Shropshire, $2,100; lot 5, block 14, to Mrs. Gena W. Norris, $2,100; lot 5, block 11, to Mrs. Fleda Morgan, $2,100; lots 10 and 11, block 3, to H. I. Furlong, $6,000; lot 24, block 12, to Miss Catherine Brown, $2,100; lot 23, block 12, to Miss Mayme Brown, $2,100; lot 19, block 12, to L. N. Ericson, $2,250; lots 16 and 17, block 12, to Madame Aline Cousins, $4,200; lot 20, block 12, to Miss Katherine Kolross, $2,250; lot 7, block 14, to G W. Hughes, $2,300; lots 1 and 6, block 13, to R. Blodgett, $2,100; lots 13 and 14, block 12, to Mrs. Julia Walker, $4,800.

Drexel Avenue, In Druid Hills To Be Paved

Work of extending and paving Drexel avenue, one of the strategic thoroughfares of the Druid Hills section, has been started and will be pushed rapidly to completion, it was announced Saturday.

When completed Drexel avenue will form a new connection, smoothly paved, from Howard street, in Decatur, to Ponce de Leon avenue, in Druid Hills.

The new thoroughfare will give direct access to areas hitherto reached only in a roundabout way.

The present work is the result of several months of planning by residents of Druid Hills and Decatur.

The new street will be wide, with easy grades and as nearly straight as physical conditions will permit.

PEACHTREE ARCADE OFFICES ARE LEASED

Lease of a suite of offices on the third floor of the Peachtree Arcade building to the Workman Manufacturing company, was announced Saturday.

The offices will be occupied by a branch of the Chicago firm, dealing in printing and printed specialties. The company has been in Atlanta for some time, having had a location on Alabama street, in charge of which was G. W. Brownlee.

The concern is now expanding from a state agency to a southeastern branch, covering several states, according to Mr. Brownlee, district manager.

New Staff Manning West End Office Of F. P. and George J. Morris Firm

CONVERSE-MYERS CO. OFF TO FLYING START

Organization of the Converse-Myers company, engineers and builders, with offices in the Bona Allen building, adds a new firm to the long list of concerns establishing offices in Atlant.

This company, although only recently established, was awarded the contract for the Ashby Street school, one of the units of the Atlanta school building projects, on which work was started last week.

W. F. Converse is president, and A. R. Myers, secretary and treasurer. Mr. Converse has had extensive experience and is well known in this section, having personally supervised the erection of some of Atlanta's largest buildings. Mr. Myers has been actively associated with construction, both in the field and office, and is also known locally.

Mr. Converse and Mr. Myers are both very optimistic in their business outlook for the future, and consider Atlanta an excellent location for their business.

MORRIS NAMES WILLIAM OLIVER AS SALES LEADER

About 15 years ago Gainesville, Ga., lost a good citizen in the person of William Pillow Oliver, who left that enterprising city to enter the banking business in Atlanta, Ga.

After spending several years in this field of work, Mr. Oliver turned to the real estate profession in the capacity of home salesman for F. P. & Geo. J. Morris. He is pictured herewith as the star salesman for the week, leading 15 other salesmen by a wide margin.

Mr. Oliver is a firm believer in "home ownership," and when not engaged in showing homes to prospective purchasers, his time is spent in beautifying his own home. His particular hobby is mowing the lawn and digging the garden.

DAVID ANNOUNCES RESIDENTIAL SALES FOR DRUID HILLS

Important sales of Druid Hills residential property have been made by R. T. David, one of the sales force of the company.

Among them are lots on Ponce de Leon avenue to Dr. Steve Garrett and to Earl Yancey. The former has been improved and a residence on the latter is being constructed. Other sales were the William Fisch home and lots to J. M. Harrison which have been improved by F. P. and George J. Morris.

Since his connection with the company, Mr. David has sold a great deal of property in Druid Hills. Most of the buyers were home owners. Mr. David sees a steadily increasing business, with an even better outlook for next spring.

MORRIS SALES HIT NEW HIGH

Real estate sales consummated by F. P. & George J. Morris between September 8 and December 1 were announced Saturday, revealing an aggregate of $207,625 for the period of less than two months, and pushing the total of the year's business to date over the $1,500,000 mark.

The sales indicate particular activity in the Morris brokerage department, which has become one of the principal features of the company alongside the large building department. The totals show large increases over previous business with a steady growth, making certain another record year for the concern.

REALTORS PLAN ANNUAL MEETING

Announcement of the annual Atlanta Real Estate board meeting to be held in the middle of the month was made before the membership of the board at its weekly luncheon in Vaughan's Tea Room by Dana Belser, president.

The annual meeting of the board will be at the Atlanta Athletic club at 6 o'clock Thursday night, December 15. "At this meeting reports of all committees, covering their work for the year, are submitted for the information and consideration of the membership as a whole," Mr. Belser said. Officers are elected for the coming year, including president, first vice president, second vice president, treasurer and secretary. Presiden Belser especially called the annual meeting to the attention of the members and urging a full attendance so that all will be familiar with the constructive work the board has accomplished during the past year.

The officers and directors of the real estate board held a dinner meeting at the Atlanta Athletic club Tuesday night. Committee reports were read and approved, among them being appraisal course, finance, convention attendance, luncheon and election reports.

At this meeting the revision of the rates, rules and customs of the real estate board, applying to selling real estate and making appraisals were discussed. R. R. Otis, chairman of the committee, was instructed to call another meeting at an early date to make definite recommendations to the directors regarding changing the rates, rules and customs so they could be submitted to the members at the annual meeting.

The delinquency in dues of quite a few members of the board was discussed and it was ruled that unless these dues were paid immediately they would be dismissed from membership.

J. H. EWING SALES TOTAL $189,475

Recent sales announced this past week by R. W. Evans, sales manager for J. H. Ewing and Sons, aggregating $189,475, show a variety of activity in different branches of the local real estate market.

New York, December 3.—(AP)—The cotton market was quiet today, with business again attributed largely to evening-up of accounts in preparation for the government crop report next Thursday. After selling off to 19.45 early, January advanced to 19.62, but eased later, closing at 19.50. The general market closed easy, net 3 points higher to 10 points lower.

Opened 2 Points Down.

The market opened steady at a decline of 2 points to an advance of 2 points. Liquidation and southern selling, and probably local selling promoted by the relatively easy showing of Liverpool, sent prices off a few points after the call. December declined to 19.46 and May to 19.83, net losses of about 4 to 6 points under this pressure, but comparatively small offerings were absorbed by covering and trade buying, which became more active during the forenoon, when sentiment may have been influenced by a private report estimating the crop at 12,542,000 bales.

December sold up to 19.62 and May to 19.96, net advances of 8 to 12 points, but there was a renewal of liquidation or realizing and some southern selling which caused reactions in late trading.

7 Crop Reports Issued.

Seven private crop reports have been issued the past few days with estimates of the yield ranging from 12,542,000 to 13,275,000 bales. Most of the reports, however, have ranged between 12,700,000 to 12,900,000 bales and the average of the seven is 12,793,000, or slightly under the government's November 1 indication of 12,842,000 bales.

There does not appear to have been any very definite crystallization of sentiment as to the showing of next Thursday's report on ginnings prior to December 1, but traders have been talking from 700,000 up to nearly a million bales ginned for the last half of November, or a total to December 1 of about 11,600,000 to about 11,800,000 bales.

Private cables reported hedging and Bombay selling in Liverpool, but said there was a more cheerful feeling in the Manchester goods trade, with a better business for shipment to India.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at 105,431 bales, against 154,994 last year.

ORVIS BROS.

Another private agency issued a crop report today, which showed 12,542,000 bales. Further advices from the local cloth market confirmed increased demand. Furthermore, Manchester is more cheerful, with a fair business being reported in piece goods for India, and improved turnover in yarns. Egyptian cotton made a small advance and Indian cotton in Liverpool was up equal to $1 per bale.

Our market was remarkably steady throughout the session, with prices ranging in the vicinity of the previous closing level. A little liquidation in last transactions produced slight easiness. The market's undertone appears distinctly firm and improved demand for mill output combined with long holders owning the cotton and contracts, it is rather doubtful if even a moderately higher estimate of the probable yield will have any particularly bearish effect, because there is not the congested long interest and especially of a weak character in the market that has been the case prior to most every other report that has been issued since September 8. These market conditions are of major consideration and should be recognized as of the foremost importance. Altogether we believe the price situation is strongly entrenched and there is considerable probability of advances occurring from the neighborhood of present prices, with but small recessions likely.

January Liverpool due 10.37.

HUBBARD BROS.

Our opening this morning was steady, with the continuance of the same short covering of yesterday. There was some trade buying in the middle of the morning which advanced the market about 15 points, but at this point there was some realizing by those who had bought earlier in the week, the market closing unchanged for the day.

We anticipate further short covering and trade buying before the bureau report, as there is a decidedly better feeling in the market.

Liverpool futures are due Monday: January 19.57; March 19.56.

Stock Letters.

LIVINGSTON.

New York, December 3.—In the big turnover this morning the market did not show a great deal of change in price levels. There was a good demand for most rail stocks and many of them were up to some extent on the day but they were counterbalanced by a wave of realizing in the industrials. It was not until the close that the industrials showed much change when a covering movement in General Motors pushed the stock up several points. There has been a great deal of selling in motors due to the appearance of the new Ford car, and no doubt the technical position of the market is rather strong. Steel also was slightly better in the late trading. There was a great deal of profit taking in Westinghouse Electric, Radio and some of the other recent features. Agricultural Chemical preferred was one of the few strong industrials, getting above 57. International Nickel was a feature in the early trading but ran into heavy realizing on the advance. Week-end mercantile reviews indicated that favorable factors in the business situation were increasing. We rather look for more strength in the rails and some of the industrials next week but urge caution in making new commitments at present levels.

The Day in Finance

Business Conditions Over Nation Are 90 Per Cent Fair, It Is Indicated by Trade Map of United States Chamber of Commerce; Many Black Dots on Map Indicate Poor Trade, While Few Places Show Good Business; Activity of Stock Exchange Puzzling Under Circumstances.

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, December 3.—A trade map of the United States published this week by the United States chamber of commerce shows a few black spots here and there indicating poor trade, a few widely scattered spots indicating good business, with something like 90 per cent of all the territory between Canada and the gulf and the Atlantic and the Pacific gray indicating business a fair.

This week's unfavorable statement of freight car loadings for the country as a whole, compared with the figures for the previous week and a year ago at this time, leaves the impression that in reporting the business of the country as fair the United States chamber of commerce did not make a mistake of underestimating existing conditions.

Exchange Activity Puzzles.

But admitting that 90 per cent of general trade is fair how can this weeks stock market be explained? Stock exchange houses here in Wall street were crowded this week with telephone and telegraph wires taxed to the limit. Over 700 separate stock issues were traded in on the stock exchange in one day, a new high record, with the daily turnover in all stocks not far under 3,000,000 shares and with the facilities of the stock exchange for handling this business inadequate as shown by the fact that at times the ticker was as much as a half hour behind actual trading on the stock exchange floor. The business handled on the stock exchange floor this week came from every part of the country with the price trend of both bonds and stocks upward, indicating plainly that activity is on the buying side.

Signs are unmistakable that speculative sentiment throughout the country stock marketwise is at the boiling point. According to past experience the country as a whole has only indulged in widespread stock market speculation when general trade has been good. Today the most optimistic estimate claims that general trade is only fair. Moreover, bond and stock prices are much higher than when general trade was going at the highest possible speed and with most everybody making money. United States and foreign government bonds made new high records this week for all time. A new high for all time was made for the average price of 40 representative domestic bonds. Many individual stocks sold at the highest level ever reached, with the average for 50 representative shares up some 14 points from the low touched at the end of October and within striking distance of the new high for all time made early in October before the 16-point break.

U. S. Loses Gold.

According to this week's information from the Federal Reserve bank here this country lost $93,000,000 gold during November alone, with the outward flow for the past three months the heaviest since the earliest part of 1925, leaving our gold supply the smallest since the end of 1924 or when the flood of gold toward this country was first checked. This loss of gold, however, did not make a ripple on our time money market. The facts are that we still have more available credit in this country than is required in general trade, leaving a huge balance seeking employment in the markets for old and new securities. Offerings of new securities for November reached a total of $687,000,000 bringing the total for the eleven months of the year up close to $7,000,000,000.

Abundance of easy money makes it easy for stock exchange firms to finance customers who want to buy stocks on margin. Accumulated wealth in individuals, however, accounts largely for the active speculation now being witnessed in the stock market. It is a matter of easy money market conditions plus individual wealth. The individual having surplus funds reads in the paper that this or that stock is active and advancing in price. He learned that this or that person made money by trading in the stock market. The fact that business is only fair or worse adds to the desire of the individual with surplus funds to make money by trading in the stock market.

From the best information obtainable in Wall street the selling of stocks in the east is better than the buying with the rest of the country heavily on the buying side, the west leading in the buying for the first time since the March, 1926, break in prices.

Ford's Influence Felt.

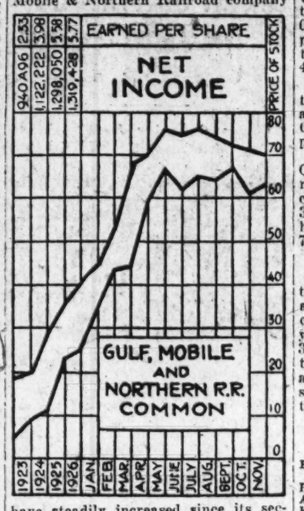
Henry Ford's return to active production has something to do with the stock market, use being made by the big outside public of easy money market conditions and accumulated personal wealth. Signs of improvement in general trade, especially in the steel industry, is another factor. As far as the west is concerned, however, confidence in the stock market is based on the year's satisfactory crops and the improved position of the farmer. All trustworthy signs indicate that the farmer, especially in the northwest, is better off than at any time since he was caught in the 1920 post-war deflation.

This is not the first time there has been good selling of stocks in Wall street with the rest of the country a heavy buyer. When the world war first broke out the bottom dropped out of domestic and foreign trade. Selling of stocks became so heavy that the closing of the stock exchange for several months was decided upon for the best interests of all concerned. Late in 1914 and early in 1915 we began to export food and war supplies to Europe. General trade began to pick up. Wall street continued bearish stock marketwise, however, long after the rest of the country, especially the west, began to buy stocks hand over fist. In that case Wall street was as wrong as it could be and the rest of the country was right as rain. What will happen in the present instance remains to be seen.

It should be added, however, that some of Wall street's biggest traders are as bullish stock marketwise as the most rampant western bull.

RAILROAD SHOWS RISE IN EARNINGS

Mobile, Ala., December 3.—(AP)—Revenue and earnings of the Gulf, Mobile & Northern Railroad company have steadily increased since its second reorganization, which wiped out almost entirely the funded debt.



Net earnings probably will be reduced this year, however, because of expenses incurred in an improvement program which has included extension of mileage. On November 18 the company declared a dividend of $2.50 per share on preferred stock, $1 of which went to reduce to $15.50 per share the accumulated dividends.

The Jackson & Eastern railway, a subsidiary, recently completed a 65-mile section of road connecting a new through route from the gulf coast to the middle west. Although the new route has not brought as much business as expected, officials have expressed themselves as optimistic regarding its future.

The Gulf, Mobile & Northern now operates about 465 miles of track from Mobile, on the gulf, northward to Jackson, Tenn., where connection is made with the Illinois Central, Mobile & Ohio and Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis. Freight density has increased 170 per cent in ten years. More than half the tonnage last year was in forest products and about 21 per cent manufactures and miscellaneous freight.

Weekly Export Review Of British Cotton Market

Manchester, England, November 18. (By Mail.)—Exports of cotton yarns and manufactures from the United Kingdom during October amounted to 12,298,633 pounds sterling and the total of manufactured articles to 48,737,045 pounds, compared with 12,389,076 pounds and 48,635,715 pounds in September, and 12,275,479 pounds and 44,909,343 pounds in October, 1926.

For the ten months ended October the figures were 122,054,071 pounds and 461,033,901 pounds against 132,080,895 pounds and 455,521,484 pounds in the ten months of 1926.

Shipments of cotton piece goods in October totaled 8,833,200 pounds, representing 312,115,10 square yards, compared with 9,166,900 pounds and 335,749,900 square yards in September and 9,148,260 pounds and 307,744,700 square yards in October, 1926.

Exports Above 1926.

In the ten months ended October the exports were 90,306,216 pounds and 3,424,907,900 square yards, the comparative figures for the previous year being 100,743,629 pounds and 3,317,032,400 square yards. The quantities taken by the leading markets and the increases or decreases in thousands of square yards are shown in the table below:

Local Committee on State Realtors' Meeting Named

Final plans for the Georgia real estate convention, to be held in Savannah, Friday and Saturday, December 9 and 10, are being formulated by the attendance committee of the Atlanta real estate board, it was announced Saturday.

The committee consists of H. H. Hallman, chairman; John O. Chiles, R. C. Mizell, and W. H. Stokes, Jr.

Mr. Hallman estimates that 25 will attend from the Atlanta board. Pullman, hotel and railroad reservations have already been made for almost this many. The headquarters of the Atlanta delegation will be the DeSoto hotel, which is also the convention headquarters. Members attending this convention should notify the office of the board, 203 Healey building, so reservations can be made for them, it was stated.

A private Pullman has been chartered. The Atlanta delegation will leave for Savannah Thursday night at 9:40 o'clock, arriving in Savannah Friday morning.

President Belser states that a program has been arranged that will deal with important and current subjects pertaining to the efficient handling of real estate, and that the real estate men attending will be greatly helped.

Among the speakers will be: W. G. Stutlive, managing editor of the Savannah Press; W. W. Rose, of Orlando, vice president of the National Real Estate association; A. W. Luckie, of Augusta, a member of the Georgia real estate commission, and W. T. Anderson, publisher of the Macon Telegraph.

A. M. Wilcox, chairman of the entertainment committee of the Savannah board, states that an entertaining program has been arranged which will not allow a dull minute during the meeting. A large banquet is set for Friday night, to be followed by a dance. A ball will be given Saturday night, and during the day boat trips, automobile rides, and luncheons have been arranged for the pleasure and entertainment of the visiting members.

From all indications, the state convention will be the largest and most constructive ever held, it was stated.

DuPrees Observe Eighteenth Year With Big Sales

Observation of the eighteenth anniversary of W. L. and John O. DuPree, well-known real estate firm and one of the oldest and largest in Atlanta, is marked by the consummation of an important real estate deal involving property valued at $170,000.

The DuPree firm acted as agents in the purchase by Simon Selig of the building at the northeast corner of Spring and Mills streets from the Capital City Tire and Supply company for about $110,000. As part consideration, Mr. Selig gave the three-story building at 318-322 Marietta street, valued at $60,000. The Spring street property has a frontage of 40 feet on Spring, 175 feet on Mills street and a 100-foot on Scott street. It was purchased by Mr. Selig as an investment, it was stated.

Another large deal handled by the DuPree company and announced during the week of the concern's eighteenth anniversary, involved a large portion of the block at Williams street and Merritts avenue, sold for a cash consideration of $22,500.

Since its early establishment in Atlanta the annual sales of the DuPree concern have been mounting at a rapid rate. During 1926 the company showed a gain of 90 per cent over the sales of the previous year, and this year the sales total will go 20 per cent above that of last year.

The renting department, under management of Harry H. Hallman, for the past two years has doubled its business each 12 months. The department manages some 12 apartments, in addition to negotiating leases on homes, stores and business property.

REV. SPRAYBERRY WILL BE BURIED AT ROCKMART, GA.

Funeral services for Rev. A. M. Sprayberry, 52, of Barnesville, Ga., prominent Methodist minister, who died late Friday night at Grady hospital as the result of injuries sustained a week ago when struck down by a bicycle on Edgewood avenue, will be held this morning at 11 o'clock from the First church at Rockmart, Ga. Dr. L. W. Twiggs, presiding elder of the Griffin circuit, and Rev. Homer Thompson, of Atlanta, will officiate and interment will be in Rockmart cemetery.

Rev. Sprayberry had been in Atlanta attending the annual conference of the North Georgia Methodist conference and was struck down on Edgewood avenue by a negro riding a bicycle. The negro is being held at police station. Rev. Sprayberry suffered a fractured skull and was thought to be on the road to recovery when pulmonary complications set in, which caused his death, physicians stated.

He is survived by his widow; a daughter, Miss Margaret Sprayberry, a student at Wesleyan college, and two brothers, Rev. A. J. Sprayberry, of Mountville, Ga., and R. H. Sprayberry, of Richmond, Va.

CITY SHOWS GAIN IN OFFICE SPACE

The office building business throughout the United States is normal despite the millions of square feet of new space created by recent building, it is reported by the National Association of Building Owners and Managers on the basis of the October rental survey. As a result of the sustained prosperity of business and the consequent increase in office space requirements, space has been absorbed, on the whole, nearly as fast as it has been produced, leaving the amount of vacant space at 10.87 per cent, which is only slightly above the normal figure. The report included 1,467 office buildings with a rentable area in excess of 111,730,000 square feet of space.

An improvement in space absorption is reported by many cities including Atlanta, Georgia; Birmingham, Alabama; Buffalo, New York; Cincinnati, Ohio; Denver, Colorado; Oakland, California; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; St. Louis, Missouri; Salt Lake City, Utah; San Antonio, Texas, and Spokane, Washington. In the six months that intervened between the May and October surveys made by the association, in each of the cities named, the available supply of space decreased.

The rental situation so far as store space is concerned is reported in a satisfactory condition. Only three cities showed more than 10 per cent vacancies in store space and seven cities showed vacancies of less than five per cent.

Business conditions among the tenants of office buildings as reflected in promptness with which they pay their rent is evidently fair, since reports from each of the cities rank collections from fair to good and in no case are collections designated as "poor."

The fourth conference of local association presidents of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers will be held in St. Louis December 8, 9 and 10, it was announced today by Lewis B. Ermeling, of Chicago, executive secretary of the national organization of skyscraper men. Invitations have been sent to the presidents and secretaries of the 37 local associations affiliated with the national body to attend the conference.

The Atlanta association will be represented at the conference by Thomas W. Connally, president; Fred Shaefer, secretary, and Charles F. Palmer, of Palmer properties.

The conference will devote its attention to major problems affecting the ownership and operation of America's greatest buildings. Local, as well as national, problems will be considered, among them taxation, traffic, parking regulations and overproduction of office space. Internal problems will also demand a portion of the conference's time, with questions of local association organization, financing and management being in the fore.

Plans will also be discussed for the 21st annual convention of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers to be held June 11-15 in St. Louis at the Hotel Statler. Louis O. Honig, of St. Louis, convention chairman, will present a detailed account of the preparations which have been made by the St. Louis members of this committee.

Cotton Goods.

New York, December 3.—Cotton goods were steady today with trade light. Expanded curtailment of production in cotton mills was reported north and south, probably reaching 15 per cent. Of some divisions in the next two weeks. Yarn inquiry was better but sales were slow owing to low bids. Burlaps closed steady. Raw silk showed more strength at the week-end. Reorders of small volume on dress goods were reported. The metropolitan retail trade has been active, largely of a holiday character.

National Body To Study Rate Of Obsolescence

Determination of the average useful life practically to be expected for buildings of every principal type is the purpose of an investigation now being made by the National Association of Real Estate Boards, it was learned here Saturday.

The work is being carried on at the request of the United States bureau of internal revenue. The bureau is seeking thus to obtain data which may be used in determining the rules to be followed in computing the depreciation and obsolescence of real estate improvements as allowed under the income tax law.

While the inquiry was initiated at the request of the revenue bureau and will have its first application to the practical problem of establishing estimated rates of depreciation and obsolescence for buildings for use in making income tax computations and returns, it is expected to furnish incidentally the first authoritative table as to the average expectant length of service which the ordinary building, whether it is a residence, a factory, or an office building, has before it.

The study is the first attempt to make possible for buildings the formulation of tables of life expectancy comparable to those established by the experience of insurance companies in estimating human life expectancy.

Walter S. Schmidt, of Cincinnati, Ohio, is chairman of the special committee of the National Association of Real Estate Boards appointed by President Clarence C. Hiett, of Louisville, Ky., to conduct the inquiry.

The president of each of the 654 member boards of the association within the territorial limits of the United States has been asked to appoint a special committee to work with the national association in compiling data for the revenue bureau's use.

The committees will bring to the inquiry the experience of the men in each city who are best informed as to the actual length of useful life which buildings of each type have in that community.

The inquiry will cover thirteen classifications as to types of buildings, and will deal with the expectant length of life of each type in each of six types of construction. Types of buildings to be covered are: Office buildings, stores, warehouses, loft buildings, factories, public garages, theaters, hotels and elevator apartments, apartments and flats without elevators, stores with one or two stories of rooms or apartments above; two, three, or four family dwellings, row houses, one-family dwellings.

Each of the above types will be reported upon as to its expectant life if of steel frame, fireproof construction; if of reinforced concrete construction; if of masonry with slow-burning interior material, with or without steel frame; if of masonry with frame interior; if of frame, and if of any other construction.

TWO PRETTY GIRLS AID COMPANIONS IN BOLD BANDITRY

Two bold and beautiful female bandits, with incidental accompaniment by their boy friends, Saturday night relieved Lloyd Hayes, employee of an A. & P. store at 594 Spring street, of $9 in cash, in what may may, or may not have been, an effort to recoup financial losses incurred by the football game.

Mr. Hayes told police that he was walking along Linden street, between West Peachtree and Peachtree streets, when a very smart roadster, driven by a pretty girl and occupied by another female companion and two men drew up to the curb.

The two men jumped out, poked the business ends of two guns in his stomach and "frisked" him of $9, he said.

FARM SITUATION STILL IMPROVING

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Continuation of the improved agricultural situation as compared with last year was announced today by the department of agriculture to be in progress the first of this month when a review of conditions was made.

"The general course of prices of farm products has been slightly downward recently," the review said, "but other commodities have also declined slightly so that the October index of purchasing power of farm products in terms of non-agricultural commodities remained at 92 per cent of pre-war, compared with 81 per cent in October last year."

The general yield of crops has been brought up above the 10-year average by the mild fall weather, it was stated, but production this year is about 3 per cent less than last year.

Discussing the situation by regions, the department said weather in the east had been favorable for fall work and wheat was reported to be showing good stands. Drought in the eastern part of the south has made germination and growth of winter crops very poor. As was also the case, to some extent, in Texas. The middle southern states have been more favored and the general condition of the south is apparently improved over last year.

Much soft corn is reported in the eastern portion of the corn belt, some of which, it was stated, will not even make feed. General conditions in the winter wheat belt are reported the best in five or six years in the north, but not greatly different from last year in the southern part of the belt.

"The range country is going into winter, for the most part, with an abundance of feed and with stock in excellent condition," said the department.

"The cattle industry shows every evidence of stimulation; restocking ranges, cows high-priced, good income from this fall's shipments of both feeder and slaughter stock. The sheep industry likewise is optimistic, western feeding areas running twice as many lambs as last year. The whole picture for the mountain states is a favorable one."

'Connie' DuPont, C.W. Darden, Jr. Are Married

Wilmington, Del., December 3.—(AP) Miss Constance Simons DuPont, of this city, and Colgate Whitehead Darden, Jr., of Norfolk, Va., were married tonight at St. John's Episcopal church, the rector, the Rev. Alban Richey, officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irene DuPont and Darden is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Colgate W. Darden, of Southampton county, Virginia.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Mrs. Crawford H. Greenwalt, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. The bridesmaids were Mrs. Harvey Lindsay, of Norfolk, Va., sister of the bridegroom; Mrs. Virginia McCulough, of Norfolk, Va.; Mrs. Ernest N. May, of Buffalo, N. Y.; Miss Elinor F. DuPont, Miss Doris Elise DuPont, Miss Mariama DuPont, Miss Octavia DuPont and Miss Lucile DuPont, sisters of the bride.

The ushers included John B. Rorison, of Wilmington, N. C.; R. Earl Burgess, of Huntington, W. Va., and Barron F. Black, Harvey L. Lindsay, W. R. M. Moss, Berham R. Gray and Dr. Robert Matthews, all of Norfolk, Va. Mr. and Mrs. Darden will make their home in Norfolk, Va.

KENTUCKY WOMAN ONLY "GRANDMA" IN NEW CONGRESS

Washington, December 3.—(AP)—Mrs. Katherine Langley, republican representative-elect from Kentucky, today laid claim to the distinction of being the only grandmother in the new congress.

She said her daughter, Mrs. Katherine Bentley, would be her secretary and that reports that this position would be filled by her husband, former Representative John W. Langley, who recently was paroled from Atlanta penitentiary, where he was serving a sentence for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, were erroneous.

Mrs. Langley said her first legislative offering would be a bill proposing erection of a memorial arch to world war veterans on the plaza of the Union station here.

ONE CHILD DEAD AND FIVE DYING AS STILL BURNS

Bedford, Ky., December 3.—(AP)—One child was burned to death and her parents and three other children probably fatally burned by a fire said to have been caused by explosion of a still on the kitchen stove. The explosion occurred Friday night. The girl died several hours later and Mr. and Mrs. William Scott and the other children were in a serious condition at the home of relatives. Physicians hold no hope for the recovery of any of them.

MARSHAL MOBBED HELD UNDER PUMP BY GIRL STUDENTS

Mountain Grove, Mo., December 3. (AP)—When City Marshal C. J. Hinkle attempted to halt the annual class pennant rush of the high school here, a group of girl students mobbed him, carried him howling to the public square and held him under the town pump for several minutes.

While one group of girls held the struggling marshal under the spout, others worked industriously at the pump handle. The result was rather damaging to the marshal's dignity, and someone turned in a fire alarm. The crowd of students dispersed as the fire department arrived.

The pennant rush is an annual event at Mountain Grove high school, the seniors and sophomores defending a pennant from the juniors and freshmen. The girl students seized Hinkle when he attempted to halt the affair.

Personnel of Stubbs-Barnes Wedding Party Is Announced

The marriage of Miss Louise Stubbs and William Chambers Barnes, of Decatur, Ill., takes place Thursday evening, December 15, at 8:30 o'clock, at St. Luke's Episcopal church, on Peachtree street, the Rev. N. R. H. Moor, rector of the church, performing the ceremony.

Miss Sarah Kinzig, of Mount Vernon, N. J., cousin of the bride, will be maid of honor, and the bridesmaids include Mrs. William Saffarrans, Mrs. Katharine Sanders, Miss Maria Brown, Miss Ethel Gay Kunzig, of Mount Vernon, N. Y., cousin of the bride; Mrs. Allen F. Moore, of Ottawa, Ill., and Miss Sara Peel Watts, of Charlottesville, Va.

Lieutenant William Saffarrans, Edward S. Gay, James Johnston, of Atlanta, Allen F. Moore, of Ottawa, Ill.; Wally Caldwell, of Chicago, Ill., and Thomas Craven, of New York, will be groomsmen.

The ushers will be Thomas P. Paine, Lowry Arnold, Ten Eyck Brown, James L. Dickey, Ewell Gay and Joseph S. Raine, Sr.

Dr. and Mrs. John Wilson Somerville, parents of the bride-elect, will entertain at a reception at the Biltmore hotel following the church ceremony, to which a fashionable assemblage of guests will be invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowry Arnold will be hosts at dinner at the Piedmont Driving club Saturday evening, December 10, in compliment to Miss Stubbs and her fiance. A number of other interesting parties have been planned honoring this popular bride-elect.

Miss King To Wed Herbert Ayers Wednesday, Dec. 28

Of cordial interest today is the announcement of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gray King, of Atlanta, of the engagement of their sister, Josephine King, to Herbert Ayers, of Atlanta, formerly of Hartwell.

The bride-elect is the youngest daughter of the late Major Charles Meigs King, and Mrs. King, of Greensboro, Ga., her mother having been before her marriage Miss Josephine Gray. Miss King was reared in Greensboro, where she attended Greensboro High school, later finishing her education at Wesleyan college, Macon.

Mr. Ayers is the elder son of Judge and Mrs. Robert L. Ayers, of Hartwell, Ga., but has made his home in Atlanta for the past ten years. He attended the Atlanta Law school, and later associated himself with the Federal Reserve bank of Atlanta, and now holds a responsible position with this institution.

The marriage will be quietly solemnized at the home of the bride-elect's brother and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Gray King, No. 513 St. Charles avenue, December 28. Mr. Ayers and his bride will make Atlanta their home.

Miss Averill Weds John L. Porter In St. Louis, Mo.

The marriage of Miss Harriet Blanche Averill, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Walter Averill, and niece of Mrs. Ignatius McMenamy, of 6018 Clemens avenue, and John Lancaster Porter, of St. Louis, formerly of Atlanta, took place at 9 o'clock this morning at St. Rose's church. The ceremony was performed by the bride's uncle, the Rev. Albert R. Wise, S. J.

The altar was adorned in white and yellow chrysanthemums against a background of green, and was lighted by tall cathedral candles. Two large baskets of chrysanthemums were at either side of the communion rail and the same flowers were used about the chancel.

The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, the bodice and long sleeves of which were trimmed in Brussels lace that had been used on the wedding gown of her mother. The draped skirt was caught at the front by a spray of orange blossoms and the long court train was outlined by garlands of orange blossoms. Her veil was of tulle and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and bride's roses.

Miss Marie Josephine Averill was her sister's only attendant and was gowned in chiffon shaded from apricot to a deep yellow. She wore a picture hat of georgette to match her gown and carried chrysanthemums in yellow, russet and gold shades. Mrs. McMenamy wore a gown of deep purple chiffon velvet. Mr. Porter had for his best man Thomas Boland and Walter Averill and Louis Luetke were the ushers.

Owing to the recent death of the bridegroom's mother, Mrs. Katharine Spalding Porter, who was a prominent resident of Atlanta, the wedding was followed by a small breakfast at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. Ignatius McMenamy, for members of the family only.

The bride, who made her home with Mrs. McMenamy, was educated at Webster college. The late Sister M. Louise Wise, of Webster college, was her aunt. Mr. Porter was graduated from St. Mary's college, Kansas, and the St. Louis University Law school. Upon their return from the honeymoon, the middle of this month, Mr. Porter and his bride will make their home at 5041 McPherson avenue.

Miss Louise Hall To Be Honor Guest At Luncheon Today

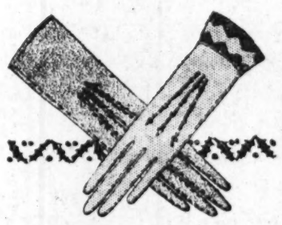
Gifts

Gifts speak a language more potent than words, expressing in colorful fashion the personality of the giver as well as the spirit of Christmas. Let your gifts, selected at Allen's, speak with the added fervor of tradition—for it is the custom to give Allen gifts. Let them speak with the fine flavor of originality, the telling tongue of careful choice—their intrinsic worth thus enhanced by an intangible value greater than money can buy.

Guerlain's famous "Shalimar" expresses the spirit of Christmas in fragrant fashion! One of the finest perfumes, one of the leaders in popularity. Awaiting your selection from hundreds of other subtle scents offered in Allen's perfume shop. Priced $25.

McCallum, Corticelli, Kayser, As You Like It, Dakin, Alco, and Allenhose—Allen's presents an impressive array of silk hose for Chirstmas gift selection. Chiffons, mediums, service weights—clocked and plain—in new shades for daytime and evening wear. Priced all the way from $1.50 a pair to $5.50.



The gift of dignity and a subtle compliment! Gloves of washable kid, glace kid, or suede—with novelty cuffs, or in plain, slip-on style. $3.50 to $7.50 a pair.

From thousands of adorable bits of linen and lace and silk we show one little handkerchief—one sample of the happy medium of gifts—not too much, not too little—an ideal remembrance. Priced $1.25. Others from 25c to $25!

Who would love a crystal tree? You know somebody—so do we all. The crystal tree people love things original—things beautiful—and they are always the ones that it's fun to shop for! Tree sketched $18.50.

Slim, graceful gold chains that clasp the throat closely and fasten with a big, beautiful imitation jade clasp. $19.75. Bracelet to match, $12.50.

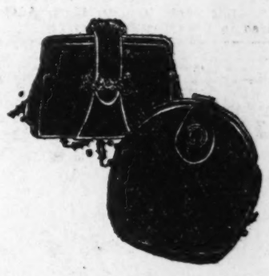
Gleaming topaz stones in a filigree gold setting. One of the smartest bracelets shown, and moderately priced at $4.95.

The novelty handles, some imported, some domestic, vie in importance with the rich silk of these umbrellas—some richly bordered, others in the new two-toned silks. $5.95 to $35.



Antelope Bags have rather bagged the market in the realm of gifts! They are so new, so beautiful, and in so many desirable shapes and sizes. At the left, a $39.75 model. At the right, one of the newest shapes, $16.50.

Jade and onyx make a striking combination in this bar pin, while the moonstone, set in marcasite, Fashion's new favorite in jewelry, is extremely smart. The Jade pin, $16.50; the Moonstone, $16.50. All real stones.

In the same class with the crystal trees are the people to whom you want to give bronze elephants. They will appreciate a gift that is ornamental and unique. $3.95 and up.

Relief Corps Is Entertained.

Mrs Albert Wood was hostess to the Woman's Relief corps Thursday at a Christmas party.

Reports from the various committees show the quota of Christmas bags for the Red Cross, garments for the Needlework Guild and secured the pledge to Tallulah paid. Committees also served both on Forget-me-not and Poppy days. A day each week is set apart at Grady hospital and an entertainment is given at Hospital No. 48 each year. This organization has assisted in all things patriotic and charitable for many years including the decorating of the hundreds of graves of heroes at Marietta May 30.

Mrs. Alfred Bailey Will Head League of Women Voters

Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president of Atlanta League of Women Voters, and one of the most outstanding members of the organization. Photograph by Elliott's Peachtree studio.

Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president of the Atlanta League of Women Voters, is one of the most outstanding charter members of the league. Mrs. Bailey, who was Miss Augustus Seals, of Columbus, before her marriage, not only belongs to many social organizations but for years has been a member of both the U. D. C. and the D. A. R. organizations. On her mother's side, Paul J. Semms, brigadier general of the Confederate army and a brother of Admiral Semms, was her great-uncle and her mother's father was Hampton Sidney Smith, one of the wealthiest pioneers of early Georgia days. On her father's side, her grandfather was Judge Daniel Morgan Seals, a wealthy resident of Alabama. She is prominently connected with the Burneys and Seals of Virginia. Her family for generations back has been a long line of scholars and professional people. Mrs. Bailey was named after the noted Judge Augustus Alston, of Alabama, an associate of her father's, he being a graduate lawyer from New York state. She is an accomplished musician and is a member of Bass Parent-Teacher association. Mrs. Bailey has four sons, and she is identified with Atlanta's social and civic interests. She was chairman of the ninth ward for two years, served successfully one year as membership chairman and has served effeciently this year in the capacity of one of the league's vice presidents.

Serving with Mrs. Bailey as directors for 1928 will be Mesdames J. P. Billups, Fred Hodgson, W. C. Robinson, R. E. Rollins, J. E. Springer and A. W. Waldman.

Board Meeting.

The executive board of the Atlanta League of Women Voters meets at headquarters, 356 Candler annex, on Tuesday, December 6, at 10:30 o'clock.

Christmas Bazaar.

The league will sponsor a Christmas bazaar at 86 North Pryor street, near Auburn avenue, on Friday and Saturday, December 10-11. In order that those working may have full opportunity to select their gifts, the bazaar will be open from 8 to 6 o'clock both days with Mrs. W. C. Robinson, chairman. Saturday, fruits, jellies, cakes, candies, preserves and other eatable will be featured. Members are asked to leave donations at league headquarters, 356 Candler annex, on Pryor street, not later than Wednesday, December 7. Each ward league will sponsor its table, the proceeds to be credited to the ward's budget for the year.

City Elections.

All members are urged to vote and get friends to vote in the general city elections on Wednesday, December 7. Candidates nominated in the primary elections last spring will be voted on and also various amendments which affect the city charter and the schools. It has been reported that the question of 30 per cent of the city's revenue to go to the schools will be upon the ballot on December 7. The league has written to the city clerk, Walter Taylor, to ascertain if this statement is true but has not yet had time for a reply.

Ninth Ward league meets at the home of Mrs. Fred Ardary, 1252 Mansfield avenue, N. E., on Wednesday, December 7, at 3 o'clock. Twelfth Ward league will hold a birthday party Wednesday afternoon, December 7, at 3 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Garland Embry, 282 Oxford place, N. E. Mrs. R. S. Goulden is the chairman. Mrs. N. V. Perry, eleventh ward chairman, will be honor guest.

Service Legion Cookbook Is On the Market

Mrs. Sam D. Jones, president of Atlanta and Fulton county chapters of the Service Star Legion, announces that the cookbook for which the members have worked so faithfully is on the market.

The books will be distributed at the chapter meeting held in the Atlanta Woman's club on Peachtree street, Tuesday afternoon, December 13, at 3 o'clock.

The books contain hundreds of most valuable and tested recipes, favorites and most successful contributed by the members of the S. S. L., also by several national officers. The book is packed in an envelope ready for mailing and makes a most attractive and acceptable Christmas gift, especially to young housekeepers who may profit without effort of their own from experiences of older housekeepers, and the price is only 50 cents per copy. Money procured in this sale will go toward the relief fund. Those desiring an exceptionally useful cookbook may apply to the officers and members of the organization.

Patrician Players To Present Play.

The Patrician Players, under the direction of Miss Isabelle Clark, will present "Anne's Little Affair," a three-act comedy, at the Jewish Educational Alliance, 318 Capitol avenue, S. E., December 18, at 8:15 o'clock. Members of the cast are Misses Jennie Klein, Mollie Klein, Sylvia Hirsch, Anne Siegel, Louise Lichtenstein, Dorothy Feinstein, Tillie Gottlieb and Rose Bizinsky. The public is invited.

Scabbard and Blade To Give Tea-Dance At Biltmore Hotel

A delightful affair among college circles will be the party which the members of the Scabbard and Blade, honorary military fraternity of Georgia Tech, will entertain at the tea-dance at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel Saturday afternoon, December 17. The dance is an annual affair and is always given at the close of the week of initition of the pledges.

Honor guests for the affair will be the regimental sponsor, Miss Imogene Edwards, of Chattanooga, Tenn.; the Scabbard and Blade sponsor, Miss Billie Johnson, and the pledges to "M" company, second regiment, who are J. W. Howell, K. L. Brewton, E. E. Ezell, J. T. Clark, D. Morton, T. F. Faires, J. C. Jett, K. M. Thrash, W. J. Holman, E. J. Tracey, E. H. Roan and C. J. Ford.

Among others who will attend will be the United States army officers and wives who are stationed at Tech.

Miss Helen Fitzgerald Is Honor Guest.

Mrs. Edgar B. Chapman and Mrs. Thelma Fitzgerald Bell were hostesses at a miscellaneous shower Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Chapman on Ponce de Leon avenue, honoring Miss Helen Fitzgerald, a bride-elect of December 15. The lovely gifts were brought in by little Addie Louise Bell on a wagon representing "Honeymoon Express."

The guests included Mrs. Roy House, Mrs. Wilbur Scarboro, Miss Margaret Fitzgerald, Miss Viola Napier, Miss Anna Belle Payne, Miss Jewel Payne, Mrs. Claud Martin, Miss Jennie Falks, Miss Carobel Williams, Miss Minnie Mae Rodgers, Mrs. Irene Yancey, Miss Edith Blanton, Miss Pearl Yarbrough, Miss Lucile Mullins, Miss Kathleen Rodgers, Miss Camille Yeazey, Miss Mary Power, Miss Ethel Gerry, Mrs. G. "The Store All Women Know"

FEMININE FRIVOLITIES

A Synonym For Christmas Gifts!

Delicious things—all frothy lace and satin ribbon—foaming with ostrich and marabou—shining like rainbow bubbles! Who wants a bread and butter gift when all this luxury lies waiting for its rightful heritage of much soft tissue paper and reams of red and gold ribbons! Don't YOU adore the frivolous, feminine things for Christmas? The store every woman knows wisely guesses what every woman wants at Christmas time, and offers it accordingly.

Boudoir Pillows

Blue and rose satin, crinkly and soft, with frills of gold lace—or else the cunning French doll pillows, trimmed with marabou—or perhaps lace patchwork pillows—some large, some small. From $2.50 to $15.

Novelty Garters

All kinds, all colors! Of shirred ribbon, trimmed with little rosettes, with lace, with frills and flutings! Tailored styles, too, in contrasting shades. Priced from $1 to $5 a pair.

Garter Sets

This set of a pair of ribbon garters with a crepe de chine handkerchief in colors to match, makes a charming remembrance. In a pretty little gift box. $1 set.

Gown Cases

Lace trimmed satin cases, to hold fine, sheer gowns in deserved daintiness! Priced from $8.50 to $15. Handkerchief cases, too, of the same dainty laces, priced from $3.50 to $7.50 each. A handkerchief case and gown case to match make a lovely gift.

Boudoir Slippers

Boudoir slippers that proudly wave their ostrich plumes, that boast a brocaded loveliness which is a charming mixture of comfort and frivolous beauty. $5 to $12.50 pair. Quilted satin slippers, $3.50 pair.

Lingerie Belts

Novelty girdles of fine elastic, covered with ribbon and lace, to wear with a silken gown. $7.50 and $10.

THE FOURTH FLOOR SHOP

Georgia Products Display Launched By Clubwomen

The first Saturday display of Georgia products by the Atlanta grocers at the request of the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs was most successful and will be repeated each first Saturday. Mrs. F. C. Rice, chairman of Georgia products for the city federation, is being assisted by Mrs. W. Woods White, co-chairman, and Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, chairman of home demonstration. Mrs. Farmer also holding the state chairmanship for this work. Atlanta being the logical center for putting over a demand for Georgia goods, all clubs in the city are asked to cooperate. Mrs. Rice requests that when serving men's civic clubs or other large groups, that the menu, as much as possible, be made up of Georgia products.

Atlanta has many residents from other states who are perhaps not familiar with the foodstuffs of the state and clubwomen are asked to bring these goods to the housewives' attention. Later handcraft of the farm women will be handled through the federation at some permanent headquarters in Atlanta.

LaGrange College Campus Notes.

Mr. Johnson, professor of history and economics of the LaGrange High school, spoke on "Europe's Attitude Toward America" at the forum of democracy Tuesday evening.

President W. E. Thompson attended the annual Methodist conference in Atlanta. President Thompson spoke at the reception given by the Atlanta-LaGrange alumnae at the Henry Grady hotel in honor of the ministers and their wives.

The Y. W. C. A. vesper service Sunday evening was conducted by Miss Edna Johnson, traveling secretary of the student volunteer movement, who was a guest of the college during the week-end.

Jewish Woman's Club Sponsors Grand Concert December 4

The Jewish Woman's club is sponsoring a grand concert Sunday evening, December 4, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. Kurt Mueller, well-known Atlanta vocal instructor, arranged the program, featuring three great artists with herself at the piano. Mrs. Mueller will present Mrs. Earl Davis, coloratura soprano; Miss Senta Mueller, well-known violinist. E. W. Wilson, bass concertist, who started in many light operas and is now singing at the Howard theater, will embellish the program with operatics from Verdi and others. Mrs. Isaac Wengrow will be the speaker for the evening. There will be no admission charge. Other concerts to follow will be announced later.

Tuesday night, January 13, the Jewish Woman's club will give a cabaret-dinner, the program of which will be arranged with the help of the Howard theater management.

Psychology Classes.

Each Monday evening at 8 o'clock, beginning January 2, 1928, Dr. Goodrich White, professor in psychology at Emory university, will conduct a class psychology where he wil explain "Why and How We Study Psychology;" "The Psychological Basis of Mental Activity;" "Habit, Its Importance and Its Laws;" "Knowing the World We Live In;" "Sensation and Perception;" "Efficiency in Learning and Work;" "The Emotional Life, Its Development and Control;" "Sleep and Dreams;" "How People Differ;" "Personality and Mental Health."

A dramatic reading of the second act of George Bernard Shaw's "Devil's Disciple" was given Wednesday evening at the club within the reading circle group. The last act will be read Wednesday evening, December 7, at 7:30 o'clock. It will be necessary to hold this reading in the dining room because the rest of the building will be used for theatrical and other purposes. On Wednesday, December 14, George Bernard Shaw will be generally discussed and anecdotes and quotations from George Bernard Shaw will be brought in by the different members. It is expected that on Wednesday, January 4, Dr. Thomas English, of Emory university, will begin his course in literature with this circle. Everybody is invited to join the Reading circle of the Jewish Woman's club.

Classes in music, on all instruments, conducted at the club by Professor Hull and his family every Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, and classes in esthetic dancing and expression, conducted by Mrs. Linwood Jester every Thursday afternoon from 2:30 o'clock, are now functioning. Registration for the classes in music, dancing, expression and vocal training is taken every afternoon in the office. The Thursday evening sociable for December 8 will be postponed for the following week. An instructor in ballroom dancing will then be provided.

A regular matrons' meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon, December 13, at 3 o'clock. Harry Gottheimer will speak on the importance of musical education to children and he will illustrate with the children's orchestra from the Hebrew Orphans' home.

W.C.T.U. Circles Interested In Mrs. Armor's Parable of Trees

M. FRANCES MEADORS BURGHARD.

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Tate, national Woman's Christian Temperance Union director of the evangelistic department, Georgia W. C. T. U. advisory, is also a member of the Macon Writers club. Whatever Mrs. Armor does she does it well. When she kept house, made garments, or taught school it was satisfactorily kept and fashioned and taught. She is a peerless speaker as everyone knows. That is not all, she is a writer of grace and force. The "Parable of the Trees," which follows, a Writers club program contribution, was published in the Union Signal, the national W. C. T. U. periodical, and reprinted here because of its inspiring lesson.

"A Parable of the Trees."

"One evening as I walked by the sea at beautiful Asiloma on the Pacific, my attention was attracted anew to the cedars that grow on that rock-bound coast. They are guarled, knotted, twisted—one would almost say deformed—and yet they hold a charm for every nature lover. I found myself wondering why those cedars are so beloved. There are stately and symmetrical cedars by the thousands, growing in that wonderful, beautiful California, yet these are not the trees chosen by the artists who come to portray with brush or camera the scenic beauty of the west: the paintings and photographs and postcards most sought after by tourists are not those which picture the lovely, graceful trees which have grown in the sunlit sheltered places, but those which depict these other trees with rugged trunks and crooked branches and scanty foliage. That afternoon in the light of the setting sun, they looked strangely beautiful, and once again I questioned in my soul, 'Wherein lies their appeal?' and the answer came, 'It is that they have fought and won.' Beaten by the storms, buffeted by the winds, twisted and wrenched and forced into distorted shape by the gales from the day they first saw the light, they have sent their roots deeper, taken a firmer grip on the rock-bound soil and in spite of bitter blasts and scanty nourishment, have lived and grown. And is it not so with human lives? There are many lives, symmetrical and beautiful, which have grown in the sheltered and sunlit places; these may ornament society and add beauty and even luster to social or church circles, but they can never grip the heart of man nor—I say it reverently—gladden the heart of God like the lives of those who have known the cold blasts of adversity, battled the fierce storms of temptation, bowed before the bitter winds of bereavement and yet have kept—yes, strengthened—their hold on the vital, spiritual things; have lived and grown, fought and won, and have been 'more than conquerers through Him' who loved us.' As this parable of the trees cheered my heart, I pass it on to you."

That 10,000,000 women throughout the country are "not only talking and praying but actually working" to retain prohibition and to see that the law is enforced, was the expressed conviction of Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, chairman of the woman's national committee for law enforcement, who presided at a prayer meeting under the auspices of that organization on Sunday afternoon, November 13, at the Park Avenue Baptist church, New York city.

To counteract the effect of the attacks on prohibition, she urged that "every woman tell everyone every time she has a chance, 'I believe in the eighteenth amendment.'" According to the report in The New York Times testimony favoring prohibition was given by the following prominent leaders of women's national organizations: Dr. Valeria H. Parker, president of the National Council of Women, asserted that under prohibition the number of delinquent children had decreased, and that the streets are now safer for women at night.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, denied that prohibition was making the United States a "nation of liars." "The women helped to bring prohibition and women do not intend to allow what they wrote into the constitution to lapse. This is not a crusade. It is war."

Mrs. William Tilton, national legislative chairman of the Parent-Teacher association, denounced "nullification" and said she was preparing to have all presidential candidates bombarded with letters from every state, demanding an unequivocal stand in favor of prohibition and its enforcement.

Savannah W. C. T. U.

More than 40 years ago the W. C. T. U. adopted the department of peace and arbitration. Mrs. Lella A. Dillard of Cochran is the national director and Mrs. R. L. Miller, of Waynesboro, the state director, and each local union has its local director, who puts on a program at least once each year. Frances E. Willard, the founder of the world's W. C. T. U., said: "Women must organize for peace ere the nations will learn war no more."

The following interesting peace program was given at the Bull Street Baptist church recently by the Savannah W. C. T. U.: After a prayer by Mrs. C. C. Mordecai, the first district W. C. T. U. president, pledging the W. C. T. U. to continue its work for peace, there was a pause of two minutes for silent prayer, when all joined in the "universal thought-chain for world peace." "The Son of God Goes Forth for Peace" was sung, and a Scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Ida Heidt, and Mrs. W. H. Turner led in a peace prayer. A number of quotations on peace from prominent people were given by several members.

Mrs. George S. Patton told of the "Relation of the W. C. T. U. to World Peace," and Mrs. E. R. Carswell related "Some Facts Brought Out By the Committee on Militarism." "The International Creed" was the subject of Mrs. L. L. Davis' reading, and Mrs. T. W. Norwood discussed "Progress Toward International Peace. Mrs. John Thomas read "Brotherhood." "America, the Beautiful" and "Carry On" were sung. The program was enjoyed by a large audience.

District Meetings.

The twelve district presidents are getting ready for their first quarter's meetings, indeed, Mrs. J. O. Ward, of Blackshear, the president in the eleventh district held hers at Waycross, with Miss Charlotte Fraser, a national field secretary as speaker. Mrs. D. D. Smith, of Eastman, presided at the one in the twelfth district, with the fine Chauncey union as hostess.

Mrs. Marvin Williams, of Atlanta, the state president, was the chief speaker at the eighth district rally at Athens on Thursday. Mrs. B. B. Perry, of Monroe, is the new president in the eighth.

Mrs. O. L. Taylor, of Atlanta, president of the fifth district, will preside at a district rally December 7 at the Morningside Presbyterian church, with the large Druid Hills union as hostess.

Mrs. D. A. Warlick, of Macon, the sixth district president, expects to have a district meeting at Barnesville, with Mrs. Florence Ewell Atkins, as speaker, early in the next month.

Mrs. Hattie Rogers, of Sandersville, is arranging the program for her district meeting in the tenth.

Hapeville News Is of Interest.

Hapeville Woman's club has had a busy week with the board meeting Monday morning at the home of the president, Mrs. Walter Stewart, the recital of the College Park chorus Tuesday evening sponsored by the club, the business meeting Thursday afternoon with Mrs. D. B. Evans and the collection of an empty stocking fund in conjunction with the Hapeville P.-T. A.

An appreciative audience heard the program of College Park chorus, which was arranged by Mrs. S. E. Treadwell, of the Hapeville club, and conducted by Mrs. Florence Golson Bateman, organizer and director of this department of College Park Music club. The chorus is composed of 30 trained voices, and while it consists of College Park talent, presents a program by no means amateurish. This organization won a banner last year offered by the State Federation of Music Clubs for the best choral work in the state. The choral work was interspersed with solo numbers by Clarence Wall.

Among interesting reports at the board and business meetings were Mrs. Jere Wells' account of the bazar-tea sponsored by Mrs. Wells and Mrs. H. A. Allen at Mrs. Allen's home recently; Mrs. Hayden Stanley's report of 22 new garments and a cash donation for Needlework guild, and Mrs. Emile Schench's announcement of 11 new members, who are Mesdames Roger Williams, W. C. Dameron, H. P. Stiffe, S. C. Simpson, C. Fred Cox, Frank Davis, N. V. Darley, Oliver Huie, J. L. Nash, Walker, Kinsman and Miss Lucile Settles.

Mrs. Stewart announced that Judge John D. Humphries had offered, as a nucleus for the library which the club wishes to promote, several hundred volumes from his handsome library and several bookcases. The gift was accepted with applause.

Mrs. S. M. Schneider, president of Hapeville P.-T. A. and member of the board of Hapeville Woman's club, the organizations raising the empty stocking fund for this section, announced that more than $35 in cash and much merchandise had already been contributed.

Mrs. Akin Celebrates 79th Birthday.

Mrs. E. E. Akin, of Griffin, who is visiting her daughters, Mrs. Henry F. Smith and Mrs. W. T. S. Brown, of East Point, celebrated her 79th birthday November 27, at the home of Mrs. W. T. S. Brown, where she and Mrs. Smith were joint hostesses at a beautifully appointed dinner.

Joel Chandler Harris Birthday To Be Celebrated December 9

The Uncle Remus Memorial association will observe the birthday of Joel Chandler Harris Friday, December 9, at the Atlanta Woman's club. Mr. Harris has been dead nineteen years, and each year his birthday is observed in a fitting way by the women who have stood by, serving and helping to keep fresh the memory of Georgia's illustrious son. Through the courtesy of the Georgian and American, handsome pictures of Mr. Harris have been presented to the association and they in turn will present them to all the public schools in the city, and also in the county. On the birthday simultaneously in all the schools at 12:30 o'clock these pictures are to be unveiled and a suitable program will be put on by the children of the schools.

At the noon hour a luncheon will be served at the club, at which Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president of the Uncle Remus Memorial association, will preside and Fred J. Paxon will act as toastmaster. A symposium of short talks will pay tribute to Mr. Harris. Conspicuous among the guests will be Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman, Mayor and Mrs. Ragsdale, Hollins Rondolph, Dean Johnston, Eugene Black, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Sutton, Lucian Knight, Dr. Shelton and others. Covers will be laid for 100 guests. The entire membership is invited. Make reservations with Mrs. Raymond O'Kelley or Mrs. Arthur Hale. Plates $1.00. A short business session will be held previous to the luncheon in the Palm Room at the club, at which time the annual reports of all officers will be given and election of officers for the ensuing year will be held. Stress is laid on memberships at this time urging all old members to renew and inviting new members to join.

Music Club Will Present Yaarab Chanters in Concert

The Atlanta Music club will present the Yaarab Chanters in concert at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium, Thursday evening, December 8, at 8:30 o'clock. This is the third attraction on the morning musical programs of the "matinee series" under the chairmanship of Mrs. Charles Chalmers. Owing to other engagements of the Chanters, it was necessary to change from the schedule order of meeting on the first Wednesday to the following evening. There will not be a club meeting on Wednesday morning.

Frank A. Cundell organized the Chanters in 1916 and has remained the director all these years. The standing membership in the organization, made up of many prominent business men of Atlanta, includes, Frank A. Cundell, director; Walter Aichel and Roy C. Petty, accompanists; first tenors, Harry T. Adams, Sidney C. Wooten, Vance Hunter, Paul Crutchfield, Thomas A. Martin, Clarence J. Aldred, Clarence Wall; second tenors, R. Floyd Jennings, George W. Grant, Dr. H. T. Bledsoe, Curtis S. Buford, Alvin E. Evans, W. Bayne Gibson, J. Clyle Withers, Perry Blackshear; baritones, Roy M. Abernathy, W. M. Bearden, W. W. Bateman, Charles H. Chalmers, A. E. Foster, J. Thomas Hoffman, LeRoy Webb; basses, George B. Beck, H. Ed Bary, C. V. Logan, E. T. Booth, Wilbe R. Wilson, John H. Mullin, Ed H. Anchors, Harry M. Root, Jefferson T. Modie.

The program will consist of classical numbers and some of the best loved negro spirituals, the singing of which has made the Chanters famous throughout the land. Solo numbers will be given by Clarence Wall, tenor, and George Grant, violinist.

Membership card admits holder to concert and guest tickets may be procured at the door for 50 cents.

Junior Hadassah To Sponsor Dance For Charity Work

Miss Mamye Jacobs, 940 Virginia avenue, N. E., chairman of the dance to be sponsored by the Atlanta chapter of Junior Hadassah at the Henry Grady hotel, Tuesday evening, December 13. This dance is the first public affair sponsored by the Atlanta unit and plans are being completed to make this affair one of the most elaborate and successful social events taking place this season.

Proceeds of this dance will go towardes the upkeep of the children's village in Palestine, which the Junior Hadassah organization of America maintains. Over 100 boys and girls, mostly orphans, are cared for and scholarships are provided for extended training to prepare these children for fields of usefulness. The local chapter has become very conspicuous in this work under the leadership of Miss Mollie Bressler, president of the Atlanta unit.

Miss Sara Shuman is chairman of the entertainment, Miss Pollye Gershon, refreshment chairman, and Miss Rae Rosenberg publicity chairman. Following this affair the Atlanta chapter will sponsor a lecture by the eminent and nationally known Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, which will be given at the city auditorium in February. Tickets for the dance may be secured by calling Miss Jacobs at Hemlock 7124-W or from any Junior Hadassah member.

Mrs. Everitt Writes Interesting Letter in Regard to Essay

Mrs. R. E. Everitt, the new corresponding secretary of the Georgia division, U. D. C., writes the following letter in regard to her essay which received the $50 prize given by the general organization in Charleston:

"On the U. D. C. official page of The Atlanta Constitution of March 27, 1927, was listed the historical essay prizes for 1927. For reasons given below I was readily attracted and became a contestant for the $50 prize essay, written by members of U. D. C. chapters on 'a tribute to General Paul Jones Semmes, who fell leading a charge at the battle of Gettysburg.'

"In responding to request that I give to readers of these columns information as to how facts, truths of history, were obtained to be compiled in essay form, I am reminded of an old ballad, sung by our grandmothers in the long ago:

"'In a little rosewood casket
That is resting on the stand;
There's a package of old letters
Written by a vanished hand.'

"For it was from a package of war letters written by my father to his wife in 1860-65, and now one of my most valued possessions, that I found many high tributes to General Paul Jones Semmes.

"My father, William R. Stillwell, received his appointment as courier from General Semmes and was thereby closely associated with him. In a letter dated July 10, 1863, he writes, 'General Semmes was wounded through the thigh and I helped to carry him off the field.'

"A later date bears this tribute: 'My good general is gone! Never more to wave his sword at the cannons' mouth in front of his men—Just before he died he called for his sword and Testament, placed his sword by his side, locked his hands around his Testament and across his breast, and turning to a war correspondent he said, "I consider it a privilege to die for my country."'

"And, now after more than 60 years these high tributes to this brave leader and Christian soldier, written by a vanished hand—a voice stilled—a record direct from battlefield that has so thrilled the daughter of a Confederate soldier as to contributing largely, if not wholly, to the winning of the $50 prize awarded to me at the general U. D. C. convention in Charleston, South Carolina."

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

By Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor, Ga. Div. U. D. C.

With the closing of the general convention at Charleston, the new Georgia division administration came into action. Mrs. Trox Bankston, the new division president is planning many interesting features for the work during her term. She is an indefatigable worker, clear in judgment, and with the reins of government resting in such capable hands the Georgia division bids fair to show consistent development. Mrs. H. O. Ball, of Jackson, first vice president, is a woman so well known by the constructive work she has carried on in U. D. C. circles that she needs no eulogy. She is well beloved in her chapter and has done much for its advancement. Upon her election there was a special meeting called and she was presented with beautiful flowers as a token of her chapter's love for her and its appreciation of the honor conferred upon her.

Mrs. Izzie Bashinski, of Dublin, who was elected second vice president, has been auditor for the division for two years. She has done much constructive work as president of the Oconee chapter of Dublin. Mrs. W. H. McKenzie, who succeeds Mrs. Bankston as third vice president upon the expiration of her term, has many honors to her credit. She has been president of the Phil Cook chapter, Montezuma, doing much for the welfare of that organization. She has also been chairman of relics for the past two years under Mrs. Oscar McKenzie's administration and has given true and tried service in all departments. Mrs. Powell Cotter, of Barnesville, who has been recording secretary for a year, proved at the last convention her wonderful capabilities. Even the minutes were correctly taken on time and to the last detail and the division is to be congratulated upon its discernment in the selection fo Mrs. Cotter. Our new corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. E. Everett, gave an extra distinction to the division at the general convention when she was awarded a $50 prize for the best essay on General Semmer offered by the general organization. Mrs. Everett's data was from her father who served under General Semmes making the document one of unique Confederate interest. Mrs. Everett opened her home at the convention, entertaining at a most elaborate tea Wednesday evening. Mrs. Harvey Craig, of Augusta, the registrar of the division who was elected at Statesboro has shown much effective service in her department. Her duties are careful detail work and she has carried it on in a most creditable manner.

Mrs. Charles Tillman, auditor, served the division most efficiently as treasurer two years, so in her new office it is a foregone conclusion that she has every requisite that an efficient state officer needs. Mrs. Kirby Smith Anderson, Madison, assistant historian was a happy choice for the responsible position of helping Miss Ruckerford, beloved historian carry on with proper emphasis the true annals of Confederate history. Miss Lillian Henderson, custodian of world war records, Atlanta, is so very efficient that the division is proud of the fact that her services have been secured. Miss Rebekah Black DuPont carries on most faithfully her duties as recorder of crosses and is ever at her post. Mrs. Julian Lane, treasurer, who was elected at Statesboro ever guards the gold with care and accuracy. She is a loyal member of the official family and is ever true to her obligations and the workings of the division. The rhythmic pen of our beloved poet laureate, Mrs. Loula Kendall Rogers has ever brought forth the poetic measure of the work of the organization. Her annual poems which are read at each convention are of inspirational value.

The honorary presidents, Mrs. W. S. Coleman, Atlanta; Mrs. Ida Evans Eve, August, and Miss Anna Caroline Benneny, Columbus, are of whom have been of invaluable assistance complete the list of officers of the new official family—which is a credit to any organization.

Mrs. W. Trox Bankston announces that the list of new chairmen will appear as soon as her appointments have been completed.

Resolution Adopted.

Mrs. Howard McCall, whose middle name has been called "resolutions," has sent in a complete report of the resolutions passed at the Covington convention. This list is of interest for such resolution seems to be of real worth in the progression of the work. Mrs. McCall is to be commended upon this complete and carefully arranged report.

Those who will make the trip to Washington to see one of the most interesting events of vital importance in Confederate histroy, will stand, no doubt, in awed silence when the statue of Alexander Stephens is unveiled in the Hall of Fame. That such distinction should fall upon the memory of the first and only vice president of the Confederacy is only the just deserts of true and heroic bravery. And the noble woman, Mrs. J. M. High, who by her generosity made this gift possible for the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C., will ever more hold a prominent place in the Hall of Fame in our hearts.

Mrs. Hinman Lectures To Kirkwood League.

Mrs. George Hinman, world traveler and connoisseur of art, will lecture on "Modern Art" at the meeting of the Kirkwood Civic league Tuesday, December 6, at 3 o'clock, in the auditorium of Kirkwood school. Having seen, loved and studied for many years both the old and new masters, Mrs. Hinman catches the vision of the artist. She dreamed his pictures and will illustrate her lecture with fine print reproductions.

Mrs. A. I. Branham, president, asks the executive board to meet at 2:30 o'clock.

Scrip Dance At Oglethorpe.

A scrip dance open to the college sets of Atlanta will be sponsored by the Oglethorpe University orchestra Monday night, in the Oglethorpe gymnasium, it was announced by George Holloway, orchestra leader. The music will last from 9 to 12 o'clock.

Recital To Be Given At West End Church.

Miss Lily Allen, pianist, and Mrs. R. E. Cothran, soprano, will be heard in a joint recital Tuesday, December 6, at 8:15 o'clock at the West End Presbyterian church. Miss Helen Battle, teacher of piano and voice, will furnish accompaniments. Mrs. Jack Williams will be heard in a violin obligato for the final number, "Spring Song" by O. Weil.

O. E. S. Chapter Plans Oyster Supper.

Oakland City chapter, O. E. S. No. 260, will sponsor an oyster supper from 5 to 10 o'clock December 17 at the corner of Dill avenue and Sylvan road. The public is invited.

Maxwell-Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Maxwell, of Elberton, announce the marriage of their daughter, Pearl, to David Bennett Stewart, of Atlanta. The marriage was solemnized November 20.

Miss Mary Vaughan Wins Cup Given For U. D. C. Service

One of the high lights of the recent national U. D. C. convention held in Charleston, S. C., in November, turned the spotlight upon 12-year-old Mary Vaughan, who has ministered unselfishly to the comfort of an aged couple, a Confederate veteran and his wife, in Clarksville, Va., who received tangible reward for her services, in being selected to receive the Mollie Day Daffan cup by the assembled convention.

The trophy was offered for the first time to the child performing the most outstanding deed of individual service to a Confederate veteran or a Confederate veteran's widow. The aged couple are enfeebled by more than 80 years, and Mary Vaughan has daily brightened the lives of this couple by kindness. She is reported to have gone for their mail, even swept the floor, and did small laundering for the grateful couple.

The cup is three feet high and was presented to little Mary Vaughan, who did not attend the convention, by Mrs. R. E. King, of Portsmouth, Va., who carried it to her. The cup will be on exhibition in other cities to inspire kindred acts in Children of the Confederacy, of which the little 12-year-old girl is a member. Miss Kate Daffan, of Ennis, Texas, awarded the cup as a memorial to her mother.

Chapter Meetings

The Covington chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, met at the library Tuesday afternoon, November 22, Mrs. Bangston presiding. Several letters were read from state officers and distinguished visitors attending the state convention, expressing appreciation for their delightful entertainment while in the city.

Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, chairman of finance committee, reported that after all bills had been paid for convention entertainment there was a balance in the treasury of $247.58, which was very gratifying. Mrs. Sockwell also reported that $150 clear was made on the historical edition of the Covington News. Motion was made and carried to place this fund on a savings account until some special need arises for its use.

A vote of thanks was given Mrs. R. A. Norris, chairman of entertainment committee; Mrs. J. C. Upshaw, chairman of homes committee, and Mrs. C. A. Sockwell, chairman of finance committee. Mrs. R. E. Everitt was introduced as the new state corresponding secretary of the Georgia division. The names of Mrs. C. D. Ramsey, Misses Sue and Marthy Ramsey and Mrs. A. S. Piper were presented for membership.

Notes of sympathy were to be sent to Mrs. I. W. Birdsong, Mrs. E. M. Piper, Mrs. J. A. Wright and Miss Martha Robertson. Mrs. E. B. Nelson read at note of thanks from the Soldiers' home for a box of jellies and preserves sent in October. Mrs. Nelson and Mrs. R. M. Mobley gave an excellent report of the convention in Covington, and Mrs. W. T. Bankston gave a clear and very interesting report on the general convention held in Charleston, S. C. Mrs. R. E. Everitt told the story of what led her to write the essay which won the $50 prize. Mrs. R. M. Mobley read a splendid paper on Wayne county.

Jackson, Ga.—An interesting meeting of the Larkin D. Watson chapter, U. D. C., was held in the club rooms Thursday afternoon of the past week, with Mrs. C. W. Buchanan, Mrs. L. P. McKibben, Mrs. R. P. Newton, Mrs. L. P. Lester, Mrs. A. F. Whitney, Miss Bessie Waldrop, Miss Nettie Rae Pittman and Miss Mary Newton entertaining. In recognition of the honor bestowed upon the president, Mrs. H. O. Ball, when she was elected first vice president of the state at the annual convention in Covington recently, Mrs. J. T. Moore, in a few appropriate words, presented her with a corsage in behalf of the chapter, and Miss Ina McMichael, secretary, read a letter of congratulation to the chapter from Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, of Montezuma, retiring state president.

At the business session, interesting reports from chairmen and officers were made, and upon recommendation of the historian, Miss Bessie Waldrop, it was decided that the chapter history be printed, so that every member might have complete records of the chapter. A splendid report from the state convention in Covington was given by Mrs. J. T. Moore, who, with the president and Mrs. R. W. Mays, director of the Children of the Confederacy, represented the chapter at the convention. Mrs. Mays also gave interesting details of the convention. By unanimous vote, a telegram was sent by the chapter in session to Mrs. L. D. Watson, Sr., who is ill in Barnesville. Mrs. Watson was the faithful president for years and is held in highest esteem as honorary president for life.

With Mrs. Van Fretwell in charge, an enjoyable program was given by Mrs. Horace O'Neal and Mrs. Clarence Compton on the official subject, "Wayne County." Mrs. O'Neal read an interesting paper on the life of General Anthony Wayne, for whom the county was named, and Mrs. Compton gave some leading facts about the county. At the conclusion of the program the chapter rose in sympathy with the family of Mrs. Sanders Rowland, of Decatur, who was a charter member and whose funeral rites were being read at that hour. Mrs. W. S. Adams, the chaplain, led in the prayer of sympathy.

Statesboro, Ga.—The Bulloch County chapter at its last meeting was entertained at the home of Mrs. Herschel Franklin. After an interesting program and business meeting, Mrs. Julian Lane, president of the chapter, introduced Miss Mamie Hall, who is leaving soon for Shanghai, China, by telling of the heroic deeds of Miss Hall's grandfathers, who were brave Confederate soldiers. Immediately following this Miss Hall was presented with three small flags; Mrs. Inman Foy presented the United States flag, Miss Hattie Powell the Georgia flag and Miss Almarita Booth the flag of the Confederacy. Mrs. Julian C. Lane then presented Miss Hall with a gold U. D. C. badge.

By Bessie S. Stafford,
Editor Woman's Department.

From childhood up Miss Mary Brent Whiteside has been a poet, wonderfully versatile in her themes and composition, and is known today all over the world as a creator of some of the most potent sonnets ever written. The muse of lyric poetry, Euterpe, has guided her imaginative genius along the highway of sincerely felt emotion, and she gives to her readers dramatic, descriptive and inspirational verse through which filters a definite philosophy. In her exquisite poem, "The Carpenter," appearing for the first time in Holland's December magazine, she portrays the earthly life of Jesus during the years He prepared for the ministry, taking His life by day and by night living as a workman among working men, adding the sacred history of the scriptures as a background. Miss Whiteside traversed for twelve months the same pathways in the Holy Land that the lowly Carpenter measured daily, and embellished His movements and sights arresting His attention in poetic language. In the opening lines His humble station is revealed thusly:

"This He was then—
A workman among working men."

The land of Gennesaret, rich in the gorgeous fruits of of its vineyards, of which St. Matthew and St. Mark narrate in the New Testament; the shade of wide-branched olive trees, underneath whose spreading branches He ofttimes sought shelter from the metallic blaze of light caused by the sun's noonday rays beating upon the amber walls; and the pink-tinted, fragrant blossoms of almond trees—so like the peachtree blooms of the southland—rising in splendor on the hilltops, contrasting against the azure blue sky, influenced Miss Whiteside to say in her anthology:

"He knew the orchards of Gennersaret;
The circled vineyards, that were set
Like living cinctures, branch and root,
And jeweled with their purple fruit.
The somber olives, wide of limb,
Had sheltered Him
At noontide, when He had to pass
Beneath a sky of shimmering brass.
He knew the almond trees, that spread
Frail rosy clouds above His head;
The groves of oak and terebinth,
And where the fruit colocynth
Ran tangled through the scarlet fires
Of lilies and anemones,
And where, above the walnut trees,
The tall firs lifted living spires."

Dexterous craftsmanship and skilled artistry lie in the lines describing the setting of the sun and appearance of the stars and the sublime majesty of the night viewed in those evenings ages ago by the Carpenter, just as the human eye catches today the glories of a departing day and the descending night. Miss Whiteside soars to divinely poetic heights in exercising the beauty of her gift to appreciative readers in the following stanza:

"He knew the miracle of night; the throbbing gold
Of eastern stars, merging in wistful rose
Of day that lingers here as though to hold
The blended glories, and reluctant, goes
Down the wide hills at last, and toward the sea.
These things He knew, and all the majesty
Of planets set on height ascending height—
Vistas and terraces of light,

MISS MARY BRENT WHITESIDE

As though divided by a single breath,
Were God—and Nazareth."

Challenging wider appreciation of her poetic genius is the description that after two thousand years fishing boats still go out upon the Sea of Galilee, just as boats were wont to do ages ago when The Carpenter walked beside the sea. Plodding camels look like silhouettes etched against the sky at the breaking of the rosy dawn, and in this twentieth century visit to the Holy Land Miss Whiteside caught the glorified vision which prompted the following magic and appealing version:

"Here were no dark misgivings, and no doubt,
All night He lived a greater prayer than words,
Until at dawn He saw the fishing fleets go out,
Like a low flight of birds.
He watched the hill slopes lightly sprayed with gold;
The olives etched in radiance, that were dark.
He saw the sheep come bleating from the fold,
And in the air, a lark.
While down the road, between the hills, at last,
With tinkling bells, a train of camels passed,
With rhythmic steps. He saw them go
Upon their way to Jericho.
And in His shop, He knew, were good
Red cedar boards and olive wood,
Where waiting for His fingers, were
The labors of a carpenter."

Faithful to the exquisite beginning of "The Carpenter," a poem exemplifying Miss Whiteside's extraordinary talent, she ends the poem by saying:

"A night of stars and God—and then
A workman's toil with wonving men."

Local B.P.O.E. Holds Memorial Service Tonight

Anual memorial exercises of the Atlanta lodge of Elks will be held at 8 o'clock tonight in Keith's Georgia theater. Elaborate preparations have been completed for the ceremonies, which are expected to attract the largest attendance in the history of the local lodge and which will be participated in by a large number of civic leaders.

Miss Copeland Contributes Nancy Hart Family History

Miss Edna Arnold Copeland, a student of revolutionary history in the Elberton High schools, today contributes a very interesting and little known bit of family history of the Georgia patriot, Nancy Morgan Hart. Miss Copeland's article follows:

It is always interesting to know something about the family line of a revolutionary hero and heroine. I do not believe it is generally known that Nancy Morgan Hart was a cousin of America's best loved pioneer, "Daniel Boone."

Where did Nancy Morgan Hart come from, and what were her people like? No one answers these questions. Miss Floyd, of Evansville, Ind., wrote me some months ago that her father had lived in the home with Nancy Hart, although he was quite a child when she died. He remembered having been told by others who had come in daily contact with her, that she was a first cousin of Daniel Boone. Nancy Hart was Mr. Floyd's aunt. Compare what follows with what I have already told you and see if you do not agree with me that Daniel Boone and Nancy Hart were cousins.

"Several years before the revolutionary war a Devonshire weaver came to settle in the Quaker colony of Pennsylvania, bringing with him his wife and a large family of boys and girls, whose influence for good in the country has been great and far-reaching. Squire Boone, one of these boys, married Sarah Morgan, a Welch Quakeress, and Daniel Boone was one of their sons. When Daniel Boone was 16 the family left Pennsylvania and traveled through the Shanandoah valley into North Carolina. They took two years on the way, but at length reached their destination and settled down at Blue Lick in the Yadkin valley, N. C. So much of 'so little' has been written of Nancy Hart, glimpses of her are caught only as the famous Harts open the doors to come and go. Instead of commemorating (Nancy only), there always follows a suggestion of the illustrious Hart family. Records state that Nancy, or "Ann" Hart, was a daughter of Thomas Morgan, who was an uncle of Daniel Boone. Of course Daniel and Nancy were first cousins—who doubts it?"

COMMODORE RICHARD DALE HOLDS INTERESTING MEETING.

Commodore Richard Dale chapter, D. A. R., celebrated Armistice and Thanksgiving day in November at the federated clubhouse. An additional substantial contribution will be made to Constitution Hall, the chapter last year having purchased a chair in honor of Mrs. John D. Pope, ex-regent. All requirements for the honor roll have been complied with and the Lucy Cook Peel memorial book purchased and found to be most helpful. A contribution to Kenmore was authorized, and a loan scholarship awarded. The usual medals and prizes will be given to the High school students for public speaking and historical essays at the close of school. The chapter made a donation of clothing to the flood sufferers at the request of the regent, Mrs. T. W. Ventulett.

Mrs. J. J. Davis read an Armistice day and Thanksgiving day message from the president general. "Home, Sweet Home" was sung by Mrs. H. H. Perry, accompanied by Mrs. C. M. Strong, and a swetch of the author, John Howard Payne, was given by Mrs. Perry. The hostess were Mesdames T. H. Milner, Chandler Jones and J. Irwin Davis.

JOHN LAURENS CHAPTER CELEBRATES NATIONAL BIRTHDAY.

John Laurens chapter, D. A. R., October meeting was held at the home of Mrs. S. M. Kellam, and celebrated the birthday of the national society. Money was voted to purchase books necessary for study of the year's subject, "The Enduring Spirit of '76." Mrs. J. S. Adams, regent, spoke of the pressing need for completion of Constitution hall, urging each member who has not contributed to do so immediately, that in 1928 in the words of Mrs. Brosseau, "finished" may be written across the pages of the record.

Mrs. Pope, publicity chairman, stressed necessity of chapter doing its part toward advertising the uplifting work of the national society, that America and the world will be conversant with the principles for which she stands. She said, "Daughters, familiarize yourself with the work Mrs. Fries is undertaking for publicity." Earnest cooperation was requested with Mrs. Walker in her work for national defense in stamping out the wave of communism, bolshevism and atheism with which our country is being threatened.

National and D. A. R. flags; red, white and blue flowers and tapers; a huge birthday cake, representing a colonial fort, from whose port holes 37 candles typifying the 37 years' existence of the national society, emphasized the purpose of meeting—namely, that of celebrating the founding of our great organization.

Mrs. Primm gave "History of the National Society Daughters of American Revolution." Mrs. Hooks gave "History of John Laurens Chapter." Thomas Kellam, in colonial costume, was mascot for the occasion.

CAMILLA CHAPTER, D. A. R. CELEBRATES NAVAL DAY.

Navy day was recognized by the new Camilla D. A. R. November 3. Each member gave a short survey of her ancestral lines, which showed that a number of revolutionary naval heroes were the forbears of Camilla members. One being Governor John Branch, the grandfather of Mrs. Josie Branch Cullens. He was three times a governor, a United States senator, representative to congress, and secretary of the navy during Jackson's administration. The regent, Mrs. Ruth Walker Stevenson, read a copy of the last will and testament of her ancestor, John F. Alderman, who lived in Ipswich, England. The will was written in 1640 and executed in 1642 in the parish of Ipswich. She also showed the photograph of John Alderman's desk, which was brought from England to Salem, Mass., in 1630, and is now in possession of Mrs. Stevenson's kinsman, J. F. Alderman, of Henderson, N. C. Mrs. Nannie Hamilton Brinberry read a sketch of her ancestor, who was one of the signers of the Mecklenberg declaration. Mrs. J. L. Gray gave a record of her forebear, William Crawford, at one time secretary of war. Mrs. Roselle Mercier Montgomery's poem entitled "On Being an Ancestress," was read by Mrs. B. C. Gardner. This poem was published recently in the Ladies' Home Journal, and comment made upon the lineage of Mrs. Montgomery, who is a Georgia woman, born at Crawfordville, and now living in Augusta. Some of Charles Wesley's songs, written during "the days that tried men's souls," were sung by the chapter.

The chapter commemorated Armistice day in a program with the Camilla public schools, paying tribute to the local world war veterans who made the "supreme sacrifice," also honored those who still live, having done a duty well in defense of right. Mrs. J. M. Spence was hostess.

JOHN BALL CHAPTER OBSERVES ARMISTICE DAY.

Mrs. J. W. Hooks was hostess to the John Ball chapter, D. A. R., on Armistice day, at her home in Gordon. Second vice regent, Mrs. C. G. Chapman, had charge of the meeting in the absence of the regent. An interesting exhibit of sewing, the work of the county 4-H club girls, was shown, the chapter presenting a gold thimble as first prize to Miss Mabel Gladden. Mrs. G. C. Kitchens presented silver thimbles to Miss Mary Ellen Cook, Miss Mary Townsend, Miss Ruby Davidson and Miss Mary Richardson, other prize winners.

The chapter will observe Arbor day, December 7, with exercises at the Wilkinson courthouse, and will sponsor the work of beautifying the courthouse grounds under the direction of the forestry department. Interesting papers were read by Miss Clara Barton and Mrs. H. C. Wood and musical numbers were given by Mrs. J. H. Porter, Jr., and Miss Elizabeth Todd.

COUNCIL OF SAFETY CHAPTER HOLDS MEETING.

Armistice and Thanksgiving day were celebrated by the Council of Safety chapter, D. A. R., in the home of Mrs. J. A. Dixon, Mrs. J. D. Hooks and Mrs. M. H. Wheeler being joint hostesses. The regent, Mrs. J. E. Sparks, presided, and plans for a benefit party were outlined. After a short business session, an enjoyable program was given, including music and a paper on "Why We Should Cherish Armistice Day" was read by Mrs. Hooks. Mrs. J. W. Fitts read a Thanksgiving poem, and "Home, Sweet Home" was read by Mrs. Hoke Shirley. Rev. Hoke Shirley gave an address on "Facts Concerning the World War."

OCHLOCKNEE CHAPTER CHANGES NAME.

Mrs. R. G. Mays and Mrs. J. L. Turner were hostesses at the home of the former to the Ochlocknee chapter, D. A. R., at the November meeting. Mrs. Cadar Parker, regent, presided. This chapter has had under advisement for some time the matter of changing its name since much confusion has arisen because of a town bearing the same name, Ochlocknee. As soon as the change can be ratified by D. A. R. officials at Washington, the name of the chapter will be changed to that of Thomasville chapter.

Four new members, Mrs. E. K. McLean, Mrs. Oscar Miller, Mrs. C. H. Redfern and Mrs. Monsel Bracey, were welcomed into the chapter. November being the birth month of John Howard Payne, "Home, Sweet Home," of which he was author, was the musical number given. Mrs. Charles Riley read "In Flanders Field," and "The Answer to Flanders Field," the program being in observance of Armistice day.

SAVANNAH CHAPTER, D. A. R., MEETS AT MRS. ROUX.

The Savannah chapter, D. A. R., held the November meeting at the home of Mrs. R. H. Roux, the program celebrating Armistice day and Thanksgiving. Mrs. Lowry Axley, who had charge of the program, read the Thanksgiving message of the president general, Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau.

Mrs. J. Conrad Puder, read an original paper on the homeless poet, John Howard Payne, on "His Visit to Georgia," while Mrs. C. Buford Smith read an article entitled "Home, Sweet Home's Premiere" and the romance of the singer. "Early Puritan Homes" and "Thanksgiving, Then and Now" were the subjects of interesting talks by Miss Catherine Baille. Musical selections were given by Mrs. W. L. Taylor and Mrs. Iola Bishop.

The chapter voted to purchase a chair in Constitution Hall in honor of Mrs. W. A. Binburn, a past regent, who served the chapter faithfully for eleven years. A Savannah girl will be given a year's scholarship by the chapter, the school to be decided upon later.

The historical program for the January meeting will have for its subject "Bethesda," the chapter offering five dollars for the best essay on Bethesda, and the second prize to be three dollars, offered only to boys living at the home. Mrs. J. B. Knox will have charge of this feature.

TOCCOA CHAPTER HOLDS THANKSGIVING MEETING.

The Toccoa chapter, D. A. R., met recently at the residence of Mrs. Winston Owen, the regent, Mrs. Howell Cox, presiding. Plans were discussed for marking the graves of three Revolutionary soldiers, which have been located in Stephens county by Mrs. E. E. Mitchell, registrar and genealogist. The graves will be properly marked in the near future. Of special interest was the sketch of the life of John Howard Payne, read by Mrs. Mac Crawford. A paper by Mrs. Frank Gross, showing the part the women played in the Spanish-American war was most interesting.

Mrs. John Crawford read an article on the origin of Thanksgiving which was much enjoyed. The meeting adjourned with singing, "Keep the Home Fires Burning."

SARAH DICKINSON CHAPTER ISSUES CALANDAR.

The Sarah Dickinson chapter, D. A. R., of Newnan, has issued a very attractive and complete calendar for the new year, containing programs on "Historic Homes." Armistice day was observed with a special program in the schools, conducted by chapter members. A committee from the chapter, acting with one from the American Legion, placed red flowers, tied with the national colors, on the bronze memorial tablet, erected in memory of world war soldiers.

BARNARD TRAIL CHAPTER MEETS AT MRS. JEFFORDS.

Barnard Trail chapter D. A. R. held its November meeting at the home of Mrs. D. G. Jeffords, the vice regent who presided. The budget committee gave its report, stating that the chapter would meet all honor roll requirements.

Mrs. R. A. Holmes, the chairman of the patriotic education committee, reported that her committee was encouraging the memorizing of patriotic songs and poems in the school and was going to plant trees and shrubs.

The medals and prizes committee offers a medal to the best all-round student of American history in the senior class of the high school. The citizenship medals and the prize in home economics are to be offered as have been done for the past few years. Also a prize of $3 is offered to the grade between the first and the seventh which memorizes perfectly the largest number of patriotic songs. Mrs. J. S. O'Shea, who spoke in behalf of the committee, made a strong appeal that all the patriotic songs be memorized as the average citizen cannot appreciate the national airs of his native land because of his inability to join in the singing of these songs.

The history committee reported that "The Barnard Trail" and the "Noble Wimberly Jones" chapter of Shellman had placed the marker on the grave of Purnell Truitt, a Revolutionary soldier who is buried in Wilkes county. Mrs. Grubbs, the chairman of the committee, recommended that other markers be applied for so that the chapter might be able to mark the graves of Revolutionary soldiers in this county. She also reported that the history of Worth county had been put in pageant form by the history and patriotic education committees.

Mrs. Jeffords called the attention of the chapter to the fact that November 11 nine years ago, was the most eventful date within the memories of those present. The chapter was urged not to forget the significance of this date, and Miss Marguerite O'Sheal rendered "In Flanders Field."

Mrs. Clifford Grubbs read a paper on "The Battle of Saratoga and its Effects." The program was concluded with a piano solo by Miss Evelyn Strangward. Mrs. D. G. Jeffords and Mrs. R. A. Holmes were hostesses.

SERGEANT NEWTON CHAPTER HOLDS REGULAR MEETING.

Sergeant Newton chapter Daughters of the American Revolution met at the home of Mrs. F. E. Heard with Mrs. R. A. Norris, regent, presiding, in November.

Miss Sallie Mae Sockwell expressed felicitations of Sergeant Newton chapter in the election of Mrs. W. Trox Bankston as president of Georgia State Division United Daughters of the Confederacy. The program committee, Mrs. Lester Lee, chairman, presented the following interesting numbers: "The Meaning of Thanksgiving and Armistice Day," Mrs. Lamar Smith; "John Howard Payne," Mrs. Walker Combs; "The Puritans and Their Homes," Mrs. R. M. Mobley. Mrs. Lester Lee, Mrs. J. O. Cooper and Mrs. F. E. Heard were hostesses.

JOHN HOUSTON D. A. R. MET AT MRS. LEWIS'.

John Houston chapter D. A. R. celebrated Armistice day the guests of Mrs. F. C. Lewis, Mrs. J. F. Johnson assisting. Mrs. Estelle Pye, is regent of the chapter. The program was in charge of Mrs. L. C. Girardeau, and included a sketch of the life of John Howard Payne, a talk on th efirst Thanksgiving, an Armistice day address and several musical numbers and readings.

Help for Rural Children Will Be Society's Program

Energies of the Children's Aid Society of Georgia in the future will be directed to eliminating suffering among children in the rural districts of Georgia, it was announced Saturday following a meeting of the board of directors in the offices of the society. The decision was formed in pursuance with the organization's policy of giving relief only to the neediest children in the state, it was said.

In presenting the matter to the meeting, Robert B. McCord, executive director, explained that Georgia is largely rural and yet its relief and welfare organizations are confined in territory and scope almost entirely to the larger cities. He declared it was natural that the need for social service should make its first and strongest impression in the more crowded centers of population for the distresses there are to be seen in impressive numbers by the public.

"On the other hand," he explained, "there is no suffering experienced by unfortunates in the city that is not as great in the more sparsely settled communities, unless it be overcrowding. Country folks do have plenty of room, but over against this advantage they have a remoteness and a seclusion from those who might observe their distresses and assist them. Moreover, the neediest of them generally have a remarkable pride that often prevents them from calling upon outsiders for even temporary help. On this account much suffering of a permanently handicapping nature is experienced by many rural children, and it is to reach and relieve some of thi ssuffering that the aid society will direct its efforts in the coming year."

Mr. McCord further explained that it would be impossible to adequately finance this aid work to the rural child with only the funds that may be raised in the more sparsely settled quarters of the state, but a number of country born men and women now in the cities would be glad to have a part in this relief to the needy children of Georgia's flatwoods, hills and mountains.

Dr. William Nevin Adkins, president of the Children's Aid society, made the statement in the meeting that not only the Atlanta group of directors, but the men and women serving on the board of the society in different parts of the state were either born in the rural districts or have kept in close touch with the problems and needs of the country sections.

Among the officers and directors of the society are Dr. William Nevin Adkins, president; I. S. Milner, vice president; C. M. Lancaster, secretary; J. F. Creel, treasurer; H. A. Allen, attorney; O. E. Collum, J. L. Mauldin, Mrs. Katehrine Weathersbee, Robert B. McCord, of Atlanta; J. T. Norris, Cartersville; Dr. Pat Howard, College Park; G. D. Perry, Madison; Judge G. B. Ridley, Zebulon; A. S. Camp, Newnan; Roy V. Harris, Louisville; W. J. Powell, Thomasville; C. T. Tillman, Quitman; Mrs. I. G. Bishop, Savannah; E. F. Waters, Elijay; Mrs. R. K. Matthews, Eatonton; E. A. Atlanta Biltmore Announces Social Program for Holidays

Monday, during the luncheon hour from 12 until 2 o'clock at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, Johnny Johnson will present Mack Davis and his famous orchestra for their first appearance to Atlanta for an indefinite period. On this day, as well as every day in the week excepting Sunday, many parties will assemble in the main dining room of the hotel, where luncheons will be served and the best music ever heard in Atlanta may be enjoyed during the meal, or for dancing.

An elaborate social program has been planned at the hotel for every day during the holidays. Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday evenings, from 6:30 until 8:30 o'clock, dinner and dancing may be enjoyed in the main dining room of the hotel.

Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday evenings there will be dining and dancing in the main dining room of the hotel from 9 until 12 o'clock. Wednesday evening of each week there will be the regular debutante night dinner-dance in the ballroom from 9 until 12 o'clock. Saturday there will be the regular tea-dance in the ballroom of the hotel from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Mack Davis and his orchestra will come direct to the Atlanta Biltmore hotel from the Post Lodge Inn, in the suburbs of New York, and immediately upon arriving here will be one of the drawng cards for the many social entertainments planned and given at the hotel preceding and after Christmas.

Reservations for any of these affairs may be made by calling Mr. Himmell, at the Biltmore, Hemlock 5200.

Delta Tau Delta Gives Sixth Annual 'All State' Dinner

One of the most enjoyable events of the week-end among fraternity circles was the sixth annual "all state" dinner of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity, which assembled a large gathering Friday evening, on the eve of the Tech-Georgia game.

The affair was held in one of the private dining rooms of the Atlanta Athletic club, dinner being served to over a hundred and fifty Deltas coming from the active chapters at the University of Georgia, Georgia Tech, and Emory university. With alumni from all over the south, including representatives from the alumni chapters at Savannah, Augusta and Macon, the air of a southeastern convention was much in evidence.

The dining room was beautifully decorated in the franternity colors of purple, white and gold, which was carried out with ribbons and flowers while placed just behind the speakers' table was a large illuminated badge, a replica of the fraternity pin.

Acting as toastmaster was Thomas I. Miller, president of the southern division of the Delta Tau Delta, who introduced the speakers for the evening who were Captain Samuel Harrison, U. S. A., of Fort McPherson; Kenyon Zahner, of Atlanta; Minton Booth, of Statesboro, and Fred Wenn, director of the commerce department of Georgia Tech.

At the conclusion of the banquet the newly elected officers of the Atlanta alumni chapter were installed. They are William Fulghum, president; Theo Bean, vice president; Dawson Durden, secretary, and Jerry White, treasurer.

Roy Petty was chairman of the entertainment committee and was assisted by J. C. Shelor, William Fulghum, T. I. Miller and George Dowman.

Agnes Scott Club To Give Operetta December Tenth

The Agness Scott Glee club will present "The Gitana," a Gypsy operetta in two acts, by Joseph L. Roeckle, on Saturday, December 10, at the Agnes Scott gymnasium-auditorium. Mr. Roeckle is a distinguished British composer, and this operetta is one of his most colorful and tuneful numbers. It offers wide range for musical and dramatic ability. The Agnes Scott girls and their director, Mrs. Lewis H. Johnson, have spared no effort to make it a success. Elaborate costumes have been especially designed for the cast and chorus and several ballets are included in this gay light opera. These are under the direction of Miss Hortense Elton, a member of the Municipal Light Opera company last season.

The scene varies from the joyous life of the Spanish Gypsies to the stately atmosphere of the royal court at Alhambra. A mystical scene of unusual beauty in which Zayda, a princess who had been kidnaped in her childhood, seeks the advice of the Ladye of the Fountain, opens the second act. The music is particularly lovely and the theme varies from the characteristic Gypsy tunes, accompanied by tambourines and castanets, to lyrical beauty, in which harps and violins dominate.

The cast includes: Zayda, Miss Mary Ruth Roundtree, of Summitt; The Queen of Spain, Miss Virginia Miller, of Huntington, W. Va.; Royal Page, Miss Ruth Thomas, of Redford, Va.; Ladye of the Enchanted Fountain, Miss Vivian Bryant, of Decatur; Spirits of the Fountain, Miss Lillian Le Conte, of Atlanta; Miss Hortense Elton, of Newport, Ark., and Miss Sarah Currie, of Parkton, N. C. They are assisted by a large and well-trained chorus. The performance will start at 8:15 o'clock. Admission will be 50 cents.

Y. W. C. A. Poster Contest Open To Atlanta Women and Girls

The Y. W. C. A. poster contest, open to Atlanta women and girls, in which a prize of $7.50 each will be awarded, has been launched with Miss Julia Ewing White, general secretary, making the announcement. Its object is to acquaint the contestants and the general public with phases of the Y. W. C. A. program, one phase of which must be depicted by each poster, which will be used afterward for display purposes. The contest continues through January 15, when a committee of competent judges will select the best entry from the two groups into which the posters will be divided. Information of the Y. W. C. A. division may be had from the information desk, Y. W. C. A. building, 37 Auburn avenue, bulletins having been prepared for the use of contestants.

Regulations Stressed.

Posters submitted must be in accord with the following regulations: 1—The contest is open to any girl or woman in the city of Atlanta or vicinity with the exception of professional artists. Two prizes of $7.50 each will be awarded, one in class A, for the best poster submitted by a person under 18 years of age, and one in class B for the best poster submitted by a person 18 years of age or over. 2—All posters must be received by 5 p. m. January 15. 3—All posters must be submitted flat (no rolled or folded work accepted) and each one must have the name of the contestant clipped to it in a sealed envelope, on the outside of which shall be marked either class A or class B. There shall be no identification marks on the poster itself.

4—Posters must be made on poster board, must be at least 22 by 28 inches in size and may be either in black and white or in colors. They must depict a phase of the Y. W. C. A. program.

5—Every poster submitted must be the original work of the contestant. It is permissible for two or more persons to collaborate on the same poster provided that this fact is stated in the envelope and that the poster is entered in the class required by the oldest member of the group.

6—Contestants agree to accept the decision of the judges as final. All posters submitted will become the property of the Y. W. C. A. and after the contest will be used as the association sees fit.

Miss Lucile Crabtree, director of health education for the Y. W. C. A., announces the formation of a girls' basketball league, playing in accordance with girls' rules. At present the league is composed of the Y. W. C. A. Business Girls' team, Sears-Roebuck, Central Night school and a team from the First Christian church. The Y. W. C. A. Business Girls' team plans to play several out-of-town games as well as their league games.

Three new Red Cross Life Saving classes are being formed by Miss Melveen Gaulding, swimming instructor. The senior classes, for girls and women 18 and over, meet, one at 9:30 a. m. Monday and Friday, the other at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday and Thursday. The junior class, for the younger girls, meets at 3:30 Wednesday afternoon. These classes have just started and those who wish to join are urged to register right away. There is no charge for this work except the regular price of a dip-ticket to the pool.

Two electric dryers for the swimming pool dressing room have been added and will add greatly to the comfort of all who use the pool.

A volley ball team is being formed by members of the industrial department. These girls are selling candy and Christmas cards to raise funds for the clubs and have been aided very much by the loan of a showcase for their candy by E. I. Partridge, manager of the Hamilton-Carhartt company, where many of the members are employed.

The council of the Business Girls' league meets Monday, December 5, at 6 o'clock, for supper and business meeting at the Y. W. C. A. The High School and Inter-Club council, of the Y. W. C. A. Girl Reserves, met Friday, December 2, with officers of the Fulton High club in charge of the program.

College Park Music Club Presents Evening Concert Meeting Dec. 6

College Park Music club will present the first of a series of evening meetings Tuesday evening, December 6, at 8 o'clock in the auditorium of the College Park Woman's clubhouse. The artists include George Baker, Jr., and Edward Kane, and will be accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Frances Stovall Felder. Mrs. Harry McCowan is chairman for evening programs, consisting of semi-classic and lighter form of music, and will be open to the public. All members of the club are urged to invite friends to attend.

Mr. Baker and Mr. Kane are quite well known to music lovers in Atlanta and College Park, as they have been heard on numerous occasions over the radio and were outstanding feature singers in the light operas presented by the Atlanta Municipal Opera company. Mrs. Felder is a former resident of College Park, and is well known in Atlanta for her musical ability, and a program presenting three musicians of such excellence is assured of success.

It has been the policy of the College Park Music club to present from time to time evening musicals for the benefit of associate members who are unable to attend the regular monthly afternoon programs.

The officers include Mrs. Frederic L. Beers, president; Mrs. W. W. Bateman, first vice president; Mrs. S. R. Young, second vice president; Mrs. C. W. Wall, third vice president; Mrs. W. S. Northcutt, recording secretary; Miss Annis Humphries, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. D. Conley, treasurer; Mrs. F. C. Doss, auditor; Mrs. Eva Thornton, program; Mrs. W. B. McClary, membership; Mrs. S. W. Jones, ways and means; Mrs. W. W. Brewton, publicity; Mrs. W. E. Pitts, house; Mrs. L. H. Warlick, social; Mrs. Crowder Hale, chorus; Mrs. Donald Rung, scrapbook; Mrs. D. C. Lyle, public school music; Mrs. Hugh Couch, junior director.

WATER VERSUS WAR.

Now it turns out that Sennett, having picked the hitherto unknown Sally Eilers for the heroine of his bathing girl epic, found she had far more dramatic talent than any audience would expect in a beach costume. So he junked all the bathing suit sequences and put his heroine in the uniform of a Salvation Army lass at the front, incidentally changing the name of the picture to "The Goodbye Kiss." Then Christie was hit by the idea of letting a circus loose in No Man's Land, so Tillie went overseas for the big thrills of her romance. And now the opening sequence of "Abie's Irish Rose" is being filmed in wartorn France, with Abie in the uniform of a private and his Rose in the garb of a Y. M. C. A. hut hostess. War is not easily outlawed—on the screen.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

THAT WAS A REAL poetry fest at Miss Mary Brent Whiteside's Peachtree circle home last Sunday honoring Miss Agnes Gray, another famous young poet claimed by Atlanta. It was patterned after the many kindred affairs the hostess had attended in New York and as a very interesting feature of the program each guest, poets all, in whose hearts lie a keen appreciation of poetic art, contributed a reading of their original creations. Miss Gray's "A Road to Firenze," typifying English country life, inspired through her sojourn in Firenze last April, and "To My Terrier, Rex," were most pleasurably received. With the latter poem she won the Ponce de Leon prize of $100 offered last year by the Poetry Society of Florida conferred upon her at Winter Park, Fla., by Jessie B. Rittenhouse, a distinguished critic, in private life Mrs. Clinton B. Scollard. She has lately compiled the third volume of the selective anthologies, and included within its pages is Miss Gray's above named poems.

The brilliant editor of Bozart, the modern bi-monthly poetry magazine, an artistic sensation of the year in Atlanta, selected his "Ignora," which "went over with a bang." The first poem, "Ignoro," is best described as a symphony of doubt. In this poem the melancholy of approaching winter is conceived as a symbol of the uncertainty of immortality after death; the theme revolves about Shelly's often-quoted line: "If winter comes, etc." The poem is developed in musical terminology to carry out the symphonic harmony.

His first encore was the well-known "Entre Nous" from his recent volume of verse, "Narcissus and Iscariot." This poem is the dramatic record of a rather catty old woman who discusses, none too charitably, Mary Magdalene and Christ. This poem, which has been quoted by the New York Herald-Tribune and many other papers and magazines, is semi-humorous in tone.

Mr. Hartsock's second encore was a very recent composition of some length entitled "Midas," appearing soon in the Stratford magazine. It brings the story of the ancient king up to date in satiric and epigrammatic fashion, representing him as a big "butter and egg man" who buys his way wherever he goes. His final destination appears to be heaven, which he dislikes because of the large amount of gold; he finally rejects both heaven and hell, but is trapped in a gold vault for eternity by the Fates.

"The Golden Plover," an unique product of Dr. Thornwell Jacobs' creative genius, handled in a most engaging manner, the flight of this bird of aviation, winging its way from Alaska to Honolulu, in the same easy fashion the human aviator of today wings his way from continent to continent. Dr. Jacobs brought about a timely discussion of the probability in the near future of compiling a book containing the best works of Georgia poets, edited by Georgia critics and published by a Georgia press.

"My Last Will and Testament" was delightfully read by Daniel Whitehead Hickey, who bequeathed in a serious vein such a glorious inheritance as "a garden and stars," as a legacy to posterity. So insistent was his audience to hear another, that he recited his "Requiem for Lost Aviators," first published in The Constitution, afterward winning the recognition of the Literary Digest.

Miss Whiteside sang of "Old Letters," published on the editorial page of a recent issue of the New York Times, and produced last Wednesday on the Atlanta Journal's editorial page, expressing such sentiment as "Each one a cloud of incense, to the least," in one of its lines. She also read that exquisite gem "The Carpenter," a theme for a special story published elsewhere in The Constitution. The modernized version of Mother Goose Rhymes, written by Platt Young for children under eight, thoroughly amused the poets, proving them capable of enjoying the ridiculous as well as the sublime. In conclusion, perhaps it's not amiss to state that the greatest pleasure a poet derives emanates from that satisfaction derived from writing odes for others to peruse, for there is but little financial profit to be derived.

"SCHOOL DAYS, school days, dear old golden rule days." A couple of long ago in old Kentucky sang that together. Later they married. On December 17 they will celebrate a golden wedding anniversary in Atlanta of fifty years of matchless married life colored by the memory of those early days of school. This couple, who have found a place in the hearts of Atlantans for the forty-five years in which they have been residents here, are Mr. and Mrs. Jack J. Spalding. The celebration of their golden wedding anniversary will take place from 5 to 7 o'clock December 17 at the Biltmore hotel.

Only one sweetheart—that was rare fifty years ago; it is unheard of today. But that is what Mrs. Spalding has the distinction of having been, the one and only sweetheart that Mr. Spalding ever had; and he found her when he was just a little fellow back there in that Kentucky school.

That wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Spalding, which took place at the home of Mrs. Spalding's father in Morganfield, Union county, Ky., was a beautiful affair but quite different from the weddings of today. The bride was lovely in white silk, princess effect, which was prevalent at that time, and the attendants were equally charming in period frocks. Mrs. Milton Young, sister of Mr. Spalding, and the only living attendant of the wedding, will be present at the golden celebration.

"Things were different in those days," said Mrs. Spalding as she recalled with a bit of a sigh the time when life was less complex, but to her mind a bit deeper and more sincere. "It seems to me that we had even more real pleasure in those days. On our wedding trip we went to Chicago and St. Louis, making part of the trip up the Ohio river by boat, for we lived right there at it, and the rest by train." We had lots of pleasure in the days of hoopskirt and patches, and life was joyful and real.

"Once in royal David's city Stood a lowly cattle shed."

FOR THOSE with imagination the picture is complete. There is the Christ Child on that first Christmas morn, in a lowly manger, with the beasts of the stall his only companions, and the glimpse of blue sky through the loft window the only suggestion of the world outside which henceforth was to be a new world and a new day. All of this has been caught by a Georgia girl in her illustration of "A Child's Book of Hymns and Carols," by Margaret G. Weed, daughter of Bishop Weed, of Florida, an attractive Christmas booklet for children just off the press. This talented young artist who has caught the spirit of "It came a midnight clear," pictured the snow-laden boughs on that first Christmas morn and helped the interested reader to catch the tinkle of bells on the eager air, is Miss Judith Wragg, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Alston Wragg, of Columbus; and a niece of Miss Pamela Wragg, of 809 Penn avenue. Her father is pastor of Trinity church, Columbus.

Long before she completed her four year course at Cooper-Union School of Art in NewYork city, Miss Wragg, who is only a girl, was quite sure that she wanted to paint. And so her friends welcome with interest the first concrete evidence of that inner urge which led her many years ago to ream of the time that she would be an illustrator and create just such pictures. Each colored drawing tells the graphic story of the Christmas hymn which it illustrates, and goes far in making this booklet a picturesque and pleasing gift for any child.

Not only is Miss Wragg an artist, but she has found her place in dramatic circles as well. At the present time she is taking a part in the chorus of "The Countess Maritza," one of Shubert's productions, which is proving quite successful in Chicago. That something of a highly artistic nature is finding expression through the personality of this Georgia girl is undeniable. When only a child she would delight the family when there was an even more winsomeness about her dark hair and hazel eyes, by appearing before them in costumes of the Dutch maid, the Egyptian, or the peasant French, all creations from the family scrap bag, but so distinctive that there was little doubt as to their place in the sphere of dresses. Now she is working out these childhood longings through the role of actress in a production which gives promise of finding its way to Boston, Mass., and other points.

Missions Meet Delegates Named At Agnes Scott

Decatur, Ga., December 3.—Representatives have been chosen from Agnes Scott to attend the quadrennial student volunteer conference to be held at Detroit December 28 to January 2. They are Leila Anderson, Macon, Ga., president of Y. W. C. A.; Miriam Anderson, Winston-Salem, N. C., vice president, and Ruth Worth, Kiangsu, China. The general subject of this conference will be "The place of missions in the world today." Among the noted men who will be present are Sherwood Eddy, Rheinbold Neihuhr and Mordecai Johnson.

A recital was given by pupils of Miss Frances K. Gooch, head of the spoken English department, tonight at 8:30, in the chapel. Lillian White, Buchanan, Ga., read "A Sunny Morning," a charming Spanish play by Quintero Brothes. Sarah Carter, Decatur, read "Ashes of Roses," a poetical drama by Constance d'Arcy MacKay, and Mary Sayward, Decatur, read "A Freudian Comedy," by Susan G. Laspell.

Nell Hilhouse, of Waynesboro, Ga., has been elected to represent Agnes Scott at the conference of the national student federation to be held at the University of Nebraska December 15-17. The subject of this congress will be "The Student in the Community."

The week of December 6 to 10 will be religious emphasis week at Agnes Scott college. Dr. Frank Morgan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at Augusta, Ga., will direct the services, speaking at the chapel hour and at vespers. Dr. Morgan is one of the best known preachers in the south and is especially popular with young people. The series of services on the general theme of "Christ's Call to Men" promise to be most inspiring and the college community is considered fortunate in having this opportunity to hear Dr. Morgan.

The "Gitana," a Spanish operetta by Joseph S. Roeckel, well-known English composer, will be given on Saturday night, December 10, at 8:30 o'clock, in the gymnasium-auditorium by the Agnes Scott Glee club. The presentation, directed by Mrs. Lewis H. Johnson, will be characterized by colorful costuming effects and elaborate stage settings as well as exceptionally good vocal work. The leading roles will be taken by Virginia Miller, Vivian Bryant, Ruth Thomas, Mary Ruth Rountree, accompanied by violinists and harpists, and assisted by the special chorus of the Glee club.

The presentation of Handel's "Messiah," an annual event of great interest both to the college community and to the public, will take place in the Agnes Scott chapel on Sunday afternoon, December 11, at 3 o'clock, under the direction of Lewis H. Johnson. He will be assisted by the Agnes Scott Choral society and other artists, including Misses Mary Buttrick and Eunice Scott Prescott, Vaughn Ozmer and Walter Herbert, C. W. Dieckmann, professor of music at Agnes Scott, will be the organist.

PIPE SMOKERS TO HEAR AUTHOR, LECTURER SPEAK

Dr. John T. M. Johnson, famous author, lecturer and financier, will be the honor guest and principal speaker Monday night at the fifth annual dinner of the grand lodge of the National Order of Pipe Smokers, it was announced Saturday by Dr. Horace Grant, president of the order.

The dinner will begin at 7 o'clock Monday night at Vaughan's restaurant, and the order and the Mecca Civic club, which also is headed by Dr. Grant, will attend the meeting. Women of the club will entertain. Many prominent Atlantans have made reservations for the affair over which James Nevin, of the Atlanta Georgian, will preside as toastmaster.

Six of the seven founders and charter members of the National Order of Pipe Smokers will be present at the meeting, Dr. Grant said. In addition to Dr. Grant, they are Judge E. D. Thomas, F. A. Johnson, Tom C. Miller, Judge R. M. Hardman and J. E. Edwards.

A short memorial service will honor the late Judge Andy Calhoun, the seventh of the founders, who died several months ago.

AMERICUS WOMAN HAS ARM BROKEN IN AUTO MISHAP

Thomaston, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Mrs. Evans Matthews, of Americus, Ga., suffered a broken arm near here this morning when the auto in which she was riding with her husband broke a chain, became locked and skidded off the road. She was taken to the home of R. E. Hightower, where she received medical attention and is resting well.

ATLANTA SOCIETY, always appreciative and interested in the annually staged bazar of the woman's guild of All Saints' Episcopal church, will have the opportunity to patronize this same bazar next Wednesday. Many a little boy and girl will be cheered this Xmas and throughout the year by the very practical and entertaining pink cambric books put together and decorated by Mrs. Dunbar Roy. Ever since her return from Europe this fall, Mrs. Roy's busy fingers have cut, sewed together, and posted pictures on the leaves of a dozen or more books, and there are orders placed for just as many more as she can possibly deliver.

Mrs. Malcolm Fleming will sell some of her beautiful artificial flowers, having made quite a reputation upon them, while the sale demand has extended all over the United States. The process is her own invention, and her workshop on East Seventeenth street is quite one of the most interesting places in Atlanta.

Mrs. Hunt Chipley has made some adorable baby chairs with quilted cushions, doll bassinet, and colorful work bags. Mrs. Percy Taylor, chairman of Hallie Rhett chapter will have some patch work quilts on exhibition like those our grandmothers used to make. Mrs. H. M. Atkinson has made exquisite baby caps and work bags. Mrs. William Kiser's writing portfolios with old prints on the covers, doll bassinets, coat hangers and pin cushions will be tempting to the shopper. Mrs. Joseph Orme and members of Mrs. Lowry Arnold's committee have made wax flowers which will add color to the house in the winter months. Mrs. Charles Sciple's taffetas work cases with French flowers decorating the tops, are greatly admired.

Mrs. Claude Buchanan is chairman of the committee which serves a delicious luncheon, and many luncheon parties are being planned. The articles are reasonably priced and many novelties will be offered for sale, including a box of things from Honolulu, sent by a former parishioner of All Saints' church.

WHEN THE RINGING of the bells usher in the New Year, an Atlanta couple will greet it with tremulous joy. We are told that ere the fading of 1928 their romance will culminate in a brilliant marriage.

Though she has enjoyed the admiration of beaux galore, her heart has remained true to him who escorted her to her first dance five years ago. Surely, fate decreed even then that he should be her lifetime companion. Perhaps the marriage date was delayed until after her presentation to society. As a debutante of this season, her popularity has reached extreme heights.

Like the heroic Lindbergh, the popular fiance has never tasted alcoholic liquors or smoked a cigarette. He stands at the top in his chosen profession. No graduate of Oglethorpe university was ever more idolized by his classmates than he. May the 1928 bells ring in the happiest of New Years for them is the wish of Four Women.

SELDOM HAS sentiment been as prominent and pronounced as it was in the brilliant Candler-Warren wedding, being expressed in the exquisite appointments featuring the bride's table to the magnificent bridal gown worn by Mrs. William C. Warren, Jr. Only a few who watched the beautiful bride descend the long stairway knew that the regal wedding gown was the work of Laura Mays, and that it was she who designed the christening robe in which, as a baby Mrs. Warren received her first religious ceremony. Having had the advantage of extensive travel and being allowed to select her bridal gown from famous conturiers in the United States and abroad, and after searching the markets of two continents, this beautiful Atlanta bride made the decision that Laura May's and no other, was capable of fashioning so precious a costume as the one she wore upon her wedding day.

EVA LE GALLIENNE, the blond-haired daughter of the noted poet, Richard Le Gallienne, claimed that art does pay, and proved her faith that the world is gravitating toward better things in art. So, she founded the Civic Repertory Theater of New York and won the $5,000 achievement award for 1926, given annually by Pictorial Review for the greatest contribution during the year to arts, letters, science and social progress.

Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was a member of the committee of distinguished women on whom devolved the difficult task of selecting the winner for this award.

Miss Le Gallienne, a star of the first magnitude, took possession of an old theater at Fourteenth street and Sixth avenue, far removed from Broadway, and installed her own company. She gave the public good plays, well acted and well staged at a reasonable prices, directed the company, and acted in the plays. The patronage has far exceeded all her expectations and proved conclusively that there is a demand for worth-while things in the theater.

The first part of November, Miss Le Gallienne met a gathering of ministers and laymen at the Hotel Commodore in an effort to bring the stage and pulpit together for a better understanding, and work together for the common good. "The church and drama grew up together," Miss Le Gallienne told them. "Let us work together with tenderness and compassion for each other. She predicted that in 20 years every city would have a civic theater offering entertainment for admissions of 25 and 50 cents. If 4 per cent of New York's population contributed $1 a year a theater could be endowed.

Lovely Debutante Chosen Fraternity Sponsor

Miss Virginia Courts, popular and admired member of the Debutante club, who was recently chosen sponsor of the Alpha chapter of the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity of Oglethorpe university.

Miss Virginia Courts, lovely young debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard W. Courts, was recently elected sponsor of the Alpha chapter of the Alpha Lambda Tau fraternity at Oglethorpe university.

This popular belle, who is one of the most charming members of the Debutante club and vice president of the organization, received her early education at Girls' High school, going later to Washington seminary, where she was a member of the Phi Pi sorority. She spent two years at the fashionable Holton Arms school in the national capital, during which time she was extensively feted in Washington society. Since finishing her education she has traveled extensively. She is of a distinctly southern type of brunette beauty and inherits great personal charm from her aristocratic lineage.

Many lovely social affairs are being planned by the members of the fraternity in honor of Miss Courts.

The members of the fraternity include Walter Wilson, of Shreveport, La.; Buster Davidson, John Randolph Hearst, of Los Angeles; Jack Fain, Albert Wyon Alexander, C. Leek Fain, John Turk, of Nelson; P. F. Underwood, Louis Wood, of Cornelia; Walter Tinsley, Van Brocklin, Ralph Carr, John Burford, of Barnesville; James O'Kelley, of Roswell; Linsey Vaughn, of Union, S. C.; W. F. Chestnut, Brantly Boswell, George McDonald, Gordon White, Charles Aldridge, of Carrollton; Jack Massey, of Columbus; Virgil Milton, of Waycross, and Dave Blake.

The pledges include Mamaduke Turner, Seamon Baskin, of Carrollton; Robert Benson, of Savannah; Howard Lawson, Erskin Thompson, Charles Linsey, Bill Tucker, Asa Wall, of Pulaski; Thomas McKissick.

Chest Deficit Hampers Work Of Children's Home Society

An economic and human loss, not to be measured in dollars but in lives and character, will result from Atlanta's failure to provide the full amount asked by the Community Chest for its work in 1928, it was said Saturday in a review of the work of the Georgia Children's Home society, one of the Chest's 35 agencies of charity and social reconstruction.

The deficit of $50,000 in the Chest fund, if it continues, will result in a reduction of 10 per cent of the budget of each agency, according to the statement, and in consequence fewer cases can be accepted and less work accomplished. Of this situation, Miss Emma Hardcastle, state supervisor of the society, said:

"And the heart-rending fact exists that every case, in the work of the Georgia Children's Home society, involves the useful development, if not actually the life, of a helpless human being, who without the aid we seek to give it, would most certainly drift into disaster—physical, mental or moral."

Helped 359 Families.

The Georgia Children's Home society, described as "father and mother to the orphan, the outcast, the waif, the deserted," was able last year to accept for help 359 families, involving about 1,000 children. Already on its lists were the cases of 400 other children, Miss Hardcastle said, and in every case, she explained, the future of the child, neglected, abandoned, or orphaned, hung in the balance for good or evil.

The work included cases in every part of Georgia, although the contribution of the Atlanta Community Chest is used exclusively for work in Atlanta, which comprises about one-third of that done in the entire state. An indication of the varied nture of the society's work is to be seen in the showing that of the great number of child derelicts, only a small proportion were placed by adoption in private homes.

"Our workers found other solutions in most of the cases," Miss Hardcastle explained. "These 'other solutions' are the test of our organization and of the energy, resourcefulness and efficiency of our workers. We feel that every human effort should be made to keep a child with its own people.

Holding Families Together.

"Through work which sometimes takes weeks and months, which covers the state or perhaps goes into other states, we may find relatives to take the homeless child, which is usually an abandoned or orphaned child. We find cases where temporary care is necessary, during an emergency that need not break up the home, cases where assistance from the outside will enable a family to hold a home together, cases where we must find jobs for the parents.

"There are cases, pitifully too many, where children are subnormal, perhaps congenitally, perhaps through fault of a submerged environment. We must place these in institutions, striving to bring them back to normality, mentally, physically and morally. And lastly, there are the cases where nothing will serve but adoption, when the child is normal and no family tie can be restored.

"Our workers are on the job all the time, hard-pressed every hour of the day, every day of the year. The cases are not those that can be dismissed with the end of the day's work, but they remain with us in their heart-rending appeals through our dreams and our conscious planning. We need more workers—one of the requests for Atlanta this year was an additional worker, but unless our budget is provided by the public we must forego this help, and therefore neglect cases of bitter need. What is to be done, then, with these waifs, their helpless hands outstretched for help?"

Organized in 1911.

The Georgia Children's Home society was organized in 1911 by a group who were distressed at their helplessness in the face of the needs of the neglected children of the state. Its aims were set forth as follows:

"To receive and provide for destitute, neglected, abandoned and orphaned white children; to seek out suitable family homes for those who are normal and to protect their interests by proper contact and otherwise and to perform such other acts as will tend to improve their condition."

Homeless, neglected children poured in. Many were neither physically nor normally ready for placement in foster homes, and the society felt the need of some "halfway station" where the little folks could be treated medically and fed properly and where they could be given training necessary to make them welcome in family homes.

A receiving home was purchased in Ormewood court, in Atlanta, where, in quarters that are too small for the needs, 40 to 50 children are maintained, in ages from tiniest infancy to the 'teens, while by the constructive training and helpfulness of the society they are made ready for adoption. There are 40 children in the receiving home now, several whose lives would have been lost from illness, malnutrition or disaster if they had not been found in time, Miss Hardcastle said. Her narration of their record was a story of great human need.

The Georgia Children's Home society is the licensed child-placing agency of the state. It is rated as class "A" by the national organization, the Child Welfare League of America.

FORT VALLEY TO HAVE SUNDAY SCHOOL RALLY

Fort Valley, Ga., December 3.—A Sunday school rally has been announced to be held on Sunday afternoon, December 4, at the First Baptist church here.

Dr. Jent, of Mercer university, will be one of the speakers. The rally will include representatives from the schools of Perry, Bryan, Fort Valley, Henderson, Elke, Houston factory, Thirpe Memorial and Dorothy Baptist churches.

Miss Maria Brown's Engagement To Thomas Blake Is Announced

Prominent among the engagements announced in December is that of Miss Maria Christine Brown, charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown, who will wed Thomas Dawes Blake, II, of Boston, Mass., in January. The marriage will be solemnized at a brilliant ceremony in St. Luke's Episcopal church on Peachtree street, followed by a reception at Mr. and Mrs. Brown's home on East Seventeenth street.

Since Miss Brown made her debut three years ago, she has been one of the belles in exclusive society, and is a member of the Junior League. She was educated at Washington seminary, afterward attending St. Mary's in Peeksville, N. Y., and is representative of distinguished southern ancestry. Through her mother, who was formerly Miss Ann Pearce, of Nashville, Tenn., daughter of C. S. Pearce, of Washington, D. C., she inherits much of her fascinating personality and sweetness of manner.

Mr. Blake is a member of an aristocratic Massachusetts family, a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Blake, and a grandson of Thomas Dawes Blake, for whom he is named, is an inventor and manufacturer. Mr. Blake was graduated from Harvard, having been a valuable and leading member of the varsity football team.

He is making his home in Orlando, Fla., where he represents the Dillon & Reed Bonding company, and after their wedding journey, Mr. Blake and his bride-elect will reside in Orlando.

Eulogy Paid to Memory Of the Rev. J. V. M. Morris

Loving tribute to the memory of the late Rev. James V. M. Morris, one of the outstanding figures of Georgia Methodism and for 47 years an active minister, who died here last August at the age of 97 years, was delivered by Rev. Elam Franklin Dempsey, of Oxford, Ga., before the recent North Georgia Methodist conference here.

The eulogy prepared by the Rev. Mr. Dempsey, presiding elder of the Oxford district, follows:

"James V. M. Morris was born in Spalding county, Georgia, July 15, 1830. He was converted and joined the old M. E. church at Mt. Zion in 1845. He was licensed to preach in Sumter county at Prospect church June 30, 1855, and ordained deacon by Bishop Paine in 1857; elder by Bishop Kavanaugh in 1859. He joined the Georgia conference in 1855.

"Appointments: Junior preacher Fort Gaines circuit, 1856 until June, then pastor Vienna circuit, Murphy Mission, junior preacher 1857; junior preacher Clayton Mission, 1858-59; Ellijay 1860; Swainsboro circuit 1861-62; junior preacher Hancock circuit 1863; Sparta and Rock Factory mission 1864-65; County Line mission 1866-67; Baldwin circuit 1868-69; City mission, Augusta, 1870; Watkinsville circuit, 1871-72, with J. W. Knight as junior preacher; transferred to South Georgia conference fall, 1872; Altamaha district, 1873-74-75; Broad Street, Columbus, 1876-77; Trinity and Columbus Factory, 1878; transferred to North Georgia conference fall, 1878; St. Luke, Augusta, 1879-80; Fayetteville circuit, 1881; Athens circuit, 1882-83; Meriwether circuit, 1884; Watkinsville, 1885-86-87; Whitehall and Princeton, 1888; Rutledge, Miss., 1889; Greensboro circuit, 1890-91; Baldwin circuit, 1892-93-94-95; Grovetown mission, 1896-97-98; Hamilton Street, Dalton, 1899-1900; Whitehall, 1901; East Athens, 1902.

"He was superannuated in the fall of 1902. His net service years were 47.

"He died suddenly August 14, 1927, in Atlanta and was buried at Crest Lawn cemetery August 16.

"Except that of Dr. Lovick Pierce, Georgia Methodism never mourned at such a funeral, and it is to be doubted if it shall see its like again.

"Significant of the remarkable life indicated above were the extended and appreciated comments of both church and secular press at the time of its ending. Just one month preceding that event The Courier, official magazine of a great southern railway system, carried a handsome illustrated two-page story of Brother Morris under the title of 'The Grand Old Man of Athens.'

"One who knew him in itinerant fellowship, writes thus: 'Of him I love to think not as departed but translated. Milton was foolish enough (with all his learning) to try to justify the ways of God to men, but not Brother Morris. He accepted and wrapped about himself that mantle of authority held out by the Almighty Hand to every one that would preach the Word. "The Words that I speak I speak not of myself." He was a "I am an ambassador." He was a man of high courage. There was a clash between him and a noted Georgia statesman. But the statesman couldn't browbeat the Rev. Morris—and fully found it out. On the other hand, our friend was, oh, so modest! We lived in the same town at one time, and I know. And he had such a dear way of attending to his own business. And you could put your finger down on him, and then look under it—and there he was. And he had learned in whatsoever state he was therein to be content. And a Strange Guest dwelt in his heart all the time. I salute him and bow my head as he passes on.'

"For two years the writer was his pastor; and also both before and after this relation, my love for and understanding of him and his of me, were unusual and, hence, a precious friendship was cemented between us. Not given to allowing loose rein to his emotions, Brother Morris' deep capacity for love was not perceived by all—it being sometimes thought that he was cold. Not so. He did not wear his heart upon his sleeve, but he had one, and one that was full of tender, yea even ardent, affections.

"He was a friend among a thousand and he was able to be such a friend because he was so great a Christian. Untrained in the schools, he made himself a man of thought and reading by adhering to his call to preach. He was a man of this one work. It unified, energized and concentrated his powers, as it will do those of every man who is true to it as his one directive purpose. He was dignified, though witty and capable of home-thrusts. But he never indulged in, nor allowed, low familiarity of deportment. He was never anything but a dignified Christian gentleman.

"He has gone from us. We shall miss him. His place will be vacant and will move us to tears. We will weep, but not as those who are without hope. 'My father! My father! The horsemen of Israel and the Chariot thereof!' Let his mantle of fire fall upon us, his conference associates. The fire of entire love to God and of disinterested love to man! In him, this brotherly love flowed at artesian depths of his nature, because it arose in the mountain heights of his love for his Lord. He could not have loved his fellow man so much, had he not loved his God and Father more! 'He who loves not God, can be no friend to man.' O God, let his mantle rest upon every one of his brother ministers in the entire Methodist connection."

LANCE TO HEAD GEORGIA SCHOOL OFFICIALS' BODY

T. Jack Lance, superintendent of schools at Waynesboro, Ga., was elected president of the superintendents' department, Georgia Educational association, Saturday morning at the final session of a two-day departmental convention at the Henry Grady hotel.

M. R. Little, Jefferson county school superintendent, was elected vice president, and L. M. Lester, Griffin school superintendent, secretary. T. N. Gaines, of Athens; J. J. Cash, of Winder, and L. D. Watson, of Barnesville, were named to the executive committee.

Two committees were appointed at the meeting to investigate the proposed revision of grammar and high school courses and report back to the April meeting of the Georgia Educational association.

FORT VALLEY LEGION POST HEAD HONORED

Fort Valley, Ga., December 3.—George C. Toole, Jr., has received credentials from National Commander Edward Spafford, of the American Legion, for his work as adjutant in bringing the average of Frederick Withoft post of the legion here, 45 per cent above the average of the four years since the local post was organized.

LOVELY VISITOR AND ATLANTA BELLES WHO WILL WED IN LATE WINTER

Today's feature page presents three charming belles of Georgia society, whose names are linked with the noblest traditions of which the state boasts. At the upper left is Miss Mary Birdsey, of Savannah, who is receiving much social attention from the members of the younger set as the guest of Mrs. Charles Conklin at her home on Peachtree street. The photograph at the upper left is a beautiful likeness of Miss Maria Christine Brown, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown, whose engagement, announced today, to Thomas Dawes Blake, II, of Boston, Mass., is of wide social importance. Their marriage will be brilliantly solemnized Saturday, January 28, at St. Luke's Episcopal church. The attractive figure at the center is Miss Mary Jimmie Pattillo, younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jackson Pattillo, whose engagement is announced today to Ashby Crutchfield Taylor, formerly of Nashville, Tenn. The wedding will take place Saturday evening, February 18, at the handsome home of the bride-elect's parents in Druid Hills. Photograph of Miss Birdsey by Winn's studio. Miss Pattillo's photo is the work of Brubacker's studio.

Debut Parties for Belles To Mark Social Calendar

December, with its round of activities coincident with the coming of Christmas, is the month of good will. It is also the season when youth has its fling, when colleges open their gates for joyous homecomers, when mistletoe hangs overhead and the jingle of festive bells is in the air.

This second week in December will mark the entrance into this world of youth and its inevitable festivities two of Atlanta's 1927-28 debutantes, Misses Mary Wellborn and Catherine Boyd, who with brilliant debut parties will make their official bows to society, entering upon their career of social buds in one of the most festive seasons of the year.

"Jacqueland," the handsome home of Mrs. Cator Woolford, will be the setting for the brilliant reception at which Miss Boyd will be introduced to society by her sister Tuesday afternoon, December 6. Members of the Debutante club will receive with the hostess and honor guest. Miss Wellborn will be presented by her father, M. B. Wellborn, at an elaborate ball at the Piedmont Driving club Thursday evening, December 8. Her bow to society will be the signal for much entertaining, a series of formal and informal affairs having been planned in her honor for the winter season.

Mrs. Dickey's Luncheon

Misses Anne Spalding and Mary Harvey, two other attractive buds of the winter, will be honored Friday, December 9, by Mrs. James L. Dickey, who will entertain at a luncheon at her handsome home on Pace's Ferry road. Fifty members of the younger social set have been invited for this occasion.

Members of the season's Debutante club will entertain Saturday evening, December 10, at the regular Piedmont Driving club dinner-dance.

Another feature of the social calendar for December will be the reception with which Mrs. William Christian Royer will honor Mrs. John Burwell Royer in the ballroom of the Atlanta Biltmore hotel.

Tallulah Circle Dance.

The Young Girls' circle of Tallulah Falls school will sponsor a dinner-dance Wednesday, December 7 at the Biltmore hotel.

Of interest to Atlanta society is the wedding of Miss Marion Morrell Rauers and Harvey Granger, Jr., which will be solemnized Saturday evening, December 10, at St. John's church, Savannah, Ga.

Club and social circles will find interest this week in the tree-planting celebration December 9 at 3 o'clock at the Atlanta Woman's club, honoring Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the club.

Dante Circle To Honor Distinguished Guests.

The Dante circle will entertain at a luncheon at the Druid Hills Golf club Friday, December 16, complimenting Mrs. Hardman, wife of the governor of Georgia, and Mrs. Richmond Pearson Davis, wife of General Davis, commander of the fourth corps area, stationed at Fort McPherson. Invited to share honors are Mrs. Clifford Walker, wife of Georgia's former governor; Mrs. Smith, wife of Hon. Hoke Smith, twice governor of Georgia, and Mrs. Martha Fowle Myatt, daughter of the late Governor Daniel G. Fowle, of North Carolina.

Mrs. D. F. Stevenson, president, will preside, assisted by Miss Carolyn Cobb, founder of the literary circle.

Miss Clara McConnell To Give Party.

Invitations have been issued by Miss Clara Mitchell McConnell to a tea Saturday afternoon, December 17, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius McConnell, on Peachtree road.

One hundred members of the school girl set will call between 4 and 6 o'clock, this affair to be one of the most elaborate inaugurating the Yuletide season.

Georgia Society To Give Ball.

The Georgia State society of Washington, D. C., will entertain with a ball Wednesday evening, December 7, at the Wardman Park hotel, instead of Maridian Mansions, as formerly announced. The change of plans was necessitated to care for the large number of Georgians attending the unveiling of the Alexander Stephens statue that will attend the dance while in Washington. The vice presidents of the society, Mrs. Walter F. George, wife of the senator from Georgia, and and McCleskey Garlych, extend an invitation to all Georgians in the capital on that date to attend the ball.

Misses McDaniel To Give Lovely Tea.

Among the lovely affairs of December will be the large tea at which Misses Georgia Franc, Sarah and Marthat McDaniel will entertain Tuesday, December 13, at the home of their mother, Mrs. D. P. McDaniel, at 3264 Peachtree road.

Two hundred members of the younger social contingent and the college set will be invited for the occasion.

Biltmore Tea-Dance Assembles Many Patrons.

A tea-dance was given Saturday afternoon at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel following the Tech-Georgia football game. The affair, which assembled several hundred guests, was held in the Pompeiian grill room of the hotel from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Albert Howell III. and the members of his house party were honored at a party. Covers were placed for Miss Mary Matherson, of Philadelphia, Pa.; Miss Louise Hall, of Macon; Miss Julia Bradshaw, of Athens; Hervey Cleckley, of Augusta; Charles Anderson, of Macon, and Mr. Howell.

Dr. and Mrs. Green Dodd Warren entertained in compliment to their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Crouse, of Fitzgerald. Covers were placed for Mr. and Mrs. Crouse and Dr. and Mrs. Warren.

Miss Anne Spalding and her guest, Miss Louise Bell, of Nashville, Tenn., were with Boosey Smith, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and Syd Hardie.

Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Lippitt had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. William Shipp, of Miami, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lanier, of Americus; Miss Sara Smith and William Goldsmith.

Driving Club Dinner-Dance.

Prominent visitors who were in Atlanta to attend the Tech-Georgia football game were central figures in congenial parties given at the Piedmont Driving club dinner-dance Saturday evening. During the dinner courses an orchestra played dancing airs intermingled with Glory to Old Georgia and Rambling Wreck.

Among the visitors present were: Miss Helen Flournoy, of Columbus, Ga.; Miss Sally Guy, of Richmond, Va.; Misses Alice Harrold and Mary Birdsey, of Savannah; Miss Georgia Bena Dodson, of Americus; Mr. and Mrs. Fleming Johnson, of Macon; Mr. and Mrs. Gus Sparks, of Macon; S. G. Mummerman, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Charlton Theus, of Savannah; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Maclean, of Savannah, and Miss Louise Bell, of Nashville, Tenn.

Shi Hi Club Is Honored.

Miss Ruby Eleanor Palmer was hostess to members of the Shi Hi club at her home on Clifton road Thursday afternoon. After a short business meeting luncheon was served and the guests enjoyed a social hour.

Those enjoying Miss Palmer's hospitality were Misses Maxine Cone, Malvenia Reynolds, Doris Tichter, Katherine Tichter and Frances Tranmel.

Alpha Delta Alumnae Club To Give Luncheon.

The Alpha Delta Pi Alumnae club of Atlanta meets at the Atlanta Athletic club Tuesday, December 6, at 1 o'clock for the luncheon gathering. Reservations should be made with Mrs. McDonald Brittain, Hemlock 2651.

Mrs. Oslin Gives Luncheon at Home.

Mrs. A. L. Oslin entertained the Matrons' Sewing club at luncheon Thursday at her home in McPherson avenue. The table held four lighted candles as corner pieces and a silver dish filled with water hyacinths as a central decoration. The place cards were hand-painted in pink. The honor guests were Mrs. China and Mrs. J. B. Sawyer.

Rhoads Class To Give Dinner.

The Rhoads class of Park Street Methodist church will hold the monthly dinner December 8 at 7:30 o'clock. The entertainers of the evening will be Julian Boehm, well-known insurance man, who is one of the best amateur magicians in the south, and Dr. and Mrs. Tom G. Fowler, who are well known for their songs and music.

Miss Pattillo To Wed Ashby Taylor At Brilliant Ceremony February 18

Southern society is interested in the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jackson Pattillo of the engagement of their daughter, Mary Jimmie, to Ashby Crutchfield Taylor.

Miss Pattillo is an admired member of Atlanta's fashionable social contingent, having served as president of the 1923-24 Debutantes' club. She is a graduate of Washington seminary, completing her education at Randolph-Macon college, where she was a popular member of the Pi Beta Phi sorority. Miss Pattillo is a sister of Mrs. John Hill, prominent Atlanta society matron, and John Ray Pattillo. The attractive bride-elect is a representative of distinguished Georgia and Virginia families. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Pattillo, are beloved by hosts of friends and are prominently identified with Atlanta's civic and social life.

Mrs. Pattillo was before her marriage Miss Laura Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Wilson, prominent Georgians. Miss Pattillo is a relative of the aristocratic Kyle family, of Virginia, her maternal grandmother having been Miss Harriet Kyle, of that state. The bride-elect's paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James Alexander Pattillo, were recognized as pioneer leaders in the development of Georgia, her paternal grandmother having been Miss Mary Thomas, a representative of another prominent Georgia family.

Mr. Taylor is the son of Mrs. Lula King Taylor, of Nashville, Tenn., and the late Alfred Crozet Taylor, representatives of influential and outstanding families in this state. The late Mr. and Mrs. James Marshall Taylor, of Taylorsville, Va., were the paternal grandparents of the groom-elect, his paternal grandmother having been Miss Isabel de Leon, of Virginia. The late Mr. and Mrs. John King, of Chattanooga, Tenn., were the maternal grandparents of Mr. Taylor, his maternal grandmother having been before her marriage Miss Rebecca Moore, of Tennessee. The groom's sisters are Mrs. Holland Beasley, of Nashville; Mrs. Earnest Mooney, of Gainesville, Ga., and Miss Katherine Marshall Taylor, of Los Angeles.

The groom-to-be has resided in Atlanta for the past three years and has become prominently identified with the city's social and business circles. He hold the position of departmental manager of the Employers' Liability Assurance Corporation, Limited, of London, England. The marriage of Miss Pattillo and Mr. Taylor will be solemnized Saturday evening, February 18, at a brilliant ceremony at the home of the bride-elect's parents in Druid Hills.

Miss Lucile Carlton To Wed F. H. Marshall, of Savannah

Savannah, Ga., December 3.—Mr. and Mrs. Edgar T. Whatley announce the engagement of their sister, Miss Lucile Carlton, to Francis Henry Marshall, both of Savannah.

This announcement carries wide social importance and is of cordial interest to a host of friends throughout the state.

Miss Carlton is the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Carlton, of Senoia, who were among the foremost citizens of Coweta county and were prominent factors in the social, civic and religious life of the state. Since her father's death she has been making her home with her sister, Mrs. Whatley, in Savannah, where she has been identified with social and educational circles of the city.

The lovely bride-elect is the sister of Mrs. Edgar T. Whatley, of Savannah; Mrs. R. D. Smith, of Tifton; Mrs. R. E. McKnight, Mrs. W. D. Gibson and Miss Lois Carlton, all of Senoia.

The groom-elect is a popular young business man of Savannah, the Marshall family having been connected for several generations with the development and progress of the city along financial and philanthropic lines. Mr. Marshall since the death of his father has been the leading member of the business firm of F. H. Marshall and company, and his marriage to Miss Carlton will unite two of the best known families of the south.

The wedding will be an event of interest, solemnized in December.

The teachers and pupils of the Atlanta public schools as well as any other persons interested in the relations of the United States to foreign countries, are invited by the Junior Red Cross to see a moving picture entitled "Widening Horizons," which will be shown at the Erlanger theater on Monday, December 5, at 3 o'clock.

The management of the Erlanger has donated the use of the theater, the lights and all equipment to the Junior Red Cross for this purpose and there will be no charge to the public connected with the showing of the film.

The picture is furnished by the junior division of the league of Red Cross societies and it is designed to emphasize the foreign correspondence carried on by the Junior Red Cross in the schools the purpose of which is to promote international understanding, friendship and amity and eventually to promote world peace.

The scene of the picture is laid in Czecho-Slovakia, where a group of Junior Red Cross members are inspired to send a message to a group in Belgium; the result is a description of Prague with its medieval towers, castles, and history-laden squares and as a return courtesy descriptions of Bruges, Liege and other Belgium cities are shown.

The first reel pictures a history of transportation from the days when women were the burden bearers and carriers to the present time of giant airplanes, hidden cables and invisible sound-waves, all showing how distance is being conquered until the whole world becomes a modern place of residence.

The picture has been shown all over the world as it has been translated into all modern languages.

Our Partnership With God.

It is encouraging to study in the Word of God the many references to our partnership with Him in His work. In countless ways, He links Himself with our little lives, with such words as "we," "our," "us," etc.

When Jesus was baptized by John at the River Jordan, He said, "Thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." It is as though God were saying, "I cannot do without you any more than you can do without Me."

"You and I must do what is becoming." God is ever seeking our cordial cooperation with Him in the accomplishment of His purpose.

West End Baptist Society To Sponsor Week of Prayer

A unique celebration of the week of prayer for foreign missions, which will include not only prayer for missionaries on foreign fields, but also latest available news, given either by letters or in person by some of the missionaries on furlough will be sponsored by the Woman's Missionary society of the West End Baptist church, Monday, December 5, at 10:30 o'clock.

All the W. M. S. circles are expected to take part, and every circle tell of the missionary for which it is named. The names of well known missionaries are Mrs. C. W. Pruitt, Mrs. S. E. Stephens and Misses Catherine Bryan, Cliffords Hunter, Pearl Todd, China; Mrs. J. L. Sheppard and Mrs. S. L. Denston, Brazil; Mrs. Lucile Clarke and Frances Fulghum, Japan; Miss Susan Anderson, Africa.

Mrs. Harvey Clarke, formerly Miss Lucile Daniels, who went to Japan more than twenty-five years ago from the West End church, will give personal recollections of Miss Lottie Moon, a distinguished pioneer missionary, for whom the Woman's Misionary union Christmas offering was named when it was first instituted forty years ago, and which has been a yearly event ever since. Mrs. Yoshineema, a little Japanese lady who now lives in Atlanta, but who was a member of the same church in Japan with Dr. and Mrs. Harvey Clarke, will be present and appear in costume.

Mrs. C. W. Pruitt and Miss Cliffords Hunter, both returned missionaries from China, have been invited to take part on the program. The West End Baptist church has the distinction of having a full W. M. U. graded union, and the afternoon program will be principally given over to the Y. W. A., G. A., R. A., and Sunbeams, all young people's organizations of the church. The West End W. M. S. is just closing a successful year under the leadership of Mrs. J. H. Zachry, president.

Second Baptist Church.

At 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Sunday school auditorium the Business Women's league of the Second Baptist church will meet. Circle C, Mrs. W. S. Haralson, chairman, and Mrs. Annie Harwell, co-chairman, will be in charge. Professor W. J. Scott, of Tech High, will be the principal speaker. The president, Mrs. Frederic J. Paxon, urges all members of the league to be present at this, the last session for the year. The public is invited.

Monday, December 5, has been set apart as a day of prayer by the women of the church, who will meet at 10 o'clock in the Sunday school auditorium. Mrs. Wilbur Jones, superintendent Atlanta association, will be the principal speaker for the afternoon. Circles of the women's society will meet Monday, December 19, in the church with filled Christmas stockings for the good-will centers. circle No. 2 has for sale a few copies of the semi-centennial edition by Dr. M. L. Brittain, which contains a history of the Second Baptist church for the first 50 years of its existence. Circle No. 12 is making a pastor's quilt, the pieces forming a wheel. These womens wish the names of every officer, every worker, and every member of the church embroidered in the wheel. The amount requested is $1 per name.

Mrs. J. S. McCullough, teacher of the Amoma class, was hostess at the church dinner Wednesday evening, assisted by these young women, and committee. The pastor, Dr. Carter Helm Jones, was presented on this occasion, his anniversary, with a birthday cake made by C. A. Evans, and decorated in bright yellow candles. Colonel F. J. Paxon made the presentation speech. The committee assisting Mrs. McCullough was composed of the following: Mesdames Ernest F. Brown, C. A. Evins, Davis Fitzgerald, D. B. Graze, H. B. Jones, Fred W. Patterson and Misses Cora Anne Brown.

Mrs. Carter Helm Jones is expected home at an early date from Oklahoma City, where she is visiting her daughter, Mrs. L. J. Moorman, and is expected to accompany the pastor to Augusta for the state convention, which convenes there December 6-8. Miss Rosa May King, superintendent of the beginners' department, was absent Sunday due to the serious illness of her mother. Mrs. S. S. Martin was in charge of the department. Mrs. Fred W. Patterson, accompanied by Mrs. Carter Brooke Jones, assisted in a musical of the B. Y. P. U. last Sunday evening.

Moreland Rally.

The annual rally of the eighth district of the Baptist Women's Missingary union was held Tuesday, November 22, at Moreland Avenue Baptist church. Mrs. G. S. Oakes, district secretary, presided, enlistment being the keynote of the meeting. Mrs. W. W. Thompson conducted the devotional, reading John 15:1-17.

All but one of the church in the district answered roll call, and good reports were given by the presidents as follows: Decatur first, Mrs. O. R. Ledford; Oakhurst, Mrs. J. A. Davies; Eastside Tabernacle, Mrs. Thurmond Cash; South Decatur, Mrs. J. H. Cowart; Kirkwood, Mrs. W. O. Mitchell; Moreland Avenue, Mrs. W. M. White, vice president.

Mrs. Kate Dawson told of the good work being accomplished at the Kate Dawson good will center, and of their plans for Thanksgiving. The personal service chairman, Mrs. James Kempton, explained the different phases of this work, and how the reports should be filled out. Mrs. Fred Rollins, of Oakhurst gave an interesting talk on her work with the R. A. boys. The ruby anniversary celebration was presented by Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent of the Baptist Woman's Misisonnry union auxiliary of the Atlanta association. Mrs. M. O. Hemperly, sunbeam leader, gave a short talk on her work.

One of the outstanding addresses was made by Miss Julia Allen on the work of the young people's organizations, the Y. W. R.'s, G. A.'s, R. A.'s and Sunbeams, her theme being stewardship and tithing. John R. Sampey's plan for reading the Bible was explained by Mrs. Paul Etheridge, and many of those present availed themselves of the opportunity of securing the book marks at this meeting. The yearly reports show that the societies in this district have made steady progress under the able leadership of Mrs. Oakes.

Briefly Told

Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent of the B. W. M. U. of Atlanta association, made the principal address at Sharon church on the morning of November 30, and at Gordon Street church in the afternoon during the week of prayer for foreign missions.

Mrs. W. J. Neel, president; Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary-treasurer, and Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader of Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Georgia, leave Tuesday evening, December 6, for the Georgia Baptist convention, which meets December 6-8 in Augusta, Ga.

Mrs. Taul B. White, of Rome, mission study chairman of B. W. M. U. of Georgia, and Mrs. A. F. McMahon were leaders in the mission study institute held December 1-3 in Camilla, under the direction of B. W. M. U., and Mrs. J. W. Spence, mission study chairman of the division.

Mrs. Thena White Caldwell, superintendent of Royal Ambassadors of B. W. M. U. Atlanta association, spent the week, November 22 to December 2, at McDonough, teaching every afternoon the textbook, "Prayer and Missions," during the week of prayer, observed by the W. M. S. of the First Baptist church of McDonough, Ga.

Miss Julia Allen, young people's leader of Georgia B. W. M. U., reports the organization of a Y. W. A. at Shorter college with Miriam Austin as president.

Prominent Delegate

Mrs. J. C. White, who was a delegate for the fifth time to the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal church, which was held November 22-27, at Wesley Memorial church.

Brenau College Notes Are of Interest.

At the vesper service Sunday evening Reverend A. J. Moncrief, Jr., of Avondale Estates, gave a most interesting address. Mr. Moncrief took as his theme "Choosing the Higher Things." Prior to the address a musical program was rendered. Miss Ethelyn Ames sang and Miss Dorothy Armstrong played a violin solo. The service was closed by the singing of the Y. W. C. A. benediction.

Charleton S. Hickok of the conservatory faculty appeared in piano recital Monday evening. Mr. Hickok played from the works of Schumann, Chopin, Rubinstein, Debussy, Greig and List. His interpretation of the Schumann sonata was most enjoyable. The Chopin preludes which followed were very colorful and also the Nocturne in C minor. The difficult Aubinstein Etude in C major was executed with ease and appropriate interpretation. The Debussy group entirely charmed the audience. The program ended with the Paraphrase on Rigoletto by Verdi and Liszt. Mr. Hickok is a graduate of Syracuse university and a valuable addition to the conservatory.

Monday and Tuesday the Y. W. C. A. had as their guest Miss Edna Johnson, traveling secretary of the Student Volunteer movement. Miss Johnson made an interesting talk at chapel Tuesday.

The election of freshman class officers was held Saturday evening in the auditorium. The following were elected: President, Miss Helen Kidd, of Racine, Wis.; vice president, Miss Pat Burt, of Memphis, Tenn.; secretary, Miss Anne McCraken, of Marfa, Texas; treasurer, Miss Evelyn Pike, of Lisbon, Ohio; senate members: Miss Rachel Michael, of Roanoke, Va.; Miss Jean Moses, of Great Bend, Kan.; athletic manager, Miss Edna Chambers, of Atlanta; cheer leaders, Miss Virginia Peters, of Roanoke, Va., and Miss Helen Campbell, of Columbus.

Mu Phi Epsilon, honorary musical sorority, and Phi Beta Sigma, honorary literary sorority, entertained at the Dixie Hunt hotel with a tea Monday afternoon honoring Mrs. W. S. Goode, national president of Zeta Phi Eta, honorary oratory society. Representatives of each honorary sorority and social sorority, active members of the Zeta Phi Eta chapter, patrons and patronesses of the honorary sororities and faculty members attended this delightful occasion.

A recital by the junior department of Brenau conservatory was given in the auditorium last Monday evening. Piano solos were played by Misses Cecile Jones, Elizabeth Hulsey, Mary Emma Jones, Frances Turner, Mildred Stanley, Georgia Rudolph, Eileen Starr Davis, Mary Pilgrim and Ruth Logan. Songs were sung by Miss Lessie Simmons and a cello solo played by Miss Rosalind Tucker. A transposition exercise was given by a class of twelve. The faculty of the junior department consists of Mrs. E. B. Michaelis, director; Miss Margaret Newman, voice and piano; Miss Bertha Thalley, piano, violin and ensemble.

State University News of Interest.

Athens, Ga., December 3.—Dr. Joseph S. Stewart, professor of secondary education; Dr. W. D. Hooper, professor of Latin and secretary of the faculty; Dr. E. D. Pusey, professor of education, and Dean T. J. Woofter, of the school of education, all members of the faculty of the University of Georgia, attended the annual meeting of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools in Jacksonville, Fla., from November 29 to December 2. Dr. Stewart is chairman of the Georgia committee, which includes besides Dr. Stewart, Dr. E. A. Pound, Atlanta; Dean J. C. White, Emory university, and Professor B. F. Pickett, Newnan, all of whom attended the Florida gathering.

Members of the Blackfriars, a dramatic organization at the university, plan to present "So This Is London," a three-act comedy, by Arthur Goodrich, in Atlanta and in other Georgia towns just after the Christmas holidays. The following students have been given parts in the play: Misses Alice Rowland, Nora Fortson, Margaret Fortson and Frances Forbes, Athens; Robert E. Falligant, Thunderbolt; Armand Eyler, Savannah; Ralph Wardlaw, New York city; Al Ross, Chicago; Malcolm Lockhart, Decatur, and Livingston Travis, Savannah.

St. Andrew's Day Is Observed Nov. 30 By Episcopalians

Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Episcopal editor, submits the following article:

"The day of St. Andrew, the Apostle." This is designated Wednesday, November 30, in the calendar of the Episcopal church.

To recall the incident of Andrew bring his brother, Simon Peter, into the presence of Jesus Christ, is to comprehend the purpose of that splendid organization, the "Brotherhood of St. Andrew," which constitutes one of the finest missionary enterprises in the Episcopal denomination.

The work of the "Brotherhood of St. Andrew" is carried along almost identical lines with that of the "Daughters of the King." Each organization has for its first objective the rule of "Prayer," and for its second, that of "Service," always having in mind the Saviour's words to the two brothers, Andrew and Simon Peter, as they were casting their nets in the Sea of Galilee, "Follow me, and I will make you fishes of men."

Disciples of Christ Inaugurate Program.

A one-day convention of the Disciples of Christ in this section of Georgia was held at the First Christian church Thursday. The purpose of the convention was to inaugurate a program which is to culminate in Washington in 1930 when the 1900th anniversary of the Pentecost will be observed.

Dr. Royal J. Dye, former missionary on the Congo; Neal K. McGowan and Mrs. Emma Louise Horn were the chief speakers.

Pipe Smokers To Give Banquet.

Dr. Horace Grant, president of the National Order of Pipe Smokers, announces that the order will hold their fifth annual banquet on Monday, December 5, at Vaughn's banquet hall, Forsyth and Luckit streets, at 7 o'clock. The dinner will be informal and the ladies of the Macca Civic club will entertain the members and their wives and friends.

Dr. John T. M. Johnston, author and financier, will be the principal speaker and James B. Nevin, editor of the Georgian, will preside. Every lady attending the dinner will be presented with a memento of the occasion.

Methodist News of Interest Throughout the State of Georgia

The Woman's Missionary society of Druid Hills Methodist church will observe Harvert Day with an all-day meeting at the church December 5, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. The morning session will be devoted to a special program, Miss Daisy Davies conducting the devotional, after which Mrs. George Irvin, returned missionary from Manchuria, will address the society. Dr. Elizabeth Branch will discuss "Woman's Relations to International Peace." At the afternoon session yearly reports from all departments will be given, after which the annual election and installation of officers will take place.

Park Street Missionary Society.

The literary meeting of W. M. S. of Park Street Methodist church was held at the church Monday afternoon. Mrs. D. M. Therrell presiding. Mrs. Therrell gave the devotional using Jonah, one of the minor Prophets. All the women were urged to register and vote in the coming elections. The donations for the Wesley Memorial pantry shower were called for and turned over to Miss Leila Culberson to be taken to the hospital. The reports of individual charities showed a good report for Thanksgiving day gifts.

"The Messiah."

On Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the church, the Park Street choir, under the direction of Mrs. Edward Akin, assisted by the chorus from Agnes Scott will present "The Messiah" from Handel. This promises to be a rare treat, and all lovers of good music are cordially invited to attend.

Homecoming Day.

December 11 the "Mothers' Class" of Park Street church will have a homecoming day, and all former members of the class are invited to be present. At the same time a memorial to Mrs. R. E. Barnes will be held. Mrs. Barnes has served faithfully and well her class, and is greatly missed by her follow workers, who will pay tribute to her memory at this time.

Modern Artistry in Short Hair

FEMININE variableness in the Bobbed Coiffure is attainable if one will only patronize those who make a study of the latest Parisian modes in hair dressing.

Mr. Allen, a representative of the Paristyle Novelty company, will be at the beauty parlor on the fourth floor of M. Rich & Bros. company for another week, and while he is here every chic young miss or smart matron who strives to attain the individual yet modish effect in the dressing of the coiffure should by all means visit M. Rich & Bros. Beauty Shop and let Mr. Allen cut and dress your hair. For Mr. Allen arrived just last week from New York with the latest Parisian styles in hair cutting. He will first cut your hair in the style that is most becoming to your own individual type and then he will finger wave the hair into a style that is entirely new and becoming.

Mr. Allen is one of those artist who suits the bob to the personality of the individual, and he features especially the Parisian swirl bobs.

I saw one of the coiffures dressed by Mr. Allen that I thought especially attractive. This mode of hairdressing was ultra-Parisian. The hair was swirled straight back from the face on one side and waved in soft undulated waves close to the head on the other side. This style of coiffure seemed to change the appearance of the model from a rather plain, well-dressed girl into a smart, chic young miss.

There is nothing that will give the finishing touch to a smart ensemble that a beautiful coiffure will.

In our modern day one is eternally searching for the new, smart effects, and so the ultra-smart no longer endure the monotony of the "Le Garcon" or straight headress, but varies her coiffure to the new versions and effects that such an artist as Mr. Allen can achieve. Do not fail to visit the Beauty Parlor on the Fourth Floor of M. Rich & Bros. this week as Mr. Allen will cut your hair for the usual price of $1.00; the finger wave is also $1.00. Do not fail to avail yourself of this remarkable opportunity.

IF YOU would be beautiful remove the superfluous hair that is so embarrassing and mars the loveliness of the most beautiful women.

The safest and best way to do this is to use the Tricho System Treatments. This treatment dries up the hair roots and is the correct and scientific method of removal, the treatments are administered by a lady operator and are absolutely painless, will not mar the skin in any way and the results are permanent. Other methods not so scientifically correct are apt to leave a scar or endanger the skin.

Free booklets will be mailed you or a practical demonstration will be given if you will write or call Tricho System of Atlanta, Inc., 622 Candler building.

WHAT is so ideal as a Christmas present for HER in the form of a lamp or a candlestick?

You'll find them at Binders' in the lamp department—an assortment that will delight your fancy and intrigue your imagination. Last week I saw there a magnificent assortment of beautiful lamps—among them three that particularly took the eye.

One was a Japanese thing of soft, dull gold with a parchment shade on which was delicately inscribed the colorful likeness of a bird of paradise perched on a spray of lei blossoms. Another was in antique blue with fetching Chinese inscriptions inscribed. A third was multicolored, the base being an Arabian wooer seated beneath a palm, singing desert love songs to the accompaniment of a mandolin. All were worthy of the Orient itself.

The candlesticks range from the dainty and intimate styles to the formal fashions, chief among them being holders composed of china ladies wearing old-fashioned, bouffant skirts. Every other type is shown in abundance.

These ideal gifts may be found at Binders!

Paris Sends Christmas Gifts via The Linen Store

THE most beautiful silk lingerie, dainty step-ins and teds of the finest silk, sheer georgette undies that would delight the heart of any girl on Christmas morning if she received them as a gift. Beautiful negligees of every description, from the Japanese kimonos with their flowing sleeves and quaint embroidery to the sheer gossamer-like Parisian negligees, the newest creations of the mode. Then if one wishes to give some friend a piece of fine linen for a Christmas present the Linen Store is the place to select it, for they have imported linens and laces of rare beauty, bridge sets, table linen and bed linen. Then, too, there are some lovely gifts for the baby to be found at the Linen Store, Whitehall street.

THE canny man will not fail to think of furs for his wife's Christmas. They delight the hearts of women; their rich colors and sumptuous appearance make a strong appeal to them. They are beautiful, lasting, useful—and, above all, appropriate.

One of the most delightful stocks of magnificent furs to be found anywhere is on display at the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuRose company's fur department. It includes scores of wonderful neckpieces and a wide assortment of beautiful fur coats.

In the stock is an unusually wide selection of pointed fox, cross fox, silver fox, ashes of roses, cocoa and blue fox. In addition there's a brand new, wonderful color in fox fur—the cherry red—which is a sheer delight to the eye.

The entire stock of coats is marked down very reasonably. If you want a coat, you can get it now at a bargain because of the unprecedented stay of warm weather, which has resulted in only slight demand for furs and makes it necessary for Chamberlin's to move its stock rapidly.

I NEEDED a new hat terribly. So I went to Maison Maurice. They had an assortment in almost any shape or style that you might wish of faille silks, black satins and adorable little close-fitting metallic hats that seem to suggest the holiday spirit. But should you not find the hat that you have in mind, Mrs. Childress, the designer at Maison Maurice, who is famed for her skill in the art of designing and fashioning hats on the head, will be only too glad to make a hat to suit your own ideas. And for Christmas Maison

Maurice are displaying the most beautiful assortment of vanity articles for the toilet table.

Some of the sets consist of comb, brush and mirror powder box, buffer and finger-nail file and shoe horn. They are made of amber and various shades of mother of pearl.

One especially useful gift that I saw was an overnight bag of handsome leather filled with the daintiest note paper. There were also corsages of exquisite flowers in countless numbers on display at Maison Maurice, and I am sure that whether it be a hat or a Christmas gift you will find just what you most desire at Maison Maurice.

Gifts That Are Different Are Found at Dobbs & Wey's

THERE'S no more fascinating place in all Atlanta, nor a more fertile field for beautiful and appropriate gifts than the new lamp shop at M. Rich & Bros. Co.

I visited this department last week and got a decided thrill out of looking over one of the most comprehensive and magnificent stocks of rare and gorgeous lamps I have ever seen. From every quarter of the globe they came—lamps with the lure of the Orient brooding about them; big, tall lamps with a stately glow; dainty little lamps for milady's boudoir, and lamps for every place and occasion and pocketbook.

In addition, there were gifts of other types—presents for the man of discriminating taste, including cigarette boxes of appealing design; smoking stands and accessories of every kind. Then, too, there were boxes and trays of French tole, flower prints framed, silhouettes in old French fashions framed, ancient French histories made into cigarette boxes, humidors and many other interesting things.

But most important of all, to my mind, were the colorful lamps, for one can never have too many lamps.

They suggest coziness and add warmth and color and makes a home really attractive.

One lamp I saw in Rich's lamp department was pictured in Vogue's Christmas gift number. Very modern in feeling, this gift is certain to please one who favors the latest and smartest in decoration. A chic little lady of beautifully colored glazed pottery holds the pleated shade, which is striped in yellow.

The quaint French miniatures framed in piano keys make a unique and tasteful Christmas gift.

By all means visit the lamp and gift department of M. Rich & Bros. Co. before selecting your Christmas gifts.

JUST take your shopping list and go to Hawkes', 67 Whitehall street. There you will find gifts for almost everybody. There I saw the most appropriate gifts for one's father, brother or sweetheart. It was a handsome leather cigarette case and cigarette lighter, covered with real ostrich skin, very new and durable leather. The two articles were only $12.50, and there were boy cases and bill folders to match. I saw cigarette lighters ranging in price from $3.00 to $6.00 in a variety of leathers and colors. There were book ends of every description, door stops that are both ornamental and serviceable; and for sister or mother, one article that especially attracted my attention was a portfolio of ostrich skin, completely fitted out with pen and pencil and letter opener, covered in ostrich and filled with dainty French writing paper. Hawkes' also have a large stock of the finest French stationery of every description.

WHY give the stereotyped gift for Christmas? The fastidious woman—be she wife or sweetheart, homekeeper or college girl—appreciates the subtlety of a present that is "different;" one that carries an atmosphere all its own and is far removed from the usual run of commonplace tokens of affection.

Dobbs & Wey have the most exquisite line of imported Japanese and English tea sets in beautiful shades of dusky red and jade green. They are of quaint and delicate design and radiate an atmosphere of lands across the seas. Magnificently wrought by master craftsmen of other nations. They were imported specially for Christmas by Dobbs & Wey.

In addition there are charming Tiffany bronzes, delightfully wrought into candlesticks, vases, bowls and many other useful and attractive articles. Ask for a copy of the Tiffany Gift Book.

As for the man, an ideal gift is the Smokodor, to be seen in a variety of colors at Dobbs & Wey.

Why not pay a visit to one of the Dobbs & Wey stores and make selections that will prove doubly acceptable?

Athens Woman's Club Hostess To 8th District Convention

The eigth district met at Memorial hall, Athens, Ga., November 18, with the Athens Woman's club hostess, with Mrs. J. W. Gholston, president, and Mrs. T. F. Greene, president of Athens Woman's club, presiding. Mrs. T. W. Crawford, chaplain, read the collect and "Georgia Land," directed by Miss Mabel Wedge and led by the Pioneer club, was sung.

Mrs. T. F. Greene extended the welcome and presented Mrs. J. W. Gholston, district president, as pretty and witty, courageous and gritty, loyal and loving, kindly and givey." Mrs. Gholston voiced the appreciation to the hostess clubs for the welcome extended and preparations made for the convention. In her annual address she spoke of the contributions of Eighth District Federation, having furnished three state presidents. During the past year six clubs have been brought into the federation; 17 Junior clubs have been organized and the district is 100 per cent in contributions to Tallulah. Minutes of previous meeting were read by Mrs. C. B. Ayers, acting secretary, and were approved.

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, second vice president, presented the following distinguished guests: Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president; Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, general federation director; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, first vice president; Mrs. W. W. Stark, treasurer; Miss Rosa Woodberry, parliamentarian, and the following state chairmen, Mrs. Ira Farmer, Mrs. Joe Myers, Miss Nora Jones, Mrs. W. L. Hodges, Mrs. Lena F. Lewis, Mrs. C. A. VenNooy, Mrs. T. F. Greene, Mrs. C. M. Snellings and Mrs. Lamar Rucker.

Mrs. Brantley's Talk.

"How to Develop Leadership" was the vital and helpful message left by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, who outlined in a broad and helpful way the duties and responsibilities of club members and officers. Mrs. C. A. Vernoon, chairman of May day, gave the gospel of health and presented Dr. B. B. Bagby, health commissioner, who told how to get health in a community and urged the putting over of the Ellis health law.

Mrs. Sanford presented the following distinguished guests, who had just arrived: Mrs. Arthur Delaprierre, Mrs. Howard McCall and Mrs. W. C. Kellogg. Dr. Carey spoke of improvements of child health through child welfare, mental hygiene and rural hospitals.

Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, General Federation director, urged resolutions against the showing of "The American Tragedy," answering in full the questionnaire, reading federation news, complete club reports and reading the Bible as a means of combatting the flood of atheism now prevalent.

Federation hour was led by Mrs. A. H. Brenner, first vice president. Five speakers had been selected from the district to talk three minutes on "The Scope of th Federation—Why Belong?" Representatives spoke as follows: Lexington, Mrs. T. W. Crawford; Comer, Mrs. R. C. Davison; Crawford, Mrs. G. A. Howard; Covington, Mrs. W. C. Clarke; Athens, Mrs. Horace Ritchie. The vote of the assembly gave first place to Mrs. G. A. Howard, Jr.

Mrs. Howard McCall, who judged reports of clubs in the district for the awarding of the loving cup offered by Mrs. Gholston for outstanding work, told of her work on these reports, and why twice the cup has gone to the Lexington Woman's club. Mrs. J. H. McWhirter, president of this club, accepted for her club.

An impressive memorial service was conducted by Mrs. A. C. Skelton, first vice president, and Miss Sallie Veal, chairman of memorials. The members who have died during the year are: Mrs. W. C. Smith, Mrs. M. L. Stevens, Mrs. B. W. Maxwell, Mrs. H. M. Kenimer, Mrs. W. W. St. John, Mrs. Fannie Pittard and Mrs. Clinton Bryant. A large design was prepared and as each name was called a handsome white chrysanthemum was placed in the wreath and a sketch of her life given by a member of her club. Misses Lucy Gholston and Erma Frost sweetly sang "Going Down the Valley," and the wreath was moved to the grave of Mrs. Bryant.

"Glimpses of Tallulah" was given by Mrs. Howard McCall and in the absence of Mrs. A. M. Wilkins, Tallulah district chairman, the secretary read her report, showing the district to be 100 per cent in contributions.

Miss Willie Mae Cook, credentials chairman, reported seven state officers, seven state chairmen, six district officers, 27 district chairmen, 27 club delegates, 15 club presidents and 65 visitors in attendance.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were presented by the nominating committee and unanimously elected: President, Mrs. A. C. Skelton; first vice president, Mrs. J. H. McWhirter; second vice president, Mrs. Harry Moore; recording secretary, Mrs. D. T. Barnes; chaplain, Mrs. R. E. Hughes; historian, Mrs. W. A. Rowe; treasurer, Mrs. E. B. Cade; press agent, Mrs. W. C. Clark.

Courtesy resolutions were read and the convention indorsed Mrs. S. V. Sanford for president of Georgia federation.

A president's luncheon, presided over by Mrs. W. L. Hodges was featured. Place cards, corsages and chrysanthemums from the garden of Mrs. Gholston, were evidences of her loving thoughtfulness. The luncheon was prepared and served by Athens Woman's club. As a recognition of her splendid work Mrs. Gholston was presented a silver tray by Mrs. Hodges, and flowers were presented her by the Comer Woman's club.

Miss Sara Noell was one of the pages. At the close of the convention a tea was given by Mrs. Lamar Rucker at her historic home replete with exquisite furnishings. The handsomely appointed tea table with its priceless silver was the admiration of all. The epergne, holding blossoms in pastel tints, reflected beauty in an antiqué mirror. The silver service belonged to Mrs. Rucker's mother, Mrs. Nellie Peters Black.

Receiving with Mrs. Rucker were Mrs. Gholston and state officers present.

District and state officers were entertained for dinner at G. S. T. C. by Dr. Pound and Miss Moina Michael.

It is a pardonable sense of pride we take in the brilliant administration of Mrs. Gholston, since she belongs to Comer Woman's club. Not only has she a wonderful executive ability, but a rare charm and sweetness permeates her every work, and she is a real diplomat.

Mrs. Evans Issues Letter to Fifth District Women

Mrs. J. D. Evans, 534 Boulevard Terrace, N. E., Atlanta, Walnut 5424, chairman of citizenship, Fifth District Federation of Women's clubs, has issued a letter to her division chairmen in the form of a clever acrostic.

C—Civic consciousness as expressed in Community Service, for which the name of the chairman, Mrs. R. K. Rambo, 814 Briarcliff road, is synonymous.

I—Information is inspiration, Mrs. R. L. Turman, 971 Myrtle street, is a regular information bureau and she requests each club to put on a citizenship training course and join in one big citizenship institute during the club year.

T—Taxes. Poll taxes are due now. Be sure to attend to this before December 19, so as to be eligible to vote next year. Taxes are necessary for schools, roads, public health and care of the needy. Register and vote so as to have a voice in the expenditure of these funds.

I—Immigration has builded America. Be kind to the foreigner within our gates—they appreciate friendliness just as you would in a foreign country; they are eager for an education and to become real Americans. Mrs. C. W. Freeman, Argonne drive, Atlanta, is Americanization chairman.

Z—Zealously observe the laws of our country. Example is better than precept in teaching law observance to our children. Have at least one law observance program and refrain from careless criticism of laws and officers.

E—Entertain your legislators and senators; invite them to your club meetings to speak on the laws we sponsor. Work in his home county is far more effective than lobbying at the capitol. Mrs. Charles Morris, 1765 North Decatur road, chairman of legislation will advise you as to legislation the federation is sponsoring.

N—Never forget our ex-service men. They helped to make the world safe for womanhood. Mrs. H. M. Nichols, Peachtree road, chairman for ex-service men has a dream for a new hospital. Help her to secure it.

S—Sacrifices of our forefathers made this great United States. To live up to their training and example; their devotion to duty and respect for law and order will solve America's problems.

H—Help our young people realize their responsibility as citizens. Organize junior clubs. Mrs. Fred E. Johnson, Springhaven street, Hapeville, chairman will assist you. Let us keep the cup for junior membership another year.

I—Ideals. Hold fast to them; inspire our club members and young people with biography, oratorical contests over radio, songs, pageants and memorials. Add to Independence day, Flag day, Armistice day other days of persons and events and observe them with suitable programs. Have 10 minutes on each club program devoted to important citizenship facts and political happenings.

P—Patriotism; the conviction that life itself is of secondary importance to the life of our nation; a love of country that makes voting and an intelligent study of our problems a sacred duty. VOTE in all elections, municipal, county, state and national. Have you a little election in your town? It is the duty of the local citizenship chairman to bring this to the attention of her club.

Miss Julia Sparks, federation headquarters, 509 Chamber of Commerce building, Atlanta, will furnish literature and information.

Seventh District Assembled At Marietta for 18th Convention

The eighteenth annual convention of the seventh district met at Marietta Saturday, November 20, with the Cobb county federation as hostess. There was shown marked progress along constructive lines throughout the clubs of the district. Under the leadership of Mrs. Charles B. McGarity, of Dallas, district president, the district has made for itself a place that is outstanding among the districts of the state.

The convention was held in the new clubhouse of the Marietta Woman's club. Mrs. A. D. Little, president, and Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, is president of the Cobb County Federation of Women's Clubs, which includes the Women's clubs of Marietta, Smyrna, Kennesaw, Austell, the Carrie Djar Reading club of Acworth, the Springhill Improvement club and several P.-T. A.'s in these towns.

Miss Louise Schilling, of Marietta, was chairman of credentials, and the meeting was called to order by Mrs. Bailey, and after assembly singing, the invocation was made by Rev. Trigg Thomas. Mrs. Bailey, representing the clubwomen of the county federation, gave a welcome and Len Baldwin welcomed the visitors in behalf of Marietta. The response to the welcome was given by Mrs. Ernest Davis, a talented member of the Feltonian club of Taylorsville.

Presents Guests.

Mrs. Charles B. McGarity, of Dallas, seventh district president, presented the distinguished guests. Ex-Senator Rebecca L. Felton related interesting reminiscences of life in the Cherokee country in the days of the sixties. Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke on "Developing Leadership" and in this gave the clubwomen much information as to the complete functioning of the federation. Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, director for Georgia in the general federation, spoke of the vital issues of national importance in the general federation as relating to individual clubs. Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of Tallulah Falls Industrial school, gave the history of the school, telling of the great work that is being done for the mountain children of that section, emphasizing the need of more scholarships.

Other distinguished guests bringing greetings were: Mrs. J. E. McElroy, president of the ninth district; Mrs. Kate Green Hess, of Kirkwood, president of the fifth district; Mrs. W. B. Price-Smith, president of the Atlanta Woman's club; Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, state chairman of transportation; Mrs. Ralph Northcutt, state chairman of library extension; Mrs. W.C. Martin, Dalton, state chairman of American citizenship; Mrs. Oscar Peeples, of Cartersville, state chairman of social and industrial relations, and Mrs. Claude Irby, of Kingston, the last three mentioned being forever district presidents. District officers reporting were Mrs. C. B. McGarity, of Dallas, president, whose report appears in full; Mrs. W. F. Collar, of Austell, first vice president, who spoke on club extension and junior work; Miss Bai Hall, of Calhoun, second vice president, who presented a series suggestive of interesting club programs for coming year.

Mrs. L. M. Awtrey, of Acworth, served as recording secretary for the day in the absence of Mrs. M. C. Tarver; Miss Bessie Crew, of Dallas, gave an account of work done by corresponding secretary. The report of the treasurer, Mrs. B. F. Lowther, of Cedartown, and the auditor, Mrs. J. R. Harling, of Taylorsville, showed one club in arrears as to state and general federation dues.

The following club reports were given by club presidents: Calhoun Woman's club, by Mrs. Tom Curtis; Austell Woman's club, by Mrs. M. Z. Harbor; Cedartown Woman's club, by Mrs. R. D. Cantrell; the Lesche Woman's club, by Mrs. W. M. Jones; the Cobb County federation, by Mrs. E. M. Bailey; the Cherokee Woman's club, of Cartersville, by Mrs. Wilbur Ham; the History club, of Kingston, by Mrs. Claude Irby; the Feltonian club of Taylorsville, by Mrs. J. H. Jolly; the Carrie Dzar Reading club of Acworth, by Mrs. D. W. McLain; the Kenuesaw Woman's club, sent in by Mrs. Virgil Gray; Lafayette Woman's club; Dallas Woman's club, by Mrs. W. F. Byrd, representing Mrs. H. Y. Holland; Rockmart Woman's club, by Miss May Jones, representing Mrs. L. O. Jones; the Marietta Woman's club, by Mrs. A. D. Little, and the Tallapoosee club, by Mrs. A. V. Howe, representing Mrs. Alice Irby.

District chairmen reporting were Mrs. H. J. Smith, of Dalton, community service; Mrs. C. S. Foster, of Dallas, health; Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, conservation; Miss Louise Schilling, of Marietta, legislation; Mrs. Nell Manley McWilliams, of Dalton, art; Miss Mattie Mitchell of Acworth, international relations; Mrs. L. C. Waldrop, of Tallapoosa, club institutes; Mrs. A. V. Howe, of Tallapoosa, on good roads and highways; Mrs. Lee Langley, Roosville, gift schlarships; Miss Irma Hardage, Rockmart, on student aid.

Mrs. John K. Ottley spoke to especially commend the district's work in club institutes, Mrs. L. C. Waldrop, chairman, who reported 300 women attending the five institutes held in the district this year.

An impressive memorial service for the five clubwomen of the district who have passed away during the year was held by Miss Nell Cochran, of Rockmart. The home economics scholarship plan for student aid was presented by Mrs. M. E. Judd, of Dalton, and the district voted to give $250 per year for the next four years to the cause of student aid.

Miss McGarity Welcomed.

The assembly stood to welcome little Miss Minnie Mabel McGarity, four months' old daughter of Mrs. C. B. McGarity. Mrs. McGarity, who declined reelection to the presidency, was succeeded by Mrs. Herbert Hague, of Marietta, who for many years was president of the Cobb County Federation of Women's Clubs and also president of the Cobb County Fair association. Officers in service declining reelection unanimously, the following elected to serve with Mrs. Hague were Mrs. L. C. Waldrop, of Tallapoosa, first vice president; Miss Bai Hall, of Calhoun, second vice president; Mrs. Irby Sheats, of Kingston, recording secretary, and Mrs. A. B. Karwisch, treasurer. Mrs. W. M. Jones, of the Dalton Lesche club, very beautifully expressed the district's appreciation for not only the services, but personalities of the outgoing officers. Cordial appreciation was expressed to Cobb County federation and to Marietta Woman's club for the many courtesies extended for the day.

A luncheon at which the "get-acquainted" spirit was noticeable was served by the Cobb County federation in the banquet hall of the Marietta Woman's club, Mrs. A. D. Little, chairman of arrangements. Nominations were presented by Mrs. M. E. Judd and her committee, who were Mrs. H. Y. Holland, of Dallas; Mrs. Claude Irby, of Kingston; Mrs. D. W. McLain, of Acworth; Mrs. L. G. Garrett, of Austell, and Mrs. Ernest Davis, of Taylorsville. The invitation extended by Mrs Wilbur Ham to hold the next convention with the Cherokee club of Cartersville was accepted.

Mrs. Herbert Hague Holds Splendid Record in Work

Mrs. Herbert E. Hague, of Marietta, newly-elected president of the seventh district of the state federation, has accomplished many remarkable achievements. She is a charter member of the Marietta Woman's club assisting in its organization, and served for two and a half years as its president, being elected as secretary and working as a very active member in its activities. While president she organized the Marietta P.-T. A., which is one of the strongest associations in that community. Mrs. Hague was for two terms president of Cobb county federation and through that office assisted the county health nurse, county agricultural agent, and Cobb County Fair association, being a member of that body, and put over as a tremendous success for several years the woman's department of the fair. She served as child welfare chairman of the seventh district and handled the Red cross roll call for Cobb county for several years. As a leader in the child welfare association, and its first chairman, she was prominently identified with the work, and is allied with St. James Episcopal church, and all movements for civic improvement.

Possessed of social charm and graciousness, her country home, Ridge Crest, is noted for its atmosphere of friendliness and hospitality, and she personally manages in a most capable manner the small farm on which her home is located.

High Honor Conferred Upon State President

Mrs. J. M. High, donor of the statue of the great commoner, Alexander H. Stephens, to be unveiled December 8, in the Hall of Fame, in Washington, D. C., and Governor Hardman, chief executive of the state, have extended an invitation to Mrs. A. P. Brantley, president of the Georgia federation, to be among the distinguished guests attending the exercises. It is a national event honoring one of the greatest of Georgians, and the high honor conferred upon Mrs. Brantley is a compliment to Georgia clubwomen, an organized body of the most dependable women within the boundary lines of the Empire state of the south.

State Press Chairman Discusses State Work Led by Mrs. Brantley

BY MISS JULIA SPARKS,
State Press Chairman.

Every well planned campaign is based upon a thorough knowledge of the situation and the setting of very definite objectives. For this purpose leaders of armies hold councils, the leaders of finance and business hold their executive meetings followed by committee meetings that the smallest detail may be considered.

The Georgia federation, a part of a great international body of women with a vision of a federated club in every town and hamlet, first in the United States and later in the other countries, a vision of better homes, better educational facilities, better opportunities for the underprivileged child, better highways, a more general and sincere appreciation of art and music and literature, conservation of natural resources and many other lines of endeavor for the betterment of the human family making life happier and more worth while; Georgia's part in this great army of women is led by an able woman, Mrs. A. P. Brantley, Blackshear, Ga., president of the Georgia federation.

Mrs. Brantley, in the almost four years of her administration, has striven to put the Georgia federation on a business basis and has stressed efficiency and accuracy along all lines. The federation being composed of clubs doing different lines of work, all working toward the same end but by widely divergent routes, has not found it easy to get accurate information and records as do organizations that do only certain lines of work. Clubs in the Georgia federation range from needlework and garden clubs to history clubs where the subjects are handled in a manner similar to the great forums of the country.

Mrs. Brantley is at her desk for hours every day the same as the head of any large business and has never found any trip too long or hard to take in order to meet with federated clubwomen. The past two months has been a succession of meetings, beginning with the Southeastern council at Newport News in October, followed by the state executive board and 12 district meetings. Two or three of the districts held meetings on conflicting dates and these she had to miss, but was ably represented by the vice presidents, Mrs. A. H. Brenner and Mrs. S. V. Sanford.

"I want to go out of office feeling that I have fulfilled every obligation of my office to the best of my ability," said Mrs. Brantley when speaking to her official family at the recent executive board meeting.

The second district meeting, which was held at Moultrie on Friday, December 2, brought to a close the 12 district meetings for this year. The change from spring to fall for the district meetings has met with general favor and they have all been well attended; more state chairmen and officers have attended the meetings this year than usual.

Mrs. Brantley has attended 10 district meetings this fall, at each one giving her message on "Developing Leadership Through Knowing the Federation," and conflicting dates alone preventing her attending the other two. During the four years as president Mrs. Brantley has attended meetings in the districts as follows: First district, three meetings and one visit to Huntington club, Savannah; second district, three meetings; third district, two meetings; fourth district, three meetings, one meeting of the executive board and one meeting with Union Improvement club; fifth district, one meeting and one meeting of presidents council; sixth district, one meeting; seventh district, three meetings; eighth district, three meetings and three club institutes, one county federation and spoke once at Teachers' college, Athens; Ninth district, two meetings and one visit to Winder Woman's club; tenth district, one meeting; eleventh district, four meetings, three district executive board meetings; twelfth district, three meetings.

Official Family Changed.

This official family is changed now, nine new district presidents going into office in the past four weeks and this will mean added clerical work and a close cooperation on the part of the president with these new leaders. Mrs. Brantley has repeatedly said that on the vice presidents the success of the federation work rested. Organized like our state government, what would the governor of Georgia do with the state machinery without the great Georgia counties and districts functioning to the best of their ability?

Albany Woman's Club Observes Tallulah Birthday

The Albany Woman's club celebrated the eighteenth birthday of Tallulah Falls school with a November luncheon. Mrs. J. M. Patterson, president of the club, presented the birthday cake with its eighteen candles, the gift of Mrs. Kenith Gibson. Mrs. H. H. Perry, chairman, Tallulah, cut the cake. A love offering for the school was taken and $55.90 realized. Two $150 scholarships were given and many gifts of preserves, jellies, canned goods and clothing.

A brief bession was held and the announcement made that 24 new members had been added to the club in October. It was announced that all members were expected to serve on one of the departments or divisions of work. Seven honorary members were added.

Guests of honor were Miss Caroline Hazard, former president of Wellesly college; Miss L. R. Tierney, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Homer Williams, recording secretary of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs. Miss Hazard is a member of the Hazard family of Peachdale, R. I., who have given so liberally to the Negro Industrial school, of Albany. Albany citizens are very proud of this school, some of the leading citizens serving on its board of directors. Miss Hazard and Miss Tierney are en route to their winter home at Santa Barbara, Calif.

Miss Hazard was presented by the president, Mrs. Patterson, and read several of her poems from her book just off the press, "Songs in the Sun."

Miss Tierney told many interesting anecdotes about the early days of women's clubs and spoke of the great organizations that have come from the efforts of those pioneers in women's work.

Mrs. Homer Williams, recording secretary and state chairman of literature and program, was presented and following the lead of Mrs. Hazard Mrs. Williams appealed to the club to look for the best and beautiful and to do the work and the useful things nearest to them. Mrs. Williams urged mothers to see that the ideal of clearness and righteousness prevailed in the reading at home.

Mrs. H. H. Perry, whose beautiful voice added so much to the state council meeting sang several songs.

Mrs. Patterson presented Mrs. J. R. Whitehead, whose gracious hospitality extended to visitors and her townspeople at lovely old "Iris Court" has meant much to the social life of Albany.

(Note—Since this story came in the daily papers have carried the announcement of the death of Mrs. Whitehead, the lovely little lady who was always happy to share her beautiful home with its rare inherited treasures.)

Vidalia Bronte Club Presents Program.

The hostesses of the Vidalia Bronte club at the November meeting were Mrs. Bobbitt and Mrs. Herring, at the home of the latter. The following program, emphasizing seven worthwhile topics, was given:

Leader, Mrs. J. A. Bland; "Sunday—Do You Appreciate Your Religious Environment?" Mrs. L. M. Williamson; vocal duet, Misses Price and Thomas; "Monday—Your Educational Advantages," Mrs. W. O. Davis; "Tuesday—Your Health and Home," Mrs. E. P. Woodward; "Wednesday—Your Work and Friends," Mrs. Ella Jenkins; "Thursday—Your Blessings," Mrs. George L. Johnson; "Friday—Your Town and County," Mrs. E. D. Blitch; "Saturday—Your State and Nation," Mrs. Mayer. Refreshments were served by Misses Bobbitt and Herring.

Fort Valley Club Hears Mrs. Newton.

The Fort Valley Woman's club featured at the meeting held at the home of Mrs. J. E. Davidson, an address by Ralph Newton, Peach county school superintendent. In continuation of a study of America by the club, Mr. Newton spoke on the topic "Outstanding Men of America Today." The club is beginning what bids fair to be a year of worthwhile endeavor. Cooperating with Supsrintendent Lambert, of the city schools, the clubwomen are sponsoring physical examination of the school children, assisted by the physicians in the city.

The club is active in trying to secure a county health officer, having failed to have the recommendation of the grand jury, but have that as an objective in the field of endeavor. The civic committee is sponsoring a campaign to "Save the Holly," as Christmas time draws near.

Cooperating with Superintendent J. F. Lambert, of the public schools, the Fort Valley Woman's club will sponsor a physical examination of the pupils of the school. The doctors and nurses in the city have signified their willingness to give their services in this worthy endeavor. The clubwomen have been very active in trying to secure the service of a county health officer and having failed to have the required recommendation of the grand jury thus far, are now using this means of helping in some measure the children to be physically fit for their school duties, which will tend to make them useful citizens.

Carrollton Club Features Program.

Carrollton Business and Professional Woman's club met Monday afternoon and the entertainment committee consisted of the following members of group No. 2: Miss Bess Harmon, mistress of ceremonies; Mrs. J. P. Glenn, Miss Ella Stovall, Mesdames L. Z. Dorsett, Gladys Barker, Jim Harmon, I. C. Loftin and Misses Mamie Herrin, Mae Belle Scudder, Edith Fletcher and Mrs. Grady Hamrick. The club had as their guests Mrs. C. E. Roop, Mrs. L. M. Turner and Mrs. Willis Smith.

Miss Murray, who has been here getting up the play, "Cupid Up-to-Date," was asked to give a reading and responded with her favorite selection, "The Violin Told," followed by a dance by Miss Murray, Misses Katherine Todd and Mildred Spurlock. There was a drawing contest, in which Mrs. C. E. Roop won first prize; Miss Vannie Phillips, second prize, and Mrs. Willis Smith, third. The name of Miss Annie Mae Hamrick was added to the membership.

Tallulah School Principal Gets Unusual Letter

The following Thanksgiving letter, written to Miss Anne Carrington Davis, principal of Georgia Federation's school at Tallulah Falls, might well be captioned "By Their Fruits You Shall Know Them."

"My dear Miss Davis: As I have not had the pleasure of seeing you, will write. Suppose I had first best tell you that I am Helen's mother, and also Hazel's, Frances', Gladys', Leila and Helen's ex-teacher. I know that you must indeed be very happy if you realize the good work you are doing in the religious, moral and literary training you are giving your girls. Even the talks you give them in the dining room (Helen tells me of them) are just an inspiration to me, an old mother at home with lots of babies and domestic duties to perform.

"You are sewing good seed in the hearts and minds of your girls that in due time will make them the right kind of wives, mothers and business women our country needs. I am simply filled with appreciation and pride over the improvement Helen has made, and I am sure she is only a normal sample of what your school is doing. My sister had occasion some time ago to visit your school when her husband was making some kind of investigation of schools when he served in the Georgia legislature and she says she has never seen a school system she admired or approved more than yours."

Boston Twentieth Club Met With Mrs. Horn.

The Boston Twentieth Century club held its November meeting with Mrs. J. A. Horn, hostess, and Mrs. Claude Rountree, presiding. Miss Jess Vann led community singing. Mrs. E. L. McKinnon read report that was read at convention in Moultrie December 2. Mrs. Webster was voted in as an active member. Miss Page has charge of the story hour for the children beginning December 3, at the library. Mrs. Lundy and Mrs. Ed. Norton played a duet. Mrs. H. L. Groover read a Thanksgiving poem. Miss Lillian Bradshaw sang a group of songs. Mrs. J. W. Taylor read a paper, "Great Men That Have Made History, Art and Romance." Mrs. Claude Rountree rendered a vocal solo. Miss Gussie Forrest read a paper, "Lindbergh, America's Ambassador of the Air." Club voted to take General Federation News for each member of the club, thereby making the Twentieth Century club a 100 per cent club.

Canton Woman's Club Gives Excellent Program.

The Canton Woman's club observed educational week and Armistice day. The idea of extending invitations to other organizations was followed and as names of the organizations were called a response was given by a member representing the body. A new organization, the Boy Scouts, was added and Frank Palmer, Jr., represented them with a splendid report.

Miss Clara Miller gave an address on "Education," and Rev. J. O. Pettis gave an address on the same subject, each paying tribute to world war heroes. Several musical numbers were rendered. Vocal solo, Master Nolan Hawkins, accompanied at piano by Miss Sheppie Hawkins; group of songs, Miss Helen Wood, accompanied at piano by Miss Virginia Williams. Another feature was the splendid report made by Mrs. J. W. Chamlee of the sixteenth annual ninth district convention of the G. F. W. C. held in Norcross. She brought out some of the main points of interest given in the address by Mrs. A. P. Brantley, state president, and Mrs. Alonzo Richardson, state federation director.

Reports were made from the recent pure food show and cooking school and the county fair in which the ladies cooperated with a fine spirit and a substantial sum was added to the treasury. It was voted that the executive board hold a meeting each month prior to the regular meeting at which time recommendations will be passed on and all possible business transacted. The hostesses were the members of the executive board.

State President Receives Year Books.

Mrs. A. P. Brantley acknowledges with thanks the year books of the Twentieth Century club, of Boston, Ga., and the Wednesday Morning Study club, of Atlanta, Ga.

Mrs. Skelton Appoints Mrs. Kidd Chairman.

Mrs. A. C. Skelton, president of the eighth district, announces the appointment of Mrs. F. F. Kidd, of Hartwell, as the corresponding secretary for the district. Mrs. Kidd will add distinction to the executive board of the district. At the present time she is serving as president of the Hartwell Woman's club.

Hilbun, of Macon, fourth vice president; Mrs. Duncan Burnett, of Athens, fifth vice president; Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, sixth vice president; Miss Katherine Dozier, of Gainesville, seventh vice president.
OFFICERS OF ATLANTA PARENT-TEACHER COUNCIL—Mrs. C. J. Foster, president; Mrs. Cliff Barnes, first vice president; Mrs. E. W. Smith, second vice president; Mrs. W. L. McCalley, Jr., recording secretary; Mrs. H. T. Loehr, corresponding secretary; Mrs. B. G. Otwell, treasurer.

State P.-T. A. Chairman Issues Publicity of Extreme Interest

Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, state chairman of publicity, sends the following news concerning state and national activities: Mrs. W. S. Garnett, of Rome, illiteracy chairman, urges every local parent-teacher association to give at least one program on illiteracy during the year. It is the hope that Georgia's rating in illiteracy will be much improved in the census of 1930. Mrs. Garnett has a number of the "Moonlight Readers" and tablets that may be secured by the locals.

Citizenship Work.

Mrs. W. C. Cornett, 210 Milledge circle, Athens, citizenship chairman, sends the following suggestions: Law observance is the cornerstone upon which good citizenship is founded and the good citizen stands for law observance by personally obeying the laws of city, county, state and nation and by assisting the officers to enforce them when necessary. The good citizen is not interested in the political ambitions of men but in measures for the best interests of his community, state and nation. He shows this interest by voting. He serves his community by keeping informed about its schools and civic affairs, serving on juries and holding office when need arises. A man or woman who, while receiving the advantages offered by his community refuses to contribute in time and effort to the common good is not a good citizen.

Program Suggestions.

One program during the year on citizenship. Stress law observance and obedience to authority, beginning in the home and school. Have a talk by one who exemplifies his citizenship by his works. Each high school P.-T. A. offer a prize for student essay on "What Constitutes Good Citizenship." Have a talk on citizenship before the class in illiteracy and the foreign born. Cooperate with other organizations working along this line. Slogan: "Every P.-T. A. member a voter and an observer of the laws of our country, state and community." Send reports to your state chairman.

District Activities.

The sixth district meeting will be held December 15 in Macon with a most interesting program arranged by the president, Mrs. R. M. Hankinson, of McDonough.

Thirty-four associations out of sixty-one reporting, with an attendance of 352, is the record of the first district.

In three years the seventh district has increased from nine associations to twenty-three with hot lunches served by twenty. A visit from the health-mobile has greatly stimulated examinations and follow-up work from the summer round-up.

Student Aid.

Bass Junior High P.-T. A. has raised $4,000 as a nucleus for a student aid fund to assist deserving boys and girls through high school. The fund will be handled by six trustees from the city at large, the P.-T. A. and the faculty.

High School Demonstrations.

The Atlanta junior high schools have staged most interesting demonstrations of student activities which have been largely attended. While regular school work was going on in every room, students showed and explained exhibits from the biology, chemistry, commercial, art, physical household and mental and woodwork departments. Home economics students cooked and served meals.

A national thrift program is issued by Mrs. Ella Caruthers Porter. Slogan: "Thrift Every Day in the Year." Topics, "Thrift Education of the Child in the Home." National thrift leaflet. "Systematic, business-like management within the home." Urge the use of the budget system, equitable division of finances for the needs of the home. "Discourage Extravagant Giving at Christmas." Try to reestablish the true Christmas thought and spirit." "Observe Thrift Week." Benjamin Franklin's birthday, January 17. Cooperate with national thrift committee, Y. M. C. A., 347 Madison avenue, New York city. "Conservation of Our National Resources." Reforestation. "Conservation of Time." "Own Your Own Home." Exemplify in ourselves the ideals of thrift.

Publicity correspondence course. Local and district press chairmen may enroll for the free publicity course until vacancies are filled if received before December 8. Mrs. Laura Kohn, Furnace Brook Farm, Peekskill, N. Y.

Recreation Conference To Be Held Dec. 9.

Mrs. B. H. Mathews, recreation chairman for the fifth district, makes the following announcement: On Friday, December 9, at 10 o'clock in Rich's schoolroom, a recreation conference will be held. A splendid program will be presented and it is urged that every school in the district be represented by the president and recreation chairman.

The conference will be opened by Mrs. Charles Center, vice president of the department of public welfare. Willis A. Sutton will speak on "Our Children's Leisure Hours." A. Baumberger, former field secretary of the Playground and Recreation Association of America, will speak on "The Wise Use of Leisure." Miss Lurline Parker, state chairman of recreation, will present the P.-T. A. recreation program outlined for the year. Anyone interested in the recreation program is invited to attend.

Forrest P.-T. A. To Celebrate Birthday.

"Uncle Remus' Birthday" will be celebrated by the Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. Friday, December 9, at 12:30 o'clock in the school auditorium. A beautifully framed picture of Joel Chandler Harris will be presented the school by Mrs. Hubert Rawiszer, president of the P.-T. A., being given by the Uncle Remus Memorial association, Mrs. A. McD. Wilson president, through the courtesy of the Georgian.

Miss Kate King, principal of the school, will have a special program and all patrons and friends of the school are invited to come.

Forrest Avenue P.-T. A. will have a house-to-house canvass for clean mended clothing and toys Tuesday morning, December 6. All homes in the school district will be canvassed, so the mothers are asked to have their donations ready as it will save time to those collecting the clothing. These donations are turned over to the better films committee to be used for needy children at Christmas.

E. Rivers Teacher To Give Demonstration.

On Monday, December 5, Miss Susan Hines, teacher of one of the first grades of E. Rivers school, will demonstrate her work to the first grade teachers of the county. The principals of the county will also be present. Her work is recognized as very high standard and the day will prove very profitable. About 100 teachers and principals will be present. Sandwiches and coffee will be served by the mothers of the P.-T. A. Miss Kathleen Mitchell, primary supervisor of the county, will be present.

The December issue of "The River's Overflow" will be issued this week. The annual white Christmas will be given December 23. The pageant to be given will be "Adoration," from "The Cradle to the Grave."

The monthly board meeting of the P.-T. A. will be held Tuesday morning, December 6, at 11 o'clock. The date of the dedication or housewarming has been postponed until December 15, due to the completion of the building. Dr. M. L. Duggan and the school supervisors of the state, the board of commissioners, the board of education, Jere Wells, superintendent; Miss Kathleen Mitchell and R. L. Ramsey, supervisors, as well as other prominent men of the county and state will be present. Interesting addresses will be made.

Cascade P.-T. A. Plans Christmas Tree.

A special called meeting of Cascade P.-T. A. was held at the school building on Cascade road Friday afternoon in lieu of the regular meeting, scheduled for December 20. The president, Mrs. Frasch, presided.

With a view of teaching the children to look after the poor and needy it was decided to give a Thanksgiving offering.

Plans were perfected to have a rousing old-time Christmas tree for the last Friday preceding Christmas. This will be the last activity for the year of 1927 and every one was urged to help make it remembered.

The next meeting will be the third Tuesday of January, 1928.

State P.-T. A. Cook Book To Be Published at Early Date

The State P.-T. A. cook book will be published under the name of "P.-T. A. Interpretations of Food." This comprehensive title was selected by Mrs. J. D. Miller, state director, department of home service, who is the editor-manager, in order to cover the unique features which she has developed in preparing the manuscript. The relations of food to health, growth, happiness, thrift, efficiency, profit, outdoor pleasures and social functions have all been considered from the viewpoint of a P.-T. A. mother. This publication has been long delayed because such a great number of contributions were received that a revision of plans was necessary, and over seven months were required in which to prepare and supplement the "copy" which has only just been completed. The book is fully two-thirds in type, and will be published early in the year. That the book will not be published in time for the holiday sale is a great disappointment. It will be possible, however, to make use of it as a gift by sending a publication announcement similar to those used for magazine subscriptions. This announcement may be written on a Christmas card or specially printed announcements may be obtained from presidents of local associations, or from Mrs. Miller at Gainesville.

Books are to be sold through the local associations thereby giving them a share of the revenue. Those desiring books ($1.75 each) may place their order with their own association, a representative being appointed to look after the orders and as soon as the book is ready for distribution it will be sent out. The book will contain 600 pages with many illustrations, and will carry hundreds of recipes and many pages of valuable information. It is standard library size, printed in large type on fine paper and bound in waterproof material in P.-T. A. colors.

The "Contents" follo in a condensed form:

Mrs. Ritchie To Address Ragsdale P.-T.A.

"The Value of a School Library" has been selected by Mrs. R. R. Ritchie as her subject for an address to be given at the monthly meeting of the Parent-Teacher association of I. N. Ragsdale school at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, December 6, in the school building. As chairman of children's reading of the fifth district, Mrs. Ritchie is deeply interested and quite well informed in school libraries and her address will prove a most interesting one.

A brief plea will be made by Miss Fannie Spahr, principal of the school, for donations for the library. Miss Spahr has in mind a club plan by which the library can be enlarged without undue expense to any one interested person.

The afternoon will be concluded by group singing and a musical number arranged by the president of the association, Mrs. David E. Barnett.

All the patrons and friends of the school are cordially invited.

Dr. Ownesby To Give Lecture.

Dr. Newdigate Owensby will give a special lecture to mothers, fathers and leaders of young people, on a requested subject in "Child Training," Sunday afternoon, December 4, at 3 o'clock in the Peachtree Road Covenant Presbyterian church, assembly room. This church is only a few steps north of the E. Rivers school, Peachtree road. Two young ladies will care for small children of parents who could not otherwise attend—in the primary room of the church. There will be a special fathers' feature in the round-table discussion.

William A. Bass P.-T. A. Celebrates Arbor Day

The Parent-Teacher association of William A. Bass Junior High school celebrated Arbor day Friday, December 2, at the school in honor of the president of the Bass Parent-Teacher association, Mrs. William V. Kingdon. Mrs. Ed A. Pierce, chairman of the committee on house and grounds, arranged the following program:

Exercises opened by J. H. Smith, principal; invocation, by Rev. J. L. Jackson; song, by pupils; address, Mrs. Ed A. Pierce; address, by Douglas Oliver, president of school; response, by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale; acceptance of tree on behalf of the school, J. H. Smith.

Among the distinguished visitors present were members of the board of education, members of the board of Fulton county commissioners, the lady board of visitors, Mrs. Earl Neuner, Mrs. B. F. Fontaine, Mrs. W. C. Byers, Mrs. W. L. Schell, Mrs. R. E. Jones, Mrs. G. F. Ehlers, Mrs. R. M. Brandon, Mrs. R. M. Smith, Mrs. C. R. Haynes, Mrs. George Price, Mrs. Edgar Alexander, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Sutton, Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Hunter, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Ritchie, Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Coleman, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hirsch, Mrs. Henry Bauer and Miss Mary Postell.

Hapeville P.-T. A. Sponsors Stocking Fund.

The Hapeville P.-T. A. met Friday afternoon at the school where plans were made to sponsor an empty stocking fund in conjunction with the Hapeville Woman's club. Mrs. W. M. Schneider, president of the P.-T. A., and Mrs. W. B. Stewart, president of the Woman's club, in charge of arrangements.

Mrs. J. H. Hodges' report showed that 340 children of school age and about 300 of pre-school age had been given diphtheria antitoxin since the last monthly meeting of the P.-T. A.

Following the business meeting the teachers and children furnished a program of music and readings under the direction of Mrs. S. E. Treadwell, program chairman. Miss Evelyn Smith's room led in attendance and were awarded the prize.

Grove Park P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Grove Park P.-T. A. met Wednesday in the assembly hall, Mrs. I. C. Dearuso presiding. Demonstrations of first-grade work were given by Mrs. Sue Ashford, Mrs. Ola Jones and Mrs. Kate Horn. The children responded, and the results were most satisfactory to the mothers.

Miss Lillian Alexander, director of public health, gave a talk on "The Pre-School Child."

Mrs. Martin's high sixth grade won the dollar for having highest percentage of mothers present.

Delicious refreshments were served by the grade mothers of the three first grades, assisted by Mrs. Lena Harris Cox, principal of Grove Park school.

A demonstration of second grade work by Miss Frances Scott will be given for the teachers of Fulton county at Grove Park school Tuesday afternoon, December 6, at 2:30 o'clock.

P.-T. A. Council Stresses Reading Of Amendments to City Charter

Careful reading of the two proposed amendments to the city charter before voting in the election next Wednesday was stressed by Mrs. Charles J. Foster, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council at a meeting of that body Thursday in Rich's schoolroom. These amendments were read at this time without comment.

A resolution requesting that the present automatic salary schedule for teachers' salaries be retained and one asking that the city appropriate 30 per cent of the total income of the city for school purposes were adopted.

J. P. Barron, member of Tech High faculty and president of the Atlanta Teachers' association, presented a statement substantiated by figures, showing the automatic salary schedule now in use in Atlanta has been used for years with the only increase being that allowed the P.-T. A. in keeping this in effect, stating the Atlanta public schools had nation-wide recognition for the work done, which could be attributed to the teachers, though handicapped in many instances by crowded conditions and inadequate equipment.

Mrs. Paul West, member of the board of education from the eleventh ward, mother of a student at Tech High and of a member of the faculty of Fulton County High, spoke in confirmation of the statements made by Mr. Barron.

"The busy child is the good child" was the sense of the mothers and teachers present Thursday. A plan by which teachers, mothers, P.-T. A. and ministers would work out a schedule for the child whereby the time not used in school would be spent in study, reading and proper recreation, was presented to the council by Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of schools. This plan includes four nights of study at home with the parents; recreation on Friday evening, Saturday and Sunday, reading with parents and special services on the Sabbath for the children. Mr. Sutton asked the appointment of grade chairmen to reach the parents in order to put the plan through and requested all P.-T. A. presidents to send them the lists of this cooperative group as soon as possible. Eighteen locals have already furnished these lists.

A letter of congratulation was ordered sent to Dr. A. M. Soule, president of the State College of Agriculture for the donation of $60,000 from the Laura Spelman foundation for child welfare work through the agricultural college because of the outstanding work the college has been doing. A letter was also sent to Mrs. Clifford Walker, who first brought the matter to the attention of the foundation.

Mrs. J. P. Wall, chairman of safety, warned the local chairmen that reports of the fine work they are doing would not appear in the state reports unless sent in to the council chairmen. Mrs. H. G. Parks, pre-school chairman, announced that all locals except eight had formed pre-school circles and asked that these be formed at once and chairmen's names sent her. Mrs. R. M. Brandon was appointed chairman of welfare in place of Mrs. R. P. Smith, who resigned because of illness.

Mrs. J. C. Malone, chairman of living Christmas trees, stated these trees could be lighted at a cost not exceeding $2.50 and asked that all members use living trees instead of destroying evergreens. A Boy Scout who has passed his electrical test can wire the trees with the small colored lights.

O'Keefe P.-T. A. Announces Program.

Mrs. C. F. von Herrmann, president of the O'Keefe Junior High P.-T. A., announces the following program for the remainder of the school year:

December 8—"Recreation in the Home," F. A. Wilson-Lawrenson.

January 12—"Characteristics of the Adolescent Age," Dr. Harvey W. Cox, Emory university.

February 9—Founder's day. "The Rules of the Game," Rev. L. R. Christie.

March 8—"Parent Responsibility," Professor Floyd Fields.

April 12—"Where Do They Get It," Judge Garland Watkins.

May 10.—Yearly reports, election of officers.

Important Resolutions Passed At State U. D. C. Convention

Among the outstanding reports given at the recent convention of the Georgia division, U. D. C., held at Covington, was the report of the resolutions commitee of which Mrs. Howard McCall, of Atlanta, is chairman. Other members of the committee are Mrs. Kirby S. Anderson, of Madison; Mrs. P. N. Harley, of Waycross; Mrs. Hardy Richard, of Marshallville; Mrs. Lena F. Lewis, of Monroe.

A number of important resolutions were recommended by the committee and adopted. They are as follows:

1. To urge the legislature of 1929 to pass a bill making an appropriation for the Alexander Stephens institute at Crawfordville, Ga.

2. To buy an interest in the Stephens property next to the school. Approved heartily of the John B. Gordon memorial.

3. That the state president, Mrs. McKenzie, confer with the proper authorities at the general association meeting to be held at Charleston, in regard to application blanks for Crosses of Honor for Confederate veterans and Crosses of Service.

4. That the state president request the general association to define what constitutes a member in good and regular standing, a resolution to this effect to be presented by the state president and the information obtained to be published in the annual minutes.

5. That the word school be added to the committee "Southern Literature and History in Colleges."

6. That the Georgia division unite with the Alabama division in erecting a marker on the Georgia-Alabama boundary at West Point, Ga.

7. That the Alexander Stephens school be considered a vital part of the educational work of the U. D. C. Georgia division.

8. That the Georgia division replace the "Emily Heodree Park Memorial library at Rabun Gap-Nacoochee school, place a bronze tablet at this school, signifying the name of library and the donors.

9. That the division establish a loan scholarship at Rabun Gap-Nacoochee school.

THE GEORGIA PLAN WRONG.

In the course of a luncheon address, while in attendance upon the National Asphalt Paving conference in Atlanta last week, Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States bureau of roads, declared emphatically that the existing system of financing the construction of a state-wide paved highway system in Georgia is entirely wrong. He made no reservations.

Said he:

"The counties need to conserve their resources for the construction of lateral roads to feed the main thoroughfares. Thereby agricultural interests are developed and broadened, the schools are enlarged or consolidated, and a greater general economic prosperity and improved rural conditions help all the people. This cannot result so long as the counties are called upon to burden themselves by aiding in building the state system. This is not taking into account the impossibility of connecting a system so long as there are counties that cannot provide the aid, and are therefore deprived of the paved thoroughfares, thus discounting the value of the through highway with its missing or weakened links. I shall say it as long as I live—the state should utilize its credits and build its own system of permanently paved and completely connected highways."

Mr. MacDonald is the highest road authority in America. He is the foremost highway engineer in America. He has made a study of the building of state systems, and of the economics associated therewith. He knows the best methods of construction and of financing. He handles all of the federal aid—and Georgia, with a patch-work system, has had from him more than a lion's share.

When he says that the present Georgia plan of financing is wrong, therefore, attention must be paid to it.

It is wrong and every person who thinks of the situation seriously and with an open mind ought to realize it. Why should counties be required to exhaust their credit, by the issuance of bonds predicated upon property taxes, to help build the state system? By doing so they destroy their ability to build the "feeders" which are so essential to the development of lands and properties that are "off the main road."

Why should a so-called state system be built on a crazy-quilt basis that can never be connected up so long as there are sixty or more "lost provinces"—that is to say, counties that have not the taxable wealth to provide the required aid for the paving of the state roads?

Road building in this state has been closely linked with politics. The question of the method of financing has been a political football. It is one of economics purely, but it has not been so regarded.

Georgians will do well to give ear to Mr. MacDonald's words. It is absurd to say he has nothing to do with it because he is not a Georgian, or a Georgia voter. He supplies through his government agency approximately $2,000,000 a year to Georgia's state road construction. He has a great deal to do with it.

BETTER INVEST IN THE SOUTH.

The Manufacturers Record is entirely sound in the following paragraph from a cover-page editorial:

"There would be far more safety for investments, far greater benefit to our own country, and far more wisdom displayed if the bankers of New York and other cities who are pouring millions of dollars of American money into Europe would turn these millions of dollars into safe and sound investments in the south."

The south is developing today at a pace more rapidly than any section of the country at any time in the history of the country. Money invested in the south—in land settlement, in industrial progress, in business—will inure to the advantage of every class and group.

There are opportunities in the south for the safe investment of hundreds of millions of dollars, which would in turn enrich the entire nation.

It would be a rich contrast with the present plan of pouring these American millions into foreign loans.

SUGGESTS OWEN D. YOUNG.

The Birmingham News comes out strongly for Owen D. Young, of New York, chairman of the General Electric company, for the democratic nomination for president.

Mr. Young is an engineer of a reputation comparable with that of Herbert Hoover. He is a business executive and an organizer.

In many respects his training and his accomplishments parallel those of the secretary of commerce, who is being seriously considered for the republican nomination in the event Mr. Coolidge's "I don't choose" stands for "I refuse."

At any rate, the democratic party could go far and do no better, for Mr. Young is a man of action, and this is an age of action. It is an engineering age. It is a vocational age. And what an innovation to put a man in nomination who is not a politician, who has never held an elective office, who knows most of all how to apply sound economics to business! For government is not only business, but "big business."

Mr. Young, in an interview published in Forbes' Magazine December 1, makes himself the forecaster of a day when wage-earners will hire capital and be the real employers. He recognizes the preferential rights of human beings devoting their lives to an enterprise to profit-sharing in proportion to the value of their services. He would cut out sporadic workers. But he adds:

"I would cut out a floating president just as soon as a floating worker from the profit-sharing classification, because I don't think either is any good. Neither contributes anything, but is interested only in getting something for himself."

Agriculture in Mr. Young's view is vital. Good roads and the motor car, the telephone, light and power, and the radio have improved things for the farmer. Vast extension of the light-and-power boon is to be looked for. We must have efficient farming if we are to have cheap foods. He is not shirking the responsibilities of the electric industry.

The Brooklyn Eagle recently asked, "Is Owen D. Young a dreamer?" Hardly! The General Electric company could not have a "dreamer" as its chief executive. And yet his ideas are at right angles with many of the accepted economic principles of today.

Anyway, the suggestion of our Birmingham contemporary is interesting and will be watched with more or less curiosity.

RETURNS TO "FIRST LOVE"

Frank P. Glass, who for many years was associated with Major W. W. Screws in the ownership and management of the Montgomery Advertiser, and who subsequently sold his interest, after the death of his partner, bought an interest in the Birmingham News, and later entered jounalism in St. Louis, has now bought a controlling interest in the Montgomery Advertiser, and is returning to his "first love" in Alabama journalism.

It is pleasing.

Frank Glass was born and raised in Montgomery. His first newspaper experience was on the Advertiser, which is one of the oldest and most notable newspapers of the south. That he has returned to it, as its editor and publisher, will be gratifying to thousands of people in that state who love him and who will rejoice that he is home again.

The Montgomery Advertiser is one of the oldest and best known daily newspapers of the south. It has always been conservative and constructive.

Major Screws, who edited it for years, was one of the south's builders—an outstanding figure in democratic politics, and in the economic development of his state and of the southeast.

Mr. Glass, his partner, and successor, as editor, held the same views, and was equally as prominent and useful in public matters.

It will be pleasing to all of Alabama that he is returning to "carry on."

SMILING ON MEXICO.

Mexico presents America's major foreign relations problem, and that is rapidly clarifying. A great deal of interest centers in the president's forthcoming message on the subject, but the Washington commentators who are close to the administration say he will dismiss it with a brief sentence or two thorough optimism.

There should be maintained, if possible without any sacrifice of national policy or honor, a friendly relationship between the two nations. They are separated only by an unprotected border. There are thousands of ou rnationals in that country engaged in oil production, mining, manufacturing, and in business in practically all of the cities. Interests are largely common. General Obregon, who will be the next president, lives on the border, at Nogales, which is separated by less than a mile from the Arizona border. He has large American interests, including an Arizona ranch.

President Calles has invited Mr. Morrow for a trip through the empire with a view to studying the nation's resources and opportunities. He has indicated his desire for good relations provided this country accepts the policy of Mexico for the Mexicans. President Coolidge is in favor of that. It looks, therefore, that President Calles and President Coolidge are smiling upon each other.

The decision of the supreme court of Mexico upholding the American contentions as to the oil laws has had a far-reaching effect in this new chapter of conciliation.

RIGHT TO BE HEARD.

The United States Chamber of Commerce is composed of several thousand business men, representing every state in the union. They belong to both political parties.

Its very earnest suggestion for a federal tax cut of $400,000,000 was not the action of a small group of directors. It came as a result of a referendum of its entire membership. Therefore it amounts to a strong sentiment among the business men of the nation, irrespective of party affiliations.

In discussing this viewpoint, Lewis E. Pierson has said:

"When national revenue measures are being considered the Chamber of Commerce of the United States maintains that business organizations after careful study by competent experts and after full discussion and after widespread referendum vote have not only the right but the responsibility to express their mature judgment on what appears to them to be a safe tax reduction. The Chamber of Commerce of the United States asks both political parties to join in a nonpartisan bill for the immediate and adequate reduction of taxes. This will give the country much needed relief from war-time taxes so that industry may be strengthened to meet increasing competition in world markets, to continue employment of wage earners and to enlarge the country's earning and buying power."

Every citizen of the United States has a right to be heard. This government is a representative democracy. The members of congress, as, indeed, the president, are servants of the people, chosen by the people.

The business men of the nation not only have a right to be heard but their united voice should be strong in the councils for they constitute, in a large measure, the economic force of the nation.

The arrival at the conclusion that the tax cut should be $400,000,000 was not the result of guess-work. Rather it was the result of expert surveys of treasury surplusses visible and expectant.

It has been said that the president rebuked the United States Chamber of Commerce for making the suggestion. He was probably misquoted, or his attitude misunderstood. He has as much right to his views as any other citizen, but certainly no more. Otherwise our system of government would be a mockery.

When the revenue bill comes from the committee it should and will have a fair hearing, and the democrats will lead the fight for a reduction commensurate with the treasury status. Certainly, from the figures submitted by treasury actuaries, it should be greater than the administration proposal of only $225,000,000.

As stated by President Pierson, business and industry need to be relieved as rapidly as possible of the taxation burdens so that expansion can be made to meet the rapidly increasing world competition.

RECORD HOLIDAY TRADE.

The holiday trading season begins in earnest with the advent of December. It promises to exceed in volume of merchandise, and in the total of expenditures, that of any preceding season in the history of America.

Economists, who make a study in advance of trading estimates, all agree that this year's holiday trade will break all records.

Upon these estimates, prepared for the great mercantile establishments of the country, merchants base their stock purchases. Never before, therefore, have the stores been so laden with gift goods, nor has the variety been so marked, and the qualities and values been predicated upon so greater a purchasing power.

The prosperity of the country is thus keenly reflected. Not in a decade has there been such widespread economic satisfaction, less unemployment, and less unrest.

This is peculiarly true of the rural sections because of the excellent condition of the American farmer as a unit.

It is true in Georgia. There are more full barns and full smokehouses in this state than in many years.

There are more farmers "living at home," with money in the bank, than in many years.

The reason for this is easy to explain. Georgia farmers are learning to make other than cotton money crops, and to make cotton largely a surplus.

Therefore the income from cotton can find a place in the channels of trade for other than the mere necessities of life.

Atlanta is the outstanding retail center of the southeast. It is not only the department store center of this great section but it is the shop and specialty store center.

Tens of thousands of people will journey here for their holiday shopping, not only from all sections of the state but from all sections of the South Atlantic seaboard.

Atlanta stores were never more amply prepared to serve the public.

MOTOR LICENSE CHANGES.

The motorists of Georgia should take into account that the state now has a new motor vehicle registration law.

The new law requires that all motor vehicles must be registered and license numbers obtained "on or before the first day of February in each year." That is a month earlier than heretofore.

The new law repealed the provision which based license fees upon the N. A. C. C. horsepower of the engine and now requires that all passenger cars, busses, hearses and ambulances shall pay a fee of "50 cents per hundred pounds (or major fraction thereof) gross weight of vehicle, minimum fee, $11.25."

This means that the gross weight of each car is the basis for fixing the license fee, and not the engine horsepower. In order to fix the correct fee in 1928, all questions on the application blanks must be answered. If one question only is left unanswered it may be necessary to return the application before proper registration can be made.

All licensed auto dealers, all sheriffs and clerks of superior courts, many garages and banks, have been furnished by the secretary of state with a book containing the legal weight and fee of every make and model of car. Secretary McLendon says:

"Before you mail your application and fee, get the necessary information from the sources named and be sure to answer all questions on the application, filling out both forms. Send both forms to the secretary of state's office."

The rates for trucks are the same as they are this year, being based upon the tonnage or load capacity of the truck. It is not necessary to give weight of the truck. Truck fees are given on the back of the application.

Under the old rates the Buick had only two different rates, whereas under the new law there are 18 different rates of nine different amounts.

The Studebaker, under the old law, had only three rates, but under the new law these are increased to 55 different rates of 16 different amounts.

Similar increases in number of ratings are made by the new law on all other makes of cars, except Ford cars, model T, on which there is only one rate, $11.25.

Few people in Georgia realized that such radical changes had been made. There has been much confusion, and this information is given entirely in the interest of public service.

DUTIES OF GOVERNMENT.

In a very remarkable address delivered in Troy N. Y., a few evenings ago Governor Al Smith, of that state, said:

"I have claimed all along that the government of the state is divided into two branches, the strictly business side of the state and the human.

"On the business side I put the construction of highways, the construction of bridges, the operation of the Erie canal, the supervision of insurance companies, the supervision of banking and trust companies and such kindred and related activities; while on the human side I put the inspection service for factories, the enforcement of the labor code, the care of crippled children, of the deaf and the dumb, the blind, the feeble-minded, the insane and the people suffering with tuberculosis.

"Now, that is the human side, but it has, nevertheless, to be run on business principles or it is not going to be successful."

The public improvements in New York under his administration have been of a marvelous nature. He has advocated and secured, even through republican legislatures, large bond issues for roads, schools, the elimination of grade crossings, and other progressive developments. The people have overwhelmingly supported them because they realized that in constructive service to all the people they paid a dividend that could not have been secured by the slow "pay-as-you-go" process.

No state in the union, in the meantime, has done more for the human activities that are dependent upon a government support and control. These have been provided for by direct appropriations, but the state government has been able to do so by providing for the public improvements largely through bond issues.

Without discussing in detail the merits of the plans of financing the New York governor is undeniably correct in his subdivision of the activities and duties and responsibilities of government service.

In her excitement of being annoyed by a masher a woman in a New York apartment house turned on the fire alarm. The man was much put out by the manner in which he was put out.

A southern man should be nominated for president and have as his platform: "A bas the silk stocking."

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

The Only World Peace Plan That Will Work Is the Russian One

These Russian delegates at Geneva have certainly run the representatives of the other nations into a close and uncomfortable corner. When old John Sherman was secretary of our treasury and the question of resuming specie payments was being agitated, he announced the terse and truthful dictum that "the way to resume is to resume!"

So these Russians have put it up to the nations that "the way to abolish wars is to scrap the whole war-making machinery and quit using it!"

The Russians are right. The sovereign remedy for the war complex and the temptation to exploit it is in abolishing utterly the armies and armaments with which one nation can make war upon another. It is radical, drastic and pacifically revolutionary in governmental psychology and practices, but—it would solve the war problem of the world and through the media of arbitrations practically realize the dream of the ages—the peace of the world.

But the major nations backed away from the tremendous proposition like men scrambling away from a tottering load of TNT.

* * * *

Too Easy for Politicians.

One of the French delegates naively gave away the "political mind" about the proposal. He said "it is too simple!"

Of course, it is a simple plan. But it is supremely sensible, because it is just such a plan as instantly appeals to the common sense of every average man in any intelligent nation.

No man who hasn't got a gun can shoot his neighbor to death. And a nation that does not believe itself armed and equipped to lick another nation isn't going to start a war between them. The Russians point out the broad path to universal peace, but who else will agree to walk therein?

The leading delegates who heard the startling proposition sat dumbfounded and unable to offer it welcome or applause. It does not appeal at all to the politicians. They live and trade upon the rivalries, jealousies, fears and ambitions of the nationals. To abolish throughout the nations the fears or the threats of aggressions, conquests and expansions of territory and dominion, would rob the politicians of Europe of 90 per cent of their stocks in trade.

And like the silversmiths in ancient Ephesus they will all cry out with consternation against the simple gospel of abolishing wars by abolishing the high-powered machinery for making them.

* * * *

Light Out of Darkness.

It is scarcely to be wondered over that this Russian proposition has for the day amazed and paralyzed the minds of the other delegates in the Geneva conference.

The old Latins would call it "lucus a non lucendo," for it is indeed a flaming light from a region that sophisticated Europe has called "Darkest Russia." The nations generally have been taught to think, since sovietism arose in Russia, that the "reds" of that country were set upon extending the communistic revolution into them and violently converting their governments into "dictatorships of the proletariat"—and so changing the world order into universal bolshevism.

It cannot be denied that the Moscow and Petrograd, or Leningrad, authorities have carried on a world-wide propaganda of their principles, and interfered with the pacific affairs of many countries.

But, evidently, under the leadership of Stalin, whose wisdom and statesmanship cannot be discounted, the Russian Soviet Republic is being led away from revolutionary designs into policies of amity, commerce and peace with the other powers of the world.

It is a singular fact that this peace proposal comes from the palace of the late czar of Russia who originated the call to the nations that resulted in the creation of Hague Tribunal of Arbitrations.

* * * *

American Can Answer "Yea!"

The United States, the greatest of the world powers now, and wholly unhampered by allegiance to the League of Nations and the World Court, is in a clear condition to welcome the motion of Russia and answer "yea" in voting upon its adoption.

The fact that we have refrained from recognizing the Soviet Republic and entered into treaty or diplomatic relations with its government, does not preclude our full and hearty approval of their proposition to abolish wars by abolishing the means of making them. We are nearer to the desired status now than any other of the potential nations of the world.

We would have fewer soldiers and sailors to discharge, fewer warships to scrap and fewer munition plants to convert, than any other of the principal war-capable powers.

The entire strength of our active army is short of 120,000 men; our navy is below our quota under the ratios for the United States, England and Japan agreed upon in the Washington conference five years ago.

We rapidly demobilized over 4,000,000 men after the world war and reconverted our industries from making war materials to making again the necessaries of peaceful life. So that, other nations can take example from us and demobilize their war mechanisms with almost equal facility.

* * * *

Our Great Opportunity.

The United States really now stands confronted with the pacific opportunity of the ages. We can actually put the Russian proposition into the channel of realization.

If Senator Borah and our other world peace protagonists will sidetrack all other projects and induce the congress of this nation to indorse and ally itself with the proposal to reduce all armies to internal and border police proportions, declare the high seas free only to vessels of peaceful commerce, and employ the peoples in production instead of destruction, they will bring to pass the prayer of Jesus and the dream of Jefferson.

TEXT AND PRETEXT

BY M. ASHBY JONES

"Peace Among Peacemakers."

Some time ago a cynical wit asked the pertinent question, "Who put the fist in pacifist?"

Everybody believes in having peace, but each one seems ready to fight for his own method of pacifying the world. When I think of the attitude of the so-called peace leaders of the United States I cannot but recall the biting satire with which Jesus described the attitude of the Pharisees toward Himself and John: "It is like unto children sitting in the market places, who call unto their fellows, we 'piped unto you and ye did not dance, we wailed and ye did not mourn.'"

Senator Borah, who is now the most vocal leader of those who love the phrase "outlawry of war," also led the group who strangled the League of Nations in the senate chamber, and fiercely fought the proposal for our entry into the world court. President Coolidge, who periodically breaks the silence which enshrouds the white house, with platitudes about the peace of the world, but who has completely banished from his economical vocabulary the League of Nations, fails to find any virtue in any of the proposed forward steps toward international cooperation, save in the conference which he himself proposes.

Peaceful Suggestions.

Henry Wickham Steed brought to us the other day the simple request that, if some nation should break its covenant with the other nations of the world, and start an aggressive war, the United States should promise not to aid that nation in its piratical course, by furnishing it with the sinews of war. What a simple and yet supremely important help this would be toward keeping the peace. But Mr. Coolidge, with cool and canny cautiousness, is unwilling to commit us to any such promise. Senator Borah, with his constitutional brows knit in solemn and contentious thought, cannot see how we could properly make a definition of "aggressor." He is passionately anxious to "outlaw" all war, except the kind of war which we might want to aid, at so much per aid, in case of a European conflict.

Then came the splendid challenge of Briand, that we agree under no circumstances to go to war with France. The president once again shows his peculiar love of sanity and safety, by declaring that to agree beforehand not to make war would be to interfere with the constitutional prerogative of congress, in whom the right to declare war is vested.

A Question of Sincerity.

These objections would seem humorous, if they were not so terribly tragic. Consider for a moment the president's sensitiveness about interfering with the right of congress to declare war. One would think that the constitution directed congress to declare war, and that if congress did not do so, it would be a violation of the constitution. Of course, the constitution practically says, that if war is to be declared, congress is the only constitutional body which can make the declaration. According to Mr. Coolidge's view we could never make any treaty, which proposed a peaceful settlement of a controversy, without limiting the right of congress under the constitution to declare war. The logical result of such a doctrine would be that we could never make peace, because by doing so we interfered with the constitutional right of congress to make war.

Senator Borah, the great advocate of the outlawry of war, who cannot abide even "its recognition as a legal institution," is quibbling about a definition of "an aggressor," before he is willing promise not to aid one of the combatants in a future war. The definition in this proposal of an aggressor nation, is one who, having agreed to abide by a covenant made with 50 or more other nations, is declared by those other nations to have broken that covenant. Aren't we willing to trust the judgment of civilization under such circumstances, at least to the extent of not furnishing the sinews of war to one so outlawed? The suggestion of Senator Borah is that we wait until such a war breaks out, and then become the judge ourselves of such a controversy. This great advocate for making all war a crime still insists upon retaining the right of the United States to aid in such a war.

One is forced against his will to believe that, whether consciously or unconsciously, such peace advocates desire peace only on terms dictated by themselves.

Poor Burglars Can't Do Their Christmas Shopping—Buying Bonds From a Russian Prince—The City's Professional Children.

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Copyright, 1927, in All Countries by North American Newspaper Alliance.)

New York, December 3.—Gradually brokerage houses are opening branches uptown, partly to accommodate the ladies. The one farthest north now is in West Fiftieth street, and to win favor with the ladies even more, the firm has installed a rebel Russian prince to advise them about investments and Wall street operations.

Do they fall for the prince? They do. He is a tall, distinguished-looking person, with quite an air and a voice that charms. He offers his own special brand of cigarettes, and the ladies seem to enjoy them far more than the ones they carry.

They flock to speculate, and they go away speculating—about the prince.

THE COED NURSEMAIDS.

On the same benches with the smoking coeds of New York university, sunning themselves in Washington square, which is the only campus the downtown college has, sit mothers crooning to babies.

In the course of time the coeds and mothers become acquainted, and it develops that sometimes the mothers want to go to parties, to theaters and dances, but that there is nobody at home to mind the baby. The coeds speak of having home work to do at nights and not being particular in whose home they do it.

Dancing mothers and nursing coeds are the result of such conversations, and the system is not limited to one college. At Columbia university, at Laura Spelman hall, a Y. W. C. A. home, and at other institutions where young women live and study, there is a heavy demand by mothers who have evening engagements. Pay ranges from 50 cents an hour upward, although in some cases there is a cut rate of $1 for the entire evening. Usually no work is required.

* * * *

YOU CAN'T STEAL HERE, BURGLAR.

How do the police expect the criminals to do their Christmas shopping this year? The department has established deadlines beyond which criminals may not pass, and these deadlines take in the entire retail shopping district. If criminals are found within these bonds they will be arrested at sight.

The announcement of deadlines for criminals is usually perplexing to simple-hearted citizens who are unfamiliar with police procedure. Some years ago a deadline was fixed between the Hudson and East rivers just below city hall. An innocent woman protested that burglars should not be permitted to rob people uptown any more than downtown.

Below city hall lies the financial district, and the object of this old order was to increase security there. The object of this new deadline order, issued for the big shopping season, when so many dollars and people are concerned in the central area, is of course similar to that. But it does make it hard for criminals to provide a merry Christmas for their families, honestly or otherwise.

THEY LOOK BEFORE THEY LEAP.

Watch the boys whose playground never has been anything but the street. Before they throw the ball or kick it, before they make a move in any sport that may be in progress, they glance instinctively up and down the street. If a truck is lumbering down their way they instantly calculate time and distance and take advantage of spare moments to continue the game.

It is the only way to remain alive, and it is probable that these boys, as they grow up, will be much safer than the boys from homes where parents and nurses protect them at every turn and do the looking for them when they go abroad.

Truck drivers look hard-boiled, often are, usually they are more considerate about these street gamins than are the chauffeurs in limousines. Like as not the truck drivers have younger brothers at play in the street, and that's where they themselves used to play.

The street peril to children always impresses visitors to this city, and it is great. There are 15,000 boys and girls acting as street safety patrols in the vicinity of public schools. They make sure that children do not cross streets in the middle of the block.

THE ALIMONY CLUB MOVES.

The Chateau d'If, that gloomy prison in the harbor of Marseilles, once held Mirabeau and the Man in the Iron Mask, but what tourists go out to see is the dungeon of the fabulous Edmond Dantes, who later became the more fabulous Count of Monte Cristo in the romance by Alexander Dumas. The prisoner who never existed is more vivid.

Just so the Ludlow Street jail, soon to be demolished, will be remembered not as the prison of the notorious Boss Tweed, who had been on the board that built it, or of Harry K. Thaw, Nicky Arnstein or Fuller and McGee of bucket shop annals, but as the clubhouse of the Alimony club, which really exists only in the harmless fancy of newspaper men.

Without more material than the fact that husbands refusing to pay alimony were sent to this jail for contempt of court, reporters have perpetuated the myth of a club of conscientious objectors to alimony payments, given them a house committee, merry toasts to absent wives, chess and handball tournaments, and altogether carefree hearts.

It had been announced that this club, like the Union league and other conservative clubs, was moving uptown, and would celebrate Thanksgiving day in a new clubhouse, but there was no stove yet in Hell's Kitchen, where the new jail waits, so moving was delayed.

THE PROFESSIONAL CHILDREN

So many and varied are the demands for children, on the stage, in the movies, at weddings and parties, and for pictures to use in advertising and art work, that there exists a children's professional school, arranged to make it possible for youngsters to get an education and also do odd jobs.

Children by profession they are, every now and then leaving their studies to say a few lines in a play, pose in a gallery, or help to adorn some social function. Besides the regular schooling every child is supposed to get, they learn French and study music and art and dancing to a considerable degree.

About 300 children attend this school. Many are the childen of stage people, or their parents are engaged in the arts. They are charming little folk, and the school does everything possible to keep them from becoming spoiled and sophisticated, for then they would lose professional value.

EVERYDAY QUESTIONS

BY DR. S. PARKES CADMAN.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Why should I send my son to college when at 14 years of age he can begin to earn his own living and be so much ahead of the youth who spends seven or eight years more in preparing for his job, after which he must begin where my son starts now?

Because when the college man does start the race of life he will overtake your boy within a few years and then surpass him. What you deem his advantage is really his handicap. The College of Business Administration of Boston university has issued an interesting bulletin on this question. Its statistics are compiled from the returns of that institution and also from those of the Massachusetts department of labor and industry.

They show that the man who begins manual work as a boy of 14 joins a very large group of citizens whose earning power averages $1,200 annually, which declines rapidly after they are 50 and leaves 60 per cent of them dependent on others for support after they are 60 years of age.

Suppose you decide that your son shall attend high school, graduate there and commence work at 18. He will then belong to a lesser but still sizable group of citizens whose earning power reaches the average annual maximum of $2,200 at 40 and continues at that level for the remainder of their active life.

The college graduate's permanent earnings begin at 22, four years later than those of the high school boy and eight years later than those of the public school boy. By the time he is 28 his average annual income equals that of the high school boy at 40. At 60 his average is $6,000 a year, and this is often surpassed.

Apart from other advantages viewed solely from the financial standpoint, the college trained man earns $72,000 more between 22 and 60 than the high school graduate earns, and the public school boy is still further to the rear. These figures should have a place in the decision you make for your son's future.

What are your favorite authors and which is your favorite book, exclusive of the Bible?

The answer depends upon the class of literature involved. In fiction, Thackeray and Scott, with the proviso that I think "Tom Jones," by Fielding, and "Pickwick Papers," by Dickens, are creative as the author of "Vanity Fair" could not be. In biograph, Trevelyan's "Life of Macaulay" and Boswell's "Johnson" as the standby.

In poetry, Dante, with leanings toward Milton's earlier works: in drama, Shakespeare, of course; in art, Symonds and Ruskin; in architecture, Francis Bond; in history, John Richard Green; in adventure, Captain Scott; in travel, Charles Montagu Doughty; in theology, all things considered, Bishop Butler. My favorite book depends on moods, but "Pilgrim's Progress" and "Don Quixote" are always welcome.

Please forgive admissions which may sound bizarre to other and better informed minds. Literary taste, although immensely diversified, has some canons which Matthew Arnold and St. Beuve have clarified. But its idiosyncracies are as inexplicable as one's personality.

Wharton, N. J.

I am a non-smoker and have an intense dislike for tobacco. There are so many habitual smokers who are such gluttons in the use of the weed that they are saturated with a foul stench which is unwholesome to a clean person. Yet in business and away from home it is almost impossible to object to smoking without being classed as a crab. But I have made up my mind that I will not tolerate smoking in my own home.

Am I right in this stand and how can I do this and keep guests and friends from feeling offended when visiting me?

The use of tobacco is now so universal that any individual who has an intense aversion to it is bound to suffer some inconvenience. In reducing yours why not curb your dislike of the weed. There is nearly always a psychological explanation for violent antipathies. Yours is extreme in this matter and, if you will allow me to say so, not mentally advisable.

The unbalanced display of passion is just as great a weakness as the excessive use of tobacco and often far more injurious. One may strongly object to snuff-taking, but surely he would not bar snuff-takers from office in church or state on that ground alone. They punish themselves more than they offend others. So do not allow any resentment to overcome your self-control. Reasonable behavior is as requisite in right moralists as it is in those who offend their susceptibilities.

You have a right to decide there shall be no smoking in your home and doubtless you are prepared to dispense with the society of fond disciples of Lady Nicotine. But many of them are first-rate companions and social luminaries who shine for all, despite the fumes that torture you.

American Towns Below Sea Level

The most recent North American earthquake which affected the territory around Calexico, Calif., and Mexicali, Mexico, on the international border, inflicting heavy damage on both towns, occurred in one of the most unusual regions on the continent. A bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society describes this unique area.

"The twin cities, one in the United States, one in Mexico, lie near the southern edge of the great Salton Sink, or more properly now, the Imperial Valley, which, with its numerous towns, is almost entirely below sea level," says the bulletin. "The sea level line runs between the two towns most affected by the earthquakes. Calexico being only a foot or so above the sea, and Mexicali being a few feet below.

"Until the beginning of the twentieth century the valley on both sides of the border was little better than a desert, uninhabited and given up to mesquite and other bushes of the arid region, and to coyotes and rattlesnakes. It was long realized, however, that the soil was exceedingly fertile and that, since the land lay below the level of the Colorado river(35 miles east of the edge of the valley, gravity irrigation was easily possible from that large stream. In 1901 water was turned into the depression for the first time. Since then population has flowed in and the valley has become one of the most valuable farming sections of the United States.

"Due to the unusual lie of the land the whole development has been to a large extent international. The main canal, starting in the United States near Yuma, dips into Mexico, runs roughly parallel with the border for 45 miles, and then turns back into the United States near Calexico. In 1905 the entire flow of the great stream turned into the canal, washed it into a deep new stream bed, and cut its way across the country to the deepest part of the Salton Sink, creating there a large inland sea. It was only after a long and costly battle by engineers that the river was turned back and property worth scores of millions of dollars was saved.

"The Salton depression is over 250 feet below sea level. Drainage from the irrigation canals and ditches seeps into it, and the sea is still more than 40 miles long and 10 miles wide. Between the south end of the sea and the international border, 30 miles south, lies the more highly developed of the valley's irrigated farms and its most thriving towns.

"There is an intimate relation between the Imperial valley country and the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, not suspected by the casual observer. This was the great dumping ground for the hundreds of cubic miles of material washed from the plateau of Arizona and Utah through the centuries as the huge canyon was dug out. The farmer who today raises his cotton or garden truck or cantaloupes on the rich silt of the valley has the grand Canyon to thank for his prosperity."

The Situation in China

BY BISHOP W. N. AINSWORTH, D.D., L.L.D.

I have been in China a month. Great changes have taken place since I left the orient last January—changes that are rather more disconcerting than hopeful as they relate to the immediate outlook and the establishment of a stable government in China. As the world knows, a revolution has been on in China for twenty-five years and accompanied by all the distraction of civil strife since the overthrow of the Manchu dynasty and the proclamation of a republic in 1911. During most of the last sixteen years this vast area has been broken up into a dozen different sections, under as many provincial war lords, who have contended for the mastery of the country, sometimes singly and sometimes in varying combinations of their fluctuating military strength.

In the last two years the nationalist party arose in Canton, incorporating into itself the Kuomingtang and espousing the principles of the late Sun Yat Sen. When I left China last winter the armies of this reform were sweeping northward toward the Yangtse, with every promise of taking the country and establishing a national government.

The Present Political Situation.

These forces under General Chiang Kai-shek were welcomed by the people everywhere. Their leaders were regarded as the exponents of a real patriotism and their principles were thought by the Chinese populace to present the one constructive hope for China. By March their armies had advanced to Shanghai, Hankow and Nanking and controlled practically all the territory south of the great river. Then reverses came thick and fast. Strife in the ranks of the leaders broke up all unity in the party, one after another their most conspicuous officers resigned and there is now every evidence of disintegration in the whole pretentious movement.

Many elements have contributed to the debacle that threatens the complete overthrow of the triumphant southern forces. I say threatens their overthrow, for the final failure of the nationalists is not yet an accomplished fact, though it seems to be on the way. Red influences that have been carefully instilled into the Chinese by Russian propaganda for the last five years brought about a collision of leaders in the councils of the party. Sun Yat Sen was really responsible for opening the door to the Russian soviets several years before he passed away. Borodin and his band of bolshevists have done their work in China, as others of their ilk are trying to light incendiary fires underneath the world's civilization everywhere. Be it said to the credit of China there is little hope of handing over the masses of the people to any program of communism. It did, however, dominate for a time the councils of the party and let loose a very spawn of hell in the wake of their conquering armies. The people would not stand for it as they became disillusioned over the propaganda that followed the nationalist occupation. The leaders came to blows and the party split, setting up opposing governments at Hankow and Nanking.

Numerous efforts have been made to effect an understanding as a basis of party peace. It would seem that the conservatives have gained the upper hand, for Borodin has fled, Eugene Chen has gone to Europe and Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, who has embraced the soviet amid the disappointment of innumerable friends, has migrated to Moscow. But in the midst of it all the whole movement seems to be going on the rocks. The military have not been paid in four months and are openly ready to enlist under some new commander, without reference to his principles, if he can produce the pay. The treasury is empty and apparently without credit or confidence.

There was perhaps another element that had a more vital bearing than bolshevism and its divisive power upon the collapse of the Kuomin-tang. That was the corruption of the leaders themselves. This also has had much to do with emptying the treasury and causing the retirement of many of the leading councillors of the party, both civil and military. Some have quit full handed and some have doubtless resigned in disgusted revolt against the corruptions that they could not correct. It would be difficult to convince the average Chinese that the private fortunes of their erstwhile leaders have suffered any from the ravages of war. Some of the bright particular stars of reconstruction and reform are in Japan, some in Europe and some in America, apparently in comfortable retirement from the maddening scenes of war. General Chiang Kai-shek has laid down the command of his victorious troops and is about to marry Miss Mayling Soong and depart on a year's journey to Europe and America. Miss Soong is the sister of Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, who has espoused the principles of the Russian revolution, while the younger sister is selecting as her partner its most determined opponent.

In any event the cause of the people has been betrayed and their half-articulate longings still lack a leader. The masses believe in the principles of the Kuomintang, but have failed to develop a leadership of any real patriotism and in consequence have shown again the lack of cohesion that is essential in a great hour of national need. The acid test of time has proven that there was none of the spirit of 1776 in the recent march to the Yangtse, with Chiang Kai-shek at the head like George Washington, as many believed both in China and America. The platform of the party appealed to the people, and still does, but it incorporated too many corruptionists of the old order to produce a really constructive program and lead to a just government. The poor people may have to wander in the wilderness for many weary years before they enter the promised land, that to many seemed so near.

Lapsing Back Into Chaos.

The chances are that the provincial war lord will regain control over various sections of the country and that the old order of the last 16 years will obtain a little longer. That means sectional government for private profit on the part of those who are able to maintain control, without a semblance of central authority or any program of progress for the suffering people. The world wonders why the masses tamely submit to being made the football of these military masters, particularly since almost any large city could muster more men than are included in any of the armies that take control. The only answer is that the Chinese by nature are opposed to war and would rather submit to the marauders (the real name for their military masters) than to engage in any serious attempt to overthrow them. The people generally are without arms and seem so far content to leave the fortunes of war to those adventurous brigands who are able to gain control with the small armies of mercenaries who are willing to fight with them.

Very few of the soldiers of China are patriots. They are hirelings. They are not fighting for country but for cash and the commissary. They readily change from one commander to another. This is not to say that the Chinese are without patriotism; they have it, but so far it is a patriotism of peace. They have not widely felt that it would be "sweet to die for one's country," and therefore the revolution lacks the leadership of pure patriots and that general enlistment of the masses that is so essential to success. This will eventually come and perhaps with a baptism of blood that China has never known before, for the corruptionists, who pose as patriots, will never lay down their leadership until the masses assert themselves with a devotion that will die for their deliverance.

A High Carnival of Robbery.

The outlook for the immediate future is for much high-handed robbery and disorder. The unpaid soldiers of the southern forces must obtain a living in some way and already they are looting the towns and villages that are most exposed. Friends have informed me that there are many organized bands of brigands, under some of their former military officers, who maintain their military drill in bandit camps and pay the privates regular monthly salaries out of the proceeds of their plunder. They will shoot or burn up a village that dares to resist. Sometimes they carry off a rich man's favorite son and keep him until a liberal ransom sets him free. A reign of terror is certainly in sight.

The nationalist party seems to be discredited and doomed to die, but the nationalist spirit is very much alive and will ere long concrete itself in some new form of organization. The Chinese masses are pretty widely awakened to a sense of their national need, and a deep-seated purpose to clean house and conduct government as it is done by the great self-respecting nations of the world is manifest everywhere. That it will eventually be done I have no doubt. That it will take some time is equally certain. The wisest Chinese I have met think 20 years is about the shortest time possible to bring order out of the present chaos. The people know what they want—at least in broad outline—and their awakened aspirations will not die. It will take time for these long immobile masses to learn the processes of democratic action, establish lines of cohesion and develop leaders who will be exponents of the people's will. That the leaven has been planted in the meal and is at work is manifest on every hand. Meantime the world must be patient and be prepared to expect incidents that will exasperate, not forgetting the lessons of history in the revolutions of other lands. Thirty, forty and even sixty years and more have been required for many fundamental aspirations of reform to win their way and register themselves in new molds of government.

The Religious Outlook.

I have been able so far to visit Changchow, Soochow and Sungkiang, besides holding extended conferences and many interviews in Shanghai. Some mission property is occupied by soldiers, as much private property is, but nearly everywhere our missionaries are returning to their posts. They are being welcomed back by the native Christians and the attitude of local communities is very cordial toward missionaries whom they have known. The soldiers, often brought from afar and to whom the local missionary may be entirely unknown, are sometimes discourteous. There are elements of the rabble that have been inoculated with the poison of bolshevism, which tells them that Christianity is the agent of foreign imperialism that is oppressing China and must be overthrown. These elements have made and will continue to make sporadic troubles for the missionary here and there. At places there is not government enough to hold these radicals in check, but generally speaking the missionary is wanted and welcomed and has an open door for work.

The outstanding fact of the whole upheaval is the efficiency with which the Chinese Christians have carried on the work of the church in the absence of the missionaries. With one voice the returning missionaries report that everywhere the work has gone on in their absence and has been conducted with surprising skill. Christianity has taken root in Chinese soil and will ere long create an indigenous church for its propagation. They are getting ready to conduct the program for themselves and will insist on doing it, as they ought. Not that the missionary's day is done—far from it—but hereafter he will devote himself much more largely to training and inspiring native leaders, who will take command of all the forces on the field. Christianity still has in China the mightiest task and the revolution is opening the door for a new day of quickened conquest. Christ alone can give what these millions need and American resources ought to be mobilized for a new crusade in China now. Oh, for America to be wise in this day of opportunity! To embrace it means to save both them and us and preserve the civilization of the world against its greatest peril.

When Love Died

BY ERNEST NEAL

I did not nurture as I ought
Your tender love for me.
Yet, deep within my soul I thought
How happy I would be,
To make you glad; to please, to praise,
To spur you on to brighter days,
And wreathe your face with smiles always.

So many deeds I planned to do;
I meant to sing a song
To lift and cheer the heart of you,
When faith is weak to make you strong.
But most of all, I thought of things;
The house—not home—that money brings,
Expensive cars and gowns and rings.

A pendulum twixt love and pride,
I swung from you away;
And then returning to your side
My soul forgot to say
The tender words of sentiment—
My thoughs, on greed and gain intent,
Back to the world of business went.

Back to the world that knows not you,
Back to the selfish mart;
Money must come, for bills come due—
For gold I coin my heart.
The paths of trade to greed must tread;
The means I sought became the end,
To gold, not love, my knee must bend.

Heart-sick and weary, I enter your gate
And up the marble stair
I reach the door, while servants wait
My only welcomers there.
Through revelry loud to "my den" I creep;
Bank stock is down, I cannot sleep;
With guests you laugh; alone I weep.

Midas, Midas, curst by gold!
Tantalus, tantalized!
Your granted wish ten-thousand fold
More misery realized.
Though mirth and music loud may ring
When fashion's queen, wealth a king
Then money's a god and love a thing.

In shame and pain I bow my head.
Your heart was crucified;
On a couch of gold love lies dead.
In a castle wrecked by pride.
The sin was mine; I did you wrong,
And now my night is dark and long—
Without your love, your heart, your song.

Peachtree Arcade Decorated for Xmas; Big Tree Is Feature

During the past week the interior of the Peachtree Arcade has been transformed into a place of rare beauty through installation of the annual Christmas decorations by the Weinstock Floral company, to whom the contract was awarded. A profusion of small evergreen trees are used throughout the building, with beautiful streamers of Christmas colors extending entirely around the lower railing. Every post in the building is decorated with a large wreath in Christmas colors.

In the center of the building, extending upward from the Wall street level almost to the ceiling of the building, is a gorgeously-decorated Christmas tree. Multi-colored lights are hung throughout the tree.

The feature is sponsored by the Arcade Cooperative association, made up of tenants of the Arcade building.

Atlanta's Public Schools

What They Are Doing—What They Are Trying To Do.

This is the fifth of a series of articles on Atlanta's public school system, prepared under the direction of the Personnel Association of Atlanta. They are published with the view of informing parents and the public on the school's work. The entire system, from kindergarten to high schools, will be discussed.

"READING, 'RITING AND 'RITHMETIC WITHOUT THE FAMOUS HICKORY STICK."

A little child's first day at school! What an epoch the day is. Up to this time he has been mamma's little boy. Now he is entering for the first time the big outside world. He is to take part in so many interesting things. He is to meet new people. The responsibility for his growth and development, his achievements, his interests, his success, his happiness is now shared between home and school.

The average person does not realize how much children learn in the kindergarten. Most of the teaching is done under the stimulus of play. Part of the play is just the full joyous play of childhood, but most of it is for a very specific purpose. Rhythm, which is closely connected with the number concept, plays a large part in the program. Control and direction of the emotions, regulation of bodily habits, coordination of mind and muscle, the ability to get on with other children, to know how to lead and also how to follow, to care for property, to recognize rules of law and order, to develop right attitudes toward people and things—these are some of the things a kindergartner must learn before he may progress to the first grade.

Academic subject matter, such as reading and spelling, is not required in the kindergarten. The kindergarten children are prepared for this work by enriching their experience, broadening their concepts and by giving them many opportunities to express themselves in language and story-telling, by use of graphic and plastic arts, and many other such activities.

As a rule a child who has been in the kindergarten for one year, and who is six years old, is ready for low first. If in doubt about the ability of a pupil to go on, there are standardized tests which a teacher may use to supplement her judgment.

Friends in Books.

The first grade is a very happy time for the child. Here fairyland opens up to them through the realm of books. They meet their old friend, Mother Goose, and because these rhymes and jingles are familiar to him, this is excellent reading material for beginners. Many types of reading are used in order to meet the needs of the individual children. The children make up many of their first reading lessons. For instance, a child may have had a thrilling adventure, or a novel experience which he wishes to share with the other children. He tells his story which the teacher quickly puts on the blackboard, or on a lantern slide—and what fun it is for everybody to read this story.

While everything that is in the program of work in the elementary schools is in the first grade in its very simplest form, reading is the subject on which promotion depends. The upper third of a first-grade class that has been well taught should be able to read any primer or first reader published by a representative company.

In the second grade the work on reading still gets the major emphasis. Oral language, simple spelling words and simple number problems engage his attention. These subjects carry over into the third grade. By the time a child completes his third grade he should have mastered the mechanics of reading, should know all of his number combinations with the simple processes of addition, subtraction, multiplication and division. He should be able to do the following things in oral and written language:

What the Child Must Learn.

To increase his vocabulary. By vocabulary is meant the stock of words used day by day in the pupil's oral and written work.

To work for clear enunciation, pronunciation and articulation.

To form the habit of using the English language fluently, forcefully and accurately.

To think clearly when facing an audience and to speak easily and without embarrassment.

To develop a taste and appreciation for good literature through the study and reading of choice stories and poems.

In his written work he should be able to do original creative work of at least a paragraph of five or six connected sentences, correct spelling, capitalization, punctuation, indentation, abbreviations, contractions and correct use of troublesome verbs.

Letter writing is stressed.

All written work is the outgrowth of his oral expression.

All work in English grows out of the child's needs, and is based on his interests and experience. Language is so closely allied with all other school subjects that it can hardly be considered a separate study. "It is the core of all other subjects in the course." Through stories, poems, cooperative and constructive criticisms, class discussions, and conversation the child gets ideals of courage, usefulness, truthfulness, responsibility, helpfulness and obedience.

The Fourth Grade.

The fourth grade marks another epoch in the school life of a child. At about this age his personality takes on certain decided changes. He becomes a little more critical of his efforts, begins to question the judgment of others, becomes a hero through hero worship, and requires a live-wire teacher. A teacher who does not really like to be a pal with boys should never undertake to teach a fourth grade.

In this grade, the people about whom the child reads, whether in histories, readers or library books, become his chums, his friends and his ideals, thus inspiring and building character. Pleasure is derived from his contacts with people and incidents of the printed page, but this joy in the work carries with it training in some very definite reading abilities and skills, such as selecting aim and purpose, following direction, increasing depth of comprehension, widening range of interest, finding important points and supporting details, etc. All children are encouraged to have a good book on hand for reading whenever time permits, for much reading means better reading. The standard rate for fourth grade silent reading is about 150 words per minute.

Geography grows more definite in this grade. In imaginary trips a class may go to many countries of the world in search of proper food and clothing for health. Through this vicarious living of the experiences of the people with whom they come in contact they learn the customs and habits of the people—rivers, oceans and desert plains are traversed, mountains are climbed; different climates are encountered and endured, and cities are visited. So through the study of food and clothing from the raw material to the finished product stage the child learns all the geographic principles and controls relating to the product and man's needs.

Desire for Self-Expression.

The desire for self-expression through articulate speech is as old as the human race. When the art of writing came into its own the desire for self-expression continued, having an outlet through another channel. Our language period endeavors to train the pupil in both ways of making known his thoughts. Some of our aims are: Train every pupil to have a definite purpose in speaking or writing; to select material suitable for his purpose; to keep his purpose in mind; to think clearly; to use clear-cut sentences in giving his message, and to make automatic as far as possible the mechanics of expression, such as correct form of English and spelling, proper pronunciation and enunciation. Before leaving fourth grade a child is expected to be able to write a short paragraph correctly, to master and habitually use correct form of manuscript, to use capitals for first word of sentences, names of places and persons, and to use periods at close of sentences and after common abbreviations.

In arithmetic, the new phase to be dealt with is long division. Of course work in multiplication tables is continued and made more automatic with much practice in problem solving as well as mechanical work. Elementary work in fractions, simple decimal and simple percentages are used as they relate to materials, situations arising in the child's home, community and school life. Weights and measures, United States money, etc., are emphasized, but are directly related to experiences.

In the fifth grade the study of American history becomes the center of interest. This is taken from the standpoint of leaders and achievements rather than from wars and bloody battles. The glory of reward and peace are emphasized and our own American heroes are held up as examples for our present youthful citizens and future leaders.

Use of Library.

In this stage of school growth in the fifth grade, definite instruction in the use of library is begun, giving a knowledge of worthwhile stories and writers and awareness of favorite authors and their characterizations. Broadening of taste is stressed, but again through joyous work and recreation the child strives to attain very definite abilities and skills, such as gathering and organizing data. This enables him to bring his select reading matter up to the standard fifth grade requirements—about 180 words per minute.

Since the child has been supplied with such a wealth of material to stimulate his mind and emotions, he must still be trained in language, oral and written, as two means of expressing his many ideas.

The objectives for the fifth grade are the same as for grade four, with some additional ones: to train every pupil to use a good opening and closing sentence, to use sentences in proper sequence, to help pupils enlarge their vocabulary. For oral expression the child must work for greater freedom and ease and elimination of "and" habit. For written expression his goal is mastery of "sentence sense;" mastery of form of a friendly letter, capitalization of first word of direct quotation, a title when part of a proper name, and first word of a line of poetry; quotation marks in a direct quotation, a comma to separate a direction, yes and no, from the rest of the sentence, proper capitalization and punction of heading of letter.

The geographic principles and controls are learned through the study of shelter and transportation as they were in the fourth grade through "food" and "clothing."

Mastery of Fractions.

Fractions must be mastered and a more definite fixing of automatic responses to the fourth grade work is striven for. Problems furnish practice in use of money, measures, etc., and is developing an arithmetic vocabulary, as well as ability to do arithmetic reading necessary for the grade.

In the sixth grade all of the required needs of previous grades must be checked up. Gaps must be filled and new work must be accomplished. A truly wonderful woman is the really efficient sixth grade teacher.

Here history and geography run parallel, and the child, through his study of the contributions of the old world civilizations, to North America and the possibilities from friendly relationship with South America, realizes the influence of geographical conditions, or the possibilities and growth of nations.

This study of problems relating to human interest furnish splendid opportunity for developing some of the reading aims for grade six, as looking for validity of data, weighing evidence, learning to interpret critically, outlines and summarizing. Library instruction is continued, and much reading is still encouraged to keep the rate up to about 220 words per minute.

Before promoting the child to junior high we expect him, in addition to four and five grade language requirements, to be able to select concrete words and details, to us the complex sentence for clearness and variety, to make and use simple outline, to master a sentence sense, and so on.

SUNDAY HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY.

THE PARIAH AT THE MOVIES.

He is a neat looking fellow. Indeed he is rather squeamish about cleanliness. He may not bathe quite so ostentatiously as the best people do in novels of the dimming scarlet era of our youth, but he does like to put on fresh what is the proper name for 'em every morning with a clean so to speak shirt to match. And yet, in spite of all this, the man is a pariah and when he visits the movies a strange reaction is invariably manifest. He climbs over or through a row of earlier birds, murmuring polite apologies, and sinks into the last available seat in the row. For five minutes all is serene. Then the less resistant or hardy folk on either side and fore and aft begin to go limp and lose the thread of the picture, and now one now another makes a sudden staggering flight away from there. How come? The poor fellow has bromidrosis and doesn't know it.

Oh, boys—and girls too if any be still with us—the dreadful, cutting looks of these boorish guys in the magazines who devote their lives to sniffing out foul breaths and the like, are polite badinage compared with the insults in the glances levelled upon this unwitting and perfectly innocent fellow with bromidrosis. No one who encounters him suffers more poignantly than the poor fellow does himself when he realizes at last that he himself is the pariah. As I write I have before me a letter from one who long ago discovered that he had bromidrosis, and it has quite spoiled the poor fellow's life . . . "Sometimes I walk for miles just because I dread getting near anybody . . . and from the letter he writes I believe the man is perfectly sane. At the same time I can't sympathize with him very freely, because I know he need not have bromidrosis if he doesn't elect to have it.

Bromidrosis means foul or malodorous sweating.

The normal sweat of a healthy, clean person has a peculiar, sourish odor, due mainly, the physiologists tell us, to fatty acids formed by the decomposition of the sebum (skin oil) not the sweat. This normal odor is rather characteristic for different individuals, different breeds of men and finally for the human race. The odor is not disagreeable to others, and it is even agreeable to a loved one. Indeed, the sole object of the use of perfume is to attempt to fake or counterfeit an agreeable personal or body odor. But that's psychology. We're concerned with pathology.

Retain the sweat for a time in or within excessive or impervious or air tight clothing, and decomposition advances rapidly, often associated with a vigorous growth of puterfactive bacteria, for the conditions favorable to bacterial growth are food, warmth, darkness or exclusion of sunlight and moisture. This is bromidrosis, perhaps the only stench that really "indicates" a disinfectant.

Let's tackle it at the strongest point—usually about the feet.

The most certain preventive and one of the best remedies for bromidrosis of the feet is the practice of going barefoot, even if one can do so for only a few hours every day.

If the air, and sunlight, can get at the feet, or any other area of skin for that matter, bromidrosis simply can't happen.

But folks just will wear shoes and even socks or stocking whether they need 'em or not. Worse, they wear 'em when they really don't need 'em either for comfort or style. Now this is no more reasonable than is the practice of putting on a heavy coat just because this is heavy coat season although you swelter miserably in your excessive clothing. Likewise it is silly to keep on shoes and stockings when and where one may be quite comfortable without any.

There is no record that Ben Franklin ever had bromidrosis. He didn't wear his skin away washing it, but he did make a practice of sitting unadorned in his room for a half hour every morning.

I suppose it is true that rubber is more impervious to sweat than rubber shoes or overshoes or boots or leather is, and consequently wearing other apparel of waterproof material is most objectionable where there is any tendency toward foul sweating. But practically I don't believe it makes much difference whether the apparel be pervious or impervious to moisture, for not enough ventilation can be effected through leather or cloth to keep pace with the puterfactive change in retained sweat.

A sun bath every day or two is an excellent remedy for bromidrosis of any part of the body. Of course one not accustomed to exposure must take precautions against sunburn. Five or 10 minutes is long enough to expose unbathed skin to bright sunlight at first. If there is no sunlight available, artificial sunlight, from a mercury vapor quartz lamp, are lamp or other ultra-violet light, is nearly as effective and costs little more.

Formaldehyde is unquestionably the most effective local remedy for bromidrosis of the feet. One who uses this remedy should understand that it is an irritant or caustic poison, as well as a disinfectant, antiseptic, preservative (formalin solutions are much used for preserving pathological specimens) and a hardener or toughener of soft skin. In order to get the best effect from it, one should apply formaldehyde in the greatest strength the skin will endure without irritation. Just how strong this may be depends on individual sensitiveness. As a rule a solution of one ounce of formalin (the standard or official liquor formaldehyde) with seven ounces of water, may be tried for the first time, and if this does not prove too irritating, the second application may be stronger—1 1-2 ounces formalin with 6 1-2 ounces water, or perhaps 2 ounces formalin with 6 ounces water.

The formalin is to be painted on the skin of the soles, and especially between the toes, with a swab or brush (keep it off from your fingers). Then let the skin dry. One application daily, or one application each second day, for three to six applications, will usually suffice to control the odor for a few weeks. The same course may be repeated from time to time, as needed.

For bromidrosis elsewhere than the feet, perhaps the most satisfactory remedy is an ointment having this formula or a well known proprietary preparation which has a similar formula:

Salicylic acid	6 parts
Benzoic acid	12 parts
Petrolatum, to make	100 parts

Among physicians this is called Whitfield's ointment. The proprietary cosmetic preparation alluded to contains also some zinc oxid. I believe, but in any case some such formula satisfactory for bromidrosis, as well as the control of mere excessive sweating in a limited area. It may be applied sparingly and gently rubbed over the affected area of skin, twice each second or third day.

For mild cases of bromidrosis of the feet, especially in children, it is usually enough to let the children go barefoot an hour or two every day, and sprinkle inside the shoes and inside the stockings boric acid powder or ordinary borated talcum powder very freely every day.

If this constant use of powder is objectionable, the feet of the stockings may be dredged in a saturated solution of boric acid and allowed to dry before they are worn.

Certain substances with penetrating odor, taken as medicine or otherwise ingested, may be responsible for unusual odors of the sweat, notably asafoetida, a harmless sedative and carminative still resorted to by the famous "nervous female;" sulphur or sulphur compounds (pills or tablets of calcium sulphid taken internally give the sweat an eloquent odor which some quacks assure the victim is due to "poisons being driven out of the system"); benzoic acid, onions, garlic and musk.

When all is said and done, the remedies suggested will rarely fail to take care of bromidrosis if intelligently applied and I think we have named them in the order of their potency.

Doris Kenyon gave up vocal study after having spent some years at it, having previously become a skilled pianiste. Now she has taken up the piano again. The charming actress in First National pictures divides her time between music and acting and also finds an opportunity to do some writing as well. She manages to keep herself occupied!

High's Ablaze With Brilliant Holiday Attire

Christmas has come to High's.

The great Whitehall street department store Saturday was a popular rendezvous for Atlanta youngsters bright-eyed with the prospects of an early visit from old Santa, and grown-up shoppers were infected with the general atmosphere of enthusiasm that pervaded the establishment.

On the front and side of the store, and on the interior from street level to roof, the big business house was ablaze with tinsel and lights and bright holiday decorations, while through it all ran a series of attractive and colorful Christmas and Mother Goose scenes that delighted every heart.

Above Whitehall and Hunter street are two great paintings of the holiday snow scenes, and along the Hunter street side is an immense canvas showing Santa Claus and his sleigh with the eight reindeer in full course, as they will be on Christmas Eve.

In the display windows and throughout the store's interior are scenes out of the book of childhood—Mother Goose. Hanging on the walls or providing pleasing backgrounds for displays of holiday merchandise are paintings depicting scenes from such universal favorites as "Cinderella," "Old Mother Hubbard," "Jack the Giant Killer," "Little Red Riding Hood," "Boy Blue," "Jack and Jill," "the Pig That Went to Market," "Rock-a-Bye Baby" and others.

Everywhere one turns in the big store the gaze encounters one of the old-time masterpieces on the wall or in windows, and kiddies are having the time of their lives visiting High's and enjoying the series. In addition to the Mother Goose scenes, many delightfully-executed winter paintings are featured in the various departments, and the decorative ensemble is striking and pleasing in every detail.

The plan of decoration, which will remain in place through Christmas, was conceived by G. H. Breare, display manager of High's, who has received hundreds of compliments on its originality, the skill with which it is executed and the splendor of the ensemble. The painting work was done by Ernest Leigh under Mr. Breare's directions.

Milton Sills, having completed "The Valley of the Giants," is now engaged in what promises to be one of the strongest roles of his screen career. Filming was begun this week at the First National studio on the screen version of Jack London's famous far north story, "Burning Daylight," in which Sills is starred. Charles Brabin is directing, with Wid Gunning as production manager. Doris Kenyon, who was Sills' leading lady in his last picture, again appears opposite him in "Burning Daylight."

Padlock Methods Of Prohi Agents Under Scrutiny

Chicago, December 3.—(AP)—The manner in which federal padlocks have been applied by agents charged with that duty was being scrutinized today.

Although the law requires that notice of padlocking be posted in plain view of persons passing padlocked premises, the investigators are reported to have found instances where the notices were stuck on the backs of calendars, at the bottom of a slot machine and even in closets.

A suggestion that federal agents have learned of payments by property owners to padlocking agents in return for posting the notices in out of the way places, is contained in a news story appearing in today's Tribune.

Gangland Tactics.

George E. Q. Johnson, United States district attorney, yesterday denied published reports that a federal investigation was being made of a possible connection between ward politicians and gambling and vice interests. He said, however, that the prohibition department in Chicago is being built up and that the public might expect "good results" from future liquor prosecutions.

Gangland tactics, the district attorney said, have been felt several times in federal cases. Time after time, he said, persons have come to his office to tell of law breaking.

"But when I ask them to go before the grand jury and trial jury and tell what they know, they refuse," he said, expressing the belief that it was fear that restrained them. Several witnesses in federal cases have disappeared or been slain, he said.

Judge Harry B. Miller, of the criminal court, in an address, said a "big step" would have been taken in the fight on crime by "breaking up the political-criminal alliance."

Bomb Used.

Chicago's "daily bomb" last night shattered windows and did small damage to a building on West Roosevelt road. Police, however, do not believe it was connected with the gambling war to which they attribute most of the 13 previous bombings of the last fortnight.

County police reported the arrival of "50 New York gunmen" who are being housed in the rear rooms of a hotel in Cicero, suburban stamping ground of Al Capone. Capone himself is understood to be out of town. The county police are keeping the Cicero hotel under surveillance to prevent a clash between the two gang factions now at gun-fight stage because of disputes over vice and business.

The English race is becoming fairer rather than darker, particularly so far as hair is concerned, says a British professor of anatomy.

'The Gay Defender,' Big Western Film, Stars Dix at Howard

"The Gay Defender," a Paramount picture, comes to the Howard tomorrow with Richard Dix starred in the central role. It is said to be the most romantic characterization of his career.

For many years the Mexican has been used as a stock figure in motion pictures, especially in that type of picture known as the "western." But now the Mexican has come in for glorification at last.

For in "The Gay Defender" Dix plays an aristocratic Mexican youth who turns to banditry to fight the wrongs done him and his people by American desperadoes drawn to California in search of gold. Laid in the colorful period of 1850 and photographed in its actual California locale, the picture is Dix's most romantic, picturesque vehicle.

The story, an original for the screen by Grover Jones, is based loosely on the almost unbelievable exploits of Joaquin Murrieta, Mexican bandit leader whose raids and depredations held California in a grip of terror in the years following the gold rush of '49. As adapted by Ray Harris, Sam Mintz and Kenneth Raisbeck, the picture retains the tense drama and amazing narrative of an historical biography.

Fred Kohler, "wolf of the screen," is case as Jake Hamby, American man-killer of the type that was familiar in California in those hectic days. Thelma Todd, ace graduate of the Paramount picture school, lends her blonde beauty to the leading feminine role as the daughter of the United States commissioner to the newly-acquired territory.

Al Short's Publix stage show, "A Syncopated Menu," with the latest and most tuneful melodies, the brightest stars and the peppiest dancers, is said to be of outstanding merit—one which the Howard recommends to its patrons without reservation. Every act is said to be a hit.

'MOON OF ISRAEL' ON SCREEN AT MET

Rider Haggard's Great Novel of Biblical Days Filmed.

The Metropolitan offers as the third superproduction under its new policy "Big pictures, little prices," a truly sensational classic, "Moon of Israel."

This stupendous drama-romance is the screen adaptation of the famous novel of same name by Sir H. Rider Haggard. A piognant love so powerful that a prince gives up his throne and a slave girl deserts her people, is its theme and immeshed into the biblical plot depicting the flight of the Israelites from the land of Egypt.

Maria Corda, as Merapi, the beautiful slave girl who is called by her prince lover, Moon of Israel, gives a super characterization. Her eyes alone read the agony of her people and her unselfish love.

Egypt in all her glory. The center of civilization. Unflinching wielder of the lash upon her slave Israelites through her ruler, Pharoah. Her massive colossal temples erected under loathsome drudgery. Greed. Thus is she pictured, always glorious, ever cruel.

But above all rises the burning love of the slave girl for the prince. Merapi and Prince Seti first meet over the dead body of the slave girl's father who has been slain by an Egyptian overseer. Israelites behold something rare in an Egyptian when Prince Seti demands the life of the taskmaster as justice for the heinous crime he has committed. Merapi is touched with a love of gratitude for the brave prince.

BUSTER KEATON RIOT IN LOEW'S PHOTOPLAY

The inimitable, frozen-faced comedian, Buster Keaton, will appear as the star in "College," the intercollegiate laugh riot which will be the feature picture attraction at Loew's Grand theater this week. Buster plays the part of a highbrow student and sap athlete in the happiest of all Keaton comedies.

Imagine frozen-faced Buster as a flashily-attired rah rah boy and would-be athlete? Getting into a scrape a minute—and getting out of them in the most ludicrous ways imaginable?

The story of "College" first introduces Keaton as an awkward, bookwormish sort of youth. He is a mamma's boy in high school, and when he enters university he is imbued with the idea of winning medals as a scholar. Then along comes a girl (Ann Cornwall), who fires ambitions in the model student.

He suddenly gets an overwhelming yen for athletics and loud clothes, because the girl tells him he'll have to furnish inspiration for the cheer-leaders and compus Beau Brummells before she'll let him ring her doorbell. Buster follows her suggestion—with startling results. He dolls up like an ad for Klever Klothes shop and offers his services to all the athletic coaches.

The coaches are so delighted with the volunteer athlete that they kick him off the field every time he reports for duty. His rivals for the hand of the college belle lend plenty of aid in making the youth's life miserable.

How he unexpectedly performs the athletic feats he has dreamed of, wins the girl and is acclaimed as a real hero furnish a sensational climax.

Some of the supporting players who share honors with Buster in the United Artists' comedy are Ann Cornwall, leading lady; Grant Withers, Harold Goodwin, Snitz Edwards, James Mack, Buddy Mason and Flora Bramley.

In addition, scores of world famous athletes are seen in action at leading universities.

Produced by Joseph M. Schenck, "College" easily ranks as one of the outstanding comedies of the past three years.

Alamo No. 2.

Alamo Theater No. 2 opens the week with Norma Talmadge's most majestic masterpiece, "Ashes of Vengeance," a dramatic romance of turbulent France under the treacherous dominion of Catherine de Medici, power behind the throne of weak-willed Charles IX, in 1572. Norma Talmadge and Conway Tearle are the central figures in its beautiful love story and they are surrounded by a notable cast. Tuesday, the great newspaper story from the pen of Elenore Meherin entitled, "Chickie," will be shown. This is the story of a poor typist who wants a millionaire husband. It is a picture 5,000,000 fans have been waiting to see as it was widely read as a novel as well as a newspaper serial. In this picture, Dorothy Mackaill has the leading role and is supported by Gladys Brockwell, Hobart Bosworth, Myrtle Steadman, Olive Tell and John Bowers. On Wednesday, Ben Lyons and Viola Dana will be seen in "The Necessary Evil," a story of a stepfather and stepson contesting for the love of the same girl. A remarkable story is woven around the working out of this problem.

D. W. Griffith's picture, "One Exciting Night," will hold the screen on Thursday, and on Friday Richard Barthelmess will be seen in "Fury." The week closes with "The Circus Ace," featuring Tom Mix on Saturday. The Wonder Horse, Tony, and Natalie Joyce support Tom Mix in this picture, which holds all the thrills of the big top, with Tox Mix breaking all previous stunt records. Here you will see the menagerie, side shows, crowds, peanuts, performing lions, horses, clowns, tumblers, trapeze performers and a balloon ascension and parachute. All of the above pictures will be shown at the general admission price of 10 cents, matinee and night, excepting Saturday.

POLA NEGRI FEATURES 'THE WOMAN ON TRIAL'

Rialto Augments Photoplay With Tech-Georgia Football Film.

A Pola Negri feature picture and the almost feature-length motion picture record of the Tech-Georgia football game at Grant field Saturday are the featured numbers of the screen program which will be presented beginning Monday morning at 11 o'clock at the Rialto, to run through the first half of the week.

The Pola Negri movie is "The Woman on Trial," a dramatic sensation made from Ernest Vadja's play "Confession." It will be accompanied by the Tuxedo comedy called "The Drawback."

The Rialto arranged through Jimmy Buchanan, the local representative for Paramount Newsreel, for a special and unusually complete picture of the Tech-Georgia game, with both regular and slow motion speeds, in a deluxe southern edition of the Paramount reel.

This picture was rushed into the Rialto late Saturday night but a more finished picture will be presented Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday on the Rialto screen.

For the last three days of the week Helene Chadwick and Kenneth Harlan are starred in "Stage Kisses," a picture of stage life. The comedy along with it will be the Jimmy Dooley effort, "Dizzy Sights." Another release of the Paramount newsreel will be offered.

Manager W. T. Murray, of the Rialto, is reported along film row as being in the process of securing for his theater the educational drama, "Motherhood," a sensational road show, for showing the week of December 12. A definite announcement in this regard is expected this week.

SATURDAY POST STORY, MAN CRAZY AT KEITH'S

Dorothy MacKail as "Modern Girl" Is Big Hit of Film.

A good formula for young ladies seeking romance and excitement might be to copy the stunts performed by Dorothy Mackaill who is one of the featured players in "Man Crazy." A "hot dog" stand, built on the front lawn of a staid old-fashioned New England home, starts the daughter on a series of adventures that displease the aristocratic grandmother but which is highly delightful entertainment for the patrons of Keith's Georgia theater where this newest feature will be shown this week.

Dorothy Mackaill and Jack Mulhall have the principal roles in "Man Crazy" which deals with modern girls and modern society. It is smartly presented and elegantly dressed and gives this young actress the best opportunity she has had to prove her right to being a film star. Jack Mulhall, owner and driver of the fastest express truck on the Boston Post Road, stops at the lunch for a "snak" and the young heiress, disguised as a waitress, immediately falls in love.

"Man Crazy" is a story of present day happenings. Taken from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Clarissa and the Post Road," it has been admirably adapted to the screen and has a cast of clever actors. It will be shown all week in addition to the stage progra mof Keith vaudeville.

GOOD BILL SLATED FOR WEST END SCREEN

Alice Terry and Ramon Novarro in "Lovers" is the initial screen attraction at the West End theater this week, being scheduled to be shown on Monday and Tuesday. "Lovers" is an intensely interesting and tenderly touching story of just what the name implies—love! There have been many such vehicles in the past, but none have equalled "Lovers."

Virile Buck Jones, the master horseman and wild west thriller, will be starred in "The Flying Horseman" at the West End on Wednesday only. "Underworld," the sensational film of crookdom, will be shown on the West End screen on Thursday and Friday. George Bancroft and Olive Brook are starred.

"Underworld" shows many startling scenes, including many of open warfare on the streets of New York between the police and one lone master hand of the underworld. "Down the Stretch" will be shown on Saturday.

Tenth Street.

A picture that has gotten more money than any program picture in the last decade comes as the week's opening film at the Tenth Street theater. The picture is filled with the big stars of the screen. Some of the best work of his career is done by George Bancroft in "The Underworld." The name itself tells the story, it is a picture of the underworld, its politics, its loves and its hates. Lovely Evelyn Brent is the young lady who stars while Clive Brooks does some wonderful acting.

Reginald Denny comes in with plenty of laughs in his picture Wednesday, "I'll See You in Jail." Like all Denny pictures you get plenty of action and laughs.

The feature for Thursday and Friday is a light comedy farce with Bebe Daniels in her very latest picture, "Swim, Girl, Swim." You'll get a kick out of this picture of Bebe's.

The week is finished with a dog picture, "The Love Master" is not only a children's picture, but enjoyed by all ages.

Jack Holt.

Glamour spliced with danger is the keynote of "The Warning," a drama of the Far East, which completes Columbia's releases for November. The new production is Jack Holt's second vehicle for the company under his long-term contract which calls for his appearance in highly romantic roles entirely different from his previous western delineations. As a member of the British intelligence department in the Far East, he has a daredevil role which gives him full scope for a romantic and adventurous interpretation. George B. Seitz, responsible for the great direction of "The Blood Ship," handled the megaphone.

Persimmon oil is used as a rainproof paint and paste in making Chinese paper umbrellas.

'Sees All-Knows All' LeonaLaMarr Again Featured at Loew's

The marvelous worker of wonders, Leona LaMarr, "the girl with the thousand eyes," will head a big all-feature vaudeville bill at Loew's Grand theater this week. Miss LaMarr presents one of the most interesting and most baffling mystery acts on the vaudeville stage today. She "sees all, knows all, tells all," according to her advance notices, and in this respect she is one of the cleverest performers ever appearing on the stage.

Miss LaMarr keeps her act full of new, mystifying features and she gives members of her audience lots of free advice which is remarkably accurate. The way she calls the names of her questioners, answers the questions and gives out valuable information has been imitated by many but never perfected in the manner Miss LaMarr adopts.

On the same bill with the famous mystic will come "Bob" Nelson, who was one of the headline attractions here last year. Nelson has few equals as a singer of comic songs and his new act is entitled "A Song a Minute." He presents his songs with an odd comic attitude which is distinctly his own and as a comedian he ranks among the highest in the country.

One of the most attractive features of the new program will be the beautiful dancing novelty entitled Irving Edwards' revue. This act is a gorgeous dancing creation offered by six pretty girls and several comedians. It is a Spanish fantasy, featuring the work of the noted team, Martinez and Sevilla.

Much of the comedy element will be handled by "Mrs. Edwards' Boy," a surprise comedy turn. The comedian is "just young and careless," but he keeps the entertainment moving at a fast pace with songs, jokes and ukelele playing.

The opening number is the beautiful creation, Gautier's Animated Toy Shop, a pretty act that appeals to children as well as adults. Some marvelously trained animals are used in the turn.

The feature picture for the week is "College," the latest Buster Keaton comedy with the frozen-faced comedian in his greatest role.

Billie Dove is scheduled to start work this week at First National's Burbank, Cal., studios in "The Heart of a Follies Girl." Carey Wilson has written the adaptation. Alexander Korda, who has just completed the job of directing "The Private Life of Helen of Troy," will direct "The Heart of a Follies Girl."

Big-Time Variety On Capitol Bill For This Week

Real, bigger than big-time vaudeville entertainment straight from Broadway is slated for the Capitol stage this week, with five great Pantages acts appearing on the slate for the current entertainment of local theater-goers.

The headlining turn is that of Frank Hughes and Girls, one of the really outstanding organizations presenting dance revue routine. This act is noted for its exceptional talent, the beauty of the girls and the strikingness of the costumery and settings. Hughes himself is a nationally known figure in musical comedy circles and his appearance here is counted as a distinct coup of the Capitol management.

Earl Carroll's "Vanities," the original New York show, will be drawn on for the second to headlining turn this week in the form of Harry Welsh and New Norton, who come direct from that show. Their act is one of the most entertaining that has appeared on an Atlanta stage.

Of vital and entertaining interest to Atlantans is the announcement that the four Rubin sisters, remarkable musicians and sister of the nationally-famous orchestra conductor, Jan Rubini, who conducted the orchestra at a local theater for many months and who has a host of friends in this section.

His sisters present an act that offers absolutely the finest in musical treats. Their program to be presented at the Capitol theater this week will include the most popular of the current songs, as well as the old classics presented in a virile and beautiful manner.

When it comes to real thrills, the DeKoe trio, "Human Juggle," sends all sorts of chills and thrills up and down the spines of the members of their audiences with their sensational and startling tricks of juggling the human body.

And, in addition to this outstanding vaudeville bill, the greatest screen classic of the year, "Les Miserables," will be presented on the screen. The whole world has wept, laughed and enjoyed the beloved Victor Hugo masterpiece literature, and the screen version is equally as faithful.

George Fawcett.

George Fawcett is not likely to have any wear and tear on civilian clothes. If Eric von Stroheim is a prophet, then they will continue to adorn the hangers in his wardrobe. This director put the uniform on the distinguished actor when he chose him for the notable role of the lascivious prince in "The Wedding March."

"They'll keep the uniform on you or I miss my guess," said the director when he visited the United Artists where Fawcett is playing a Russian general in "The Tempest," starring John Barrymore.

Following "The Wedding March," the actor played a Russian general in "Love," for the word was around of marvelous work in the Von Stroheim picture. And when "The Tempest" was planned for Barrymore, immediately began negotiations for Fawcett.

Among northern Indian tribes, diet was about three-fourths animal food, whereas among southern tribes, it was about three-fourths vegetable foods.

On the upper left is Grace Allen, of Buris and Allen, on the Keith vaudeville bill at the Georgia theater this week. Next is a scene from the remarkable play, "Broadway," which enters its second week at the Erlanger theater currently. The young lady on the lower left is Florence Brady and she's to be seen on the Howard stage this week. Walter Regan, the popular leading man of the Forsyth Players, is seen next. The Forsyth menu this week offers "The Green Hat," Michael Arlen's sensational play. The lady with the long hair is Leona LaMar, seeress, at Loew's Grand theater this week.

Colleen Moore, having finished "Her Wild Oat," this week began work before the cameras in her next First National starring vehicle. It is a George Fitzmaurice special, "Lilac Time," in which Miss Moore takes the role that served Jane Cowl for two years as her best stage part. This super special is being made under the production management of John McCormick.

"FIGHTING LOVE" OPENS PROGRAM AT MADISON

The oriental beauty of Jetta Goudal will open the current week's screen entertainment at the new Madison theater in East Atlanta Monday in "Fighting Love," a dramatic story of the Algerian desert, with Henry B. Walthall and other notables in the supporting cast.

Quaint and piquant humor, combined with a heart appeal that cannot be surpassed is promised in "Sally in Our Alley," which will be shown on Tuesday only, starring Shirley Mason. James Oliver Curwood's "The Country Beyond," will be shown at the Madison on Wednesday only.

And then on Thursday and Friday, the Madison theater presents the screen triumph of the season, "The Way of All Flesh," with Emil Jannings, the sensational German star, in the leading role. There has never quite been a picture that made the same appeal as "The Way of All Flesh."

For Saturday only, the Madison will show "The Prairie King," a ripping western picture.

Alamo No. 1.

William S. Hart in "Tumbleweeds" will be shown on Monday and Tuesday. It is a heart story of the greatest land rush in history as thousands stampede for home sites in the famous Cherokee land strip.

He craved adventure and got it. Dick Hatton came right out of the war and looked for excitement. In "The Action Craver" he is the man who did things. Just so Dick was in it he didn't care how fast the action was. This is another of his funny and fast pictures that will make you laugh and yell.

Buffalo Bill, Jr., in "Saddle Cyclone" will take your wind on Friday and Saturday. This is the story of a boy who bluffed his grandpop and then had to make good.

Tudor.

In addition to its regular program on Monday and Tuesday the Tudor offers a special picture, the complete play by play details of the Tech-Georgia game, the most talked of even on southern gridirons. These pictures will show each play in startling clearness with adequate sub-titles to enable the spectator to follow the play with ease.

Also on Monday and Tuesday is Bill Cody in "Born to Battle," the story of a young man, born after his father's death, and taught all his life to revenge himself on the man who was accused of his death. It is a fast moving story of the west and has numerous thrills.

On Wednesday and Thursday the Tudor offers Tom Santschi and Francis X. Bushman, Jr., in "Pride of the Force," the story of a policeman, demoted because he abandoned a crook chase to aid a child, put back on desk duty, and later faced with a supreme sacrifice, that of arresting his son and daughter for burglary.

Friday and Saturday brings Buddy Roosevelt in "Code of the Cow Country," presenting this star as the new foreman of a ranch blessed with a beautiful daughter and cursed with a wayward son; a gambler who sought to rule the country and of the foreman's stopping him.

While Colleen Moore runs a lunch wagon in "Her Wild Oat," Dorothy Mackaill works in her father's delicatessen in "Ladies Night." Both are First National pictures. John McCormick is producer of "Her Wild Oat," while Edward Small is producing "Ladies Night."

Molly O'Day, who is sojourning in the mountains, writes that she is having the time of her life. Snow and everything. And she is hiking all over the hills. She got so used to going barefoot in "The Shepherd of the Hills," the First National picture in which she played the feminine lead, that she says shoes are almost an annoyance!

'A SYNCOPATED MENU' ON HOWARD STAGE

Al Short's Publix stage show, "A Syncopated Menu," which comes to the Howard Monday, is one which bears the whole-hearted indorsement of the theater, and is said to be one of the very best stage attractions which has been offered Atlanta theater-goers in many months. In fact, "A Syncopated Menu" is being billed as the "biggest and best show of the year"—and it is not likely that such a statement would be made if the stage presentation did not merit it. It is said that Howard patrons can expect to see wonderfully clever comedy, singing and dancing stars, and a chorus that "stops the show" with "fast as lightning" stepping.

Florence Brady ("Songs You Like to Hear"), pretty, demure singer, is widely known throughout the United States both for the quality of her voice and her great charm. She has appeared in many musical comedy successes and is the star performer in the huge cast of stars in "A Syncopated Menu."

Billy Adams ("A Matter of Fun") is a famous comedian who has made a decided hit in each city where he has performed.

Wallace and Cappo ("Broadway's Adopted Sons") were the late dancing features of "Le Maire's Affairs" in Chicago. Previous to that engagement they were featured in many of the biggest revues in the east.

Loraine Tumler ("Songs Your Sweetheart Sang") is noted for her beauty and grace as well as the golden quality of her voice.

Fritz and Gene Hubert ("Dancing Inebriates), Allen Raymond ("Golden-Voiced Tenor") and the Eight Litter Pepper Pots ("Spicy, Syncopated Steppers") complete the excellent cast of "A Syncopated Menu."

Richard Dix in "The Gay Defender," with beautiful Thelma Todd as the leading woman, is the screen attraction at the Howard and is said to be Dix's best picture since "The Quarterback."

'Broadway' in Second Week At Erlanger Theater Now

"Broadway," the celebrated drama of New York's night life and the most successful and widely acclaimed play of the past five years, will start the second and positively the last week of its engagement at the Erlanger theatre tomorrow (Monday) night, and matinees, as usual, will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

The famous epic of the cabarets is now well advanced in its second year in New York and is in its second season in London. That its appeal is universal is testified to by the fact that companies are now playing in Berlin, London, New York, Budapest, Vienna, Sofia, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia.

"Broadway" played to a million dollars in box office receipts in its first 37 weeks in New York, a record unequalled in the history of the American theater. The play was dedicated at Atlantic City on July 5, 1926, and after a two-week tryout in this and other seaside resorts opened on September 16. It immediately became the sensation of the year. It was presented in London on December 22, where it was as heartily applauded as in New York.

A second American company played Detroit for 22 weeks. This season there are no less than 12 units of this night club classic playing in the United States and Europe. All three acts of "roadway" take place in a private party room just off the floor of the Paradise Night club. Here we see the cabaret chorus girls and the "hoofer" who leads them, going through the grind of rehearsal and making amazingly quick changes of costume. We see the ringleader of one set of bootleggers "bump off" a rival leader because of an argument over territorial rights, and we see a suave and tenacious detective run down the guilty man. Both the homicidal hijacker and the hoffer are enamored of "Billie" Moore, one of the chorus girls.

The hoofer, Roy Lane, hopes to succeed in vaudeville with "Billie" as his partner. The play is written and staged by Philip Dunning and George Abbott, and is presented by a company that has been acclaimed by every critic in Atlanta, as one of the finest sent on tour in many years. Seats for all performances may be obtained at the Erlanger box office, and at the Phillips & Crew Piano company, the exclusive downtown representatives of the Erlanger theater.

ATLANTA'S PLAYHOUSE BEAUTIFUL

"Broadway" Best Show in Ten Years — All-Star Cast Gives Absolutely Perfect Production of Great Success. —FUZZY WOODRUFF IN THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN

In This Opinion HE AGREES WITH EVERYBODY ELSE WHO SAW THE PLAY LAST WEEK AT THE ERLANGER — AND — EVERYBODY ELSE AGREES WITH HIM!!!!!

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION SAYS:
"BROADWAY" is the real goods and there is no doubt that it scored one of the biggest hits of years here. It is a play that appeals to all classes and one that will grip and hold the interest from the time the curtain rises until it falls on the last act.
THE ATLANTA JOURNAL SAYS:
"BROADWAY" is the best work the Erlanger has yet displayed, a show without a single dull moment and a fine bit of stagecraft played by a good company. The combination is about all that could be asked.
THE ATLANTA GEORGIAN SAYS:
"BROADWAY" is advertised for a two weeks' run. I think it might well stay here for a month with capacity business all the time. . . . It's axiomatic that you can't improve on perfection and that's exactly how to describe the "Broadway" at the Erlanger.

Michael Arlen's 'Green Hat' Plays Forsyth This Week

Coming!

The dramatic hit of the season, "The Green Hat."

And the joy of it is that the masterful Michael Arlen play will be seen all this week at the Forsyth theater, presented by the Forsyth Players, and in the presentation of this remarkable drama Atlanta theater-goers are slated to see a splendid interpretation of the Arlen story.

Weeks before A. H. Woods' production of "The Green Hat" opened at the Broadhurst theater in New York this play, based on the novel by the same author, had been a subject of general discussion. Broadway theater-goers looked forward to the presentation of this play as the dramatic piece-de-resistance of the season.

Millions have read Arlen's brilliant novel, "The Green Hat." He therefore faced a particularly trying problem when he decided to make a dramatic version. The verdict of the thousands who saw the play during its record run on Broadway was that Arlen had done a great job. And the performances given by Katherine Cornell, Margola Gillmore and Leslie Howard in the roles of Iirs March, the scintillating heroine of the story; Venice and Napier, are now theatrical history.

Iris March, the lady who wears the "green hat" and the colorful character about whom the story of the play revolves, is one of the most unusual roles that an actress has ever been permitted to play. And when you see Miss Ivy Mertons, leading woman of the Forsyth Players, as Iris, you will watch and hear her portrayal of the character originally played by Miss Cornell; and the role that lifted her to the first rank of American dramatic actresses and caused her to be hailed as the Bernhardt of the United States.

Michael Arlen's play version of "The Green Hat" follows movement of the novel with surprising faithfulness and loses none of the piquant values of the novel. The story opens following the suicide of Iris' husband. The plot unfolds rapidly from that moment. You learn of the boy and girl love affair between Iris and Napier Harpenden. You follow the adventures of the exotic but always likeable Iris to the heart-stirring finish of the drama.

"The Green Hat" is a deeply engrossing, truly beautiful play. You who have read the book will find an added delight in the dramatic version. Those who have not read it have a delightful evening's entertainment in store for you at the Forsyth theater.

BURNT CORK ARTIST, EDDIE ROSS, AT KEITH

Edison Record Star and His "African Harp," Top Bill.

"Black-face" Eddie Ross and his "African harp" are headed this way and will spend the week at Keith's Georgia theater, and as Signor Friscoe, noted Edison record star, is also billed for the same time, there will undoubtedly be a contest for local entertaining honors.

"Black-face" Eddie Ross is well known locally, having appeared with his banjo on former Keith programs. He has a line of talk which is said to register every time.

Signor Friscoe and his Guatemalan band is an unusual attraction. The playing of this remarkable instrument, the Marimba, has been recorded by the Edison Phonograph company and is outstanding for its musical tone. Signor Friscoe is one of the few musicians who has succeeded in reproducing in his records the exact playing as performed on the stage and demonstrates to the audience this remarkable similarity.

George Burns and Grace Allen contributes largely to the comedy part of the program by offering "Lamb Chops," served with musical sauce and peppery dances. "Bits of Musical Comedy" will be presented by Jimmy Burchill and His Girls, a quartet of singers and dancers making a charming background for Burchill's comedy artists.

Trained seals and sea lions are always interesting and the offering of Captain Betts includes several of these intelligent creatures. They are equally at home on the stage or in a tank and perform the most astounding feats of balancing and juggling while moving around the stage. This looks like another great bill for the Georgia patrons.

Colleen Moore is, for the time being at least, through with the job of dispensing hot dogs. In other words, Miss Moore has completed work in her latest First National starring vehicle, "Her Wild Oat," in which she enacts the role of proprietress of a lunch wagon. Larry Kent is to be seen opposite the star as her leading man.

'Constant Wife' To Play Here At Erlanger

It is not very often that local theater-goers are offered the opportunity of witnessing a metropolitan success presented by an all-star cast such as J. M. Welch will send here to the Erlanger theater for a week's engagement, beginning Monday night, December 12, with matinees Wednesday and Saturday, when Lou Tellegen, Charlotte Walker, Norman Hackett and Emma Bunting will be seen in Somerset Maugham's splendid comedy, "The Constant Wife."

Such an array of stars would be an event in any play, and when offered in one that was the outstanding success in New York the past season at the Maxine Elliott theater it makes it an offering de luxe. Lou Tellegen, the leading French actor, was first brought to America by the late Sara Bernhardt, made a tremendous hit and soon became known as the greatest lover the stage had ever known.

Charlotte Walker—the very name is an assurance of a performance of the very highest quality. She has long been considered one of the most beautiful and talented actresses on the stage. Norman Hackett needs no introduction to playgoers. He has starred in his own companies and been a member of all-star casts as far back as Warde-James and Kidder.

Miss Emma Bunting is a comedienne of the very highest caliber and her name lends tone to any cast. Somerset Maugham is known to every book reader in the world. "Rain," "The Circle," "The Letter," "The Moon and Six Pence" are some of his works that are considered of the very highest standard, but it is doubtful if Mr. Maugham ever was read or heard to better advantage than in "The Constant Wife." The readers claim his novel, "The Constant Wife," his very best effort, and the playgoers certainly placer their stamp of approval on it as a play by keeping "The Constant Wife" at the Maxine Elliott theater in New York for over a year, where it enjoyed the largest patronage of any dramatic offering there last season.

With such an exceptional cast of stars supported by a fine company and a Somerset Maugham play it should prove a rare treat for theatergoers. Particular attention is called to the scale of prices that will prevail throughout the engagement.

The demand for seats will undoubtedly be large, and those desiring choice seats should send in orders at once by mail, accompanied by proper remittance. The box office seat sale opens Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

At the Smaller Theaters

Critics Turn Press Agents; Absolutely No Spoofing

:: "THE GREEN HAT" "GOOLED" 'EM ALL ::

Critics turn press agents!

Now, don't laugh. We admit, offhand, it's hard to imagine a single one of these cynical and hard-boiled individuals whom we sometimes suspect of being completely soured on the world, as press-agenting anything.

But then that's all because you haven't seen Michael Arlen's "The Green Hat," which will be presented by the Forsyth Players at the Forsyth theater all this week.

The New York critics did. And these reviewers, undoubtedly the hardest-hearted group of persons in the world, rushed out of the theater after viewing the magic work of the Arlen pen and dashed to their typewriters and proceeded to pour columns of praise into their respective newspapers about "The Green Hat."

Well, it took New York off its feet. And it well had a right to do that, for these veteran first-nighters rarely if ever before had burst into such uncontrolled praise of any vehicle ever more or less timorously offered by the author on a Broadway stage.

As a result, the populace of New York mobbed the Broadhurst theater. They wildly acclaimed Katherine Cornell, in the principal role of Iris March, the lady who wears the green hat and about whom the story is woven, as a second Sarah Bernhardt.

A major portion of the credit, of course, was due to Arlen. And the same role that swept Broadway off its feet will be portrayed by Miss Ivy Mertons this week at the Forsyth theater.

Here are a few striking lines of lavish praise from some of the metropolitan reviewers:

"A deeply engrossing and, at times to my mind, truly beautiful play."—Alexander Woollcott.

"'The Green Hat' is first-class theater entertainment; it is written succintly with crisply turned dialogue; fast-moving action."—Leo A. Marsh.

"It is a tense, gripping drama unfolded in lines that fairly sing themselves."—N. Y. Commercial.

"The audience last night was spellbound."—Percy Hammond.

"List it among the plays to see."—Walter Winchell.

And then the play moved to Chicago, where the New York ovation was repeated.

"It offers an extremely stirring and enchanting evening in the theater."—Chicago Post.

"Last night's audience applauded thunderously, chuckled knowingly."—Chicago Tribune.

"Arlen's play goes over like a house-afire."—Chicago News.

So that is what Atlanta theatergoers may look forward to.

The story of "The Green Hat" is woven about a brilliant young Englishwoman named Iris March. She and Napier Harpender fall in love but the boy's father forbids the match. Iris marries Fenwich, who, on their wedding night, commits suicide. The tongues of English society begin to wag. They blame Iris, but she continues on her colorful way, finds her boyhood sweetheart again and finally—but that would be telling too much.

Go to the Forsyth this week and see for yourself how it finally works out.

"The Satin Woman."

Walter Lang's picture for Gotham Productions, "The Satin Woman," which he wrote and directed and for which he also designed sets and costumes, is breaking all records, according to reports. With this picture, Mrs. Wallace Reid who is starred in it, is making a personal appearance tour and the report is a trail of box office receipts. The picture first opened at the Pantages theater, San Francisco, with a house record of $28,000, and duplicated the feat at the State theater, Oakland. Big business followed in Washington and Oregon.

Lang, who is experiencing great demand for his services, is preparing for his second James Cruze production to follow "The Night Flyer" which he directed mostly on locations in Utah, with interiors at the Metropolitan studios.

That the chaotic social condition of Russia is evolving some strikingly original dramatic art is the belief of George Fitzmaurice, whose latest production, "The Love Mart," with Billie Dove, Gilbert Roland and Noah Beery in the leading roles, will soon be released by First National pictures. The noted director hopes someday to find time for a trip to the country of the Muscovites with an eye to obtaining some unusual and powerful dramatic screen material.

An elaborate electrical device is used by a student of birds to show exactly how long a mother bird stays on her nest at a time.

'Les Miserables,' Big Hugo Drama, Seen at Capitol

One of the mightiest and most gripping dramas of all time, "Les Miserables," has been transferred to the screen and will show in its picturized form all this week at the Capitol theater in addition to a great bill of five acts on the stage.

There is none who has, or perhaps will, surpass the terrible power of Victor Hugo in portraying the souls of men and women in the raw, bleak moments when all the world seems pitted against them. Despair, horror and the terrors of poverty are told in stark drama.

One cannot see this gripping, soul-stirring movie masterpiece without realizing that infinite patience, unlimited money and inspired endeavor were lavished upon the production, for no item in the tremendously big tableau seems to have been too small to be worthy of the utmost care in reproducing, when actual antiques could not be obtained.

It is said that most of the scenes, excepting those representing Paris, were taken on the actual locations of the book. These Parisian sets were built with such astonishing fidlity that they convey the illusion of age and realism, and to such an extent that it is difficult to believe that they were not photographed a hundred years ago.

Jean Valjean Beloved.

Jean Valjean, regarded by many as the most beloved character in fiction, is played by Gabriel Gabrio with a depth of understanding that makes the man of burdens live and breathe.

The lovely Cosette, the terrible Javert, the crafty Thernadier and Father Myriel, the saintly—all these are brought to being on the screen with the force of truth.

The film was originally produced in such great length that it had to be exhibited in France in a series of six showings. The American distributors have reduced it to feature length, retaining the essentials of the great story in big, gripping scenes.

The scene in the courtroom, where Valjean gives himself up to the law, would wring tears from the heart of a stone if a stone had a heart. The scene of the historic barricades is a big and exciting drama within a drama. The prison at Toulon, the Paris sewers, Valjean's escape from jail, the love of Cosette and her poet revolutionist—these will linger long in the memory of everyone who sees "Les Miserables."

Men and monkeys are very much alike, but monkeys make better movie fans than men. The monkeys sit quietly and attentively through a movie show and never read the titles aloud. This was demonstrated at recent showings of the First National picture, "The Gorilla," before scientists in the monkey houses of New York's Central Park zoo and the Pittsburgh zoo. The only time that the monks made a commotion was when the picture was stopped to change reels. They then clapped their hands, chattered and shook their bars, indicating that they wanted the interrupted show to go on. Only one or two monks fell asleep, but then it was pointed out that it was way past their bedtime and that they were not at all unlike some humans who go to the movies.

Clever Entertainment On New Screen Bill Now at Ponce de Leon

For clever and entertaining screen fare, the current bill at the Ponce de Leon theater could hardly be bettered. It offers some of the finest films of the entire season and indications are that record crowds will reward the unusual program.

Billie Dove, beautiful star, opens the week with her "Sensation Seekers" and those who like the cinema fare packed to the gills with novelty and interest will delight in this one. On Tuesday, the inimitable Lon Chaney will be seen in "The Unknown" in which he appears at the very height of his career.

For Wednesday only, Lewis Stone and Barbara Bedord in "The Notorious Lady" will be seen. "The Notorious Lady" tells a story which will be of interest to everyone. For Thursday and Friday, "Alias the Lone Wolf," one of the greatest detective stories from the pen of Louis Joseph Vance, will be shown. Bert Lytell is starred.

"Spangles," a great circus picture, will be featured on Saturday only.

Unsettled conditions in China are causing about 1,000,000 Chinese to migrate this year to the more peaceful region of Manchuria.

MASTERFUL LON CHANEY OPENS WEEK AT PALACE

Lon Chaney, the master screen character actor of them all is featured on the opening bill at the Palace theater in Inman Park this week in "Mockery," red and blood-mad story of the Russian revolution and of the extraordinary experiences of a Russian peasant, a slave without literacy, and a cultured princess of royal blood. "Mockery" will be shown on Monday and Tuesday.

Jack Holt in "North of the Rio Grande" is the Palace feature for Wednesday only. Patrons of the Palace are assured of capable screen entertainmnt in "North of the Rio Grande."

"Tarzan and the Golden Lion," another of the intriguing Tarzan stories, will be shown on Thursday and Friday at the Palace theater. The movie public long has shown a liking for these stories and "Tarzan of the Golden Lion" is the latest film. "Bred in Old Kentucky" will be seen on Saturday only at the Palace theater.

First National pictures announces that it has purchased the world motion picture rights to the highly successful musical comedy, "No, No, Nanette."

STATE .....

Her clothes are beautiful, but you can take them off and make new ones whenever you like

She is over 19 inches tall, much larger than she is in this picture. Isn't she a real beauty?

The Exclusive, New, Patented Doll
"FLOSSIE FLIRT"

To say that "Flossie Flirt" opens and closes her eyes, that she winks and rolls her eyes gaily—is not enough; her exquisite features and charming costume are most realistic; the amazing beauty of "Flossie Flirt" must be seen to be appreciated. She can be seen at the office of The Atlanta Constitution, Alabama and Forsyth streets, any day.

A Suggestion to Mother, Father, Aunts and Uncles

This is your opportunity to get a beautiful life-size baby doll, 19 inches tall, for Christmas for the little daughter or niece. The doll can be had immediately after orders have been verified and accepted.

CALHOUN BATTLE TO OPEN MONDAY

Arlington, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—Mandamus proceedings brought against the Calhoun county board of commissioners to require them to provide suitable and adequate courthouse and jail facilities at the county seat is set for the first busines son the calendar of Calhoun superior court which will convene here Monday morning, Judge W. V. Custer of the Albany circuit presiding.

At the hearing of this petition at Bainbridge November 19 the attorneys for the commissioners set up an issue of fact which requires the drawing of a jury.

It is expected that the controversy over the location of the county seat which has raged for a year or more between Morgan, the former county seat, and Arlington, the present county seat, will figure prominently in the hearing of this case.

The election in which Arlington was declared the county seat was contested and settlement of the dispute is still at issue.

Dentist's Drill Slips; Albany Man in Hospital

Albany, Ga., December 3.—(AP)—Z. P. Ingram, a local pharmacist, was in a serious condition at the Phoebe Putney Memorial hospital here today following an operation late yesterday for the removal of a dentist's drill, two and a half inches in length from his stomach. The drill broke off in his mouth while in a dentist's chair at the office of Dr. W. L. Pritchett Wednesday afternoon. It first lodged in his throat but while he was hurrying to the office of a throat specialist it slipped farther down and an X-ray photograph disclosed its position in the stomach. Ingram continued at his work until yesterday when another X-ray picture showed that the drill had pierced the wall of the stomach and an immediate operation was deemed necessary. He was reported doing as well as could be expected today following an uncomfortable night.

GEORGIA EDITORS TO HOLD SESSION IN ATHENS FRIDAY

Athens, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Editors of the Eighth-Ninth District Press association meet here next Friday for the quarterly discussion of practical topics relating to the newspaper business, editorial and news departments.

J. W. McWhorter, editor of the Winder News, and president of the association, has arranged a program for the meeting which will include a talk by Ben H. Hardy, of the Henry Grady School of Journalism on what that department of the University of Georgia is doing to train newspapermen. A program of music will also be given by students of the university.

The program includes addresses by J. C. Williams, Greensboro; Channing P. Hayes, Toccoa; John F. Shannon, Commerce.

The meeting will be held in the chamber of commerce rooms here on Washington street in front of the Georgian hotel.

BALDWIN MAKES PLANS FOR FAIR NEXT OCTOBER

Milledgeville, December 3.—School children and their teachers of Baldwin and all adjoining counties will be admitted free of charge to next fall's fair held here, according to a resolution adopted by the directors of the Middle Georgia fair Tuesday night.

Tuesday, October 9, was set as school day for children of Baldwin, Jones, Putnam, Hancock and Washington counties, and all school children will be admitted free between 9 o'clock and 1 o'clock on that date.

First, second and third cash prizes will be offered for the best decorated school trucks on school day. The trucks will be assembled on the courthouse grounds at 8:30 o'clock on school day, and parade through town to the fair grounds.

Judge B. H. Dunaway, superintendent of the Georgia state prison farm here, is president of the fair association, and C. B. McCullar is secretary. The present officers and directors of the fair have served continuously since the Baldwin county fair was organized in 1924.

BULLOCH COUNTY FAIR ASSOCIATION TO CUT DIVIDEND

Statesboro, Ga., December 3.—The stockholders of the Bulloch County Fair association have decided to continue as an active institution and have already begun making plans that point to another big fair next year. The stockholders, it was decided at a recent meeting, will receive a 10 per cent dividend on their stock in time for Christmas.

The report of the secretary shows that there is on hand approximately $1,200 from last month's fair and it is believed that a 10 per cent dividend will leave a balance of about $600, that would be a sufficient margin for operations another year.

The retiring board of directors was reelected as was the old officers. The following officers were asked to serve again: Hinton Booth, president; D. B. Turner, vice president, and Lewis A. Akins, secretary-treasurer.

TECHWOODASSOCIATION MEETS NEXT SATURDAY

Members of the Techwood Civic association will install new officers at its annual banquet, to be held at 7:15 o'clock next Saturday night at the Elks' club on Peachtree street. A musical program will be furnished by pupils of Miss Lillie Allen's School of Music. Reservations can be made through J. D. Smith, secretary.

ALBANY YOUTH HEADS MERCER LIT SOCIETY

Macon, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Aubrey Myers, Albany, was recently elected president of the Phi Delta literary society at Mercer. Other officers of the society elected are Hugh Kelly, Thomaston, vice president; Tom Cobb, Tifton, critic; Occie Seymour, Bowman, censor; Harold Raymond, Fort Myers, Fla., reporter; Aubrey Estes, Norcross, chaplain.

Psychology Lecture.

MUNICIPAL OPERA REPORTS, ELECTION SET FOR TUESDAY

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Municipal Opera association will be held at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the directors' room of the Atlanta & Lowry National bank, Pryor street and Edgewood avenue.

Reports of the officers for the current year will be presented, a new board of directors elected and important matters respecting the policies of the association discussed.

DELTA THETA PHI PLANS TO INSTALL MERCER CHAPTER

Macon, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—It has been announced that Delta Theta Phi, national law fraternity, will be installed on the Mercer campus at a future date, probably before the Christmas holidays.

It is expected that several national officers of the fraternity will be present at the installation ceremonies.

The new order will be composed of the old members of the Adonp fraternity at Mercer. Last spring this organization disbanded and became a local, Theta Phi, and it was under this name that Delta Theta Phi was petitioned.

The new fraternity is a national orgapization and is recognized as being one of the three largest legal fraternities in America. There are at present 59 active chapters.

Besides Carlton Mobley, president of the local petitioning Delta Theta Phi, the members include Frank Twitty, Will Ed Smith, Harvey Jay, D. S. Beland, Aubrey Abbott, John Gilbert, Robert Cranford, Joe J. Chappell, John Ferguson, Charles Cork, and Pledges P. K. Coleman, L. A. Parrish, Robert Strickland, Emerson Squires, Roy Hale, Buchanan Loser, Tom Hollis, Buster Flournoy, Lawson Bell, Turley Warlick, T. R. Watkins, J. A. Curry, W. E. Spinks, Stokes Walton, Louis Peacock and Oliver Custer.

Negro Bound Over.

Willis Cothran, negro hotel porter, was held for the federal grand jury Saturday by United States Commissioner L. S. Ledbetter on charges of possessing a gallon of liquor. Bond was fixed at $200 when the negro waived preliminary trial.

Bess Does Her Best

BLUE RIBBON FICTION

by RUTH PINE FURNISS

Music Almost Wrecked Bess Bradley's Marriage Till Common Sens in the Form of One Wallace Marvin, Critic, Came to the Rescue.

This time she got through it, all of it. But when it was over she felt weak and ill. It was an effort, even, to stand up and bow.

WALLACE MARVIN walked up Pearl street smiling.

Ever since last fall, when Mme. Bradley had first come before the public, he had longed to hear her play. But each time she had given a recital in or near Albany some untoward circumstances had kept him away; and each time he had devoured the subsequent encomiums of the local music critics with a regret that exceeded mere envy. Elizabeth Volnar Bradley, niece and pupil of the great Josef. . . . Next year, when, as her concert manager had announced, she was to transfer her activities to New York city and begin making longer tours, she would become, so to speak, national property. Now she belonged to this part of the world; she was local, and locally beloved. And he was to hear her play at last, was to be free to praise—nay, was to be paid to praise!

Grieg's Bridal Procession, his own, his special favorite. She was going to play it tonight. O, incredible good fortune! O, apogee of blessed responsibility!

Responsibility, to Wallace, was a sacred trust welcomed with all the ardor of the youthful idealist. It was a chance to prove yourself. Some one or something—your paper, for instance—depended upon you, and it was your glorious duty to give of your best. Even as a cub reporter, he had turned out paragraphs that were minor masterpieces of conscientiousness.

He halted in front of a store and lifted his watch into the light. Half-past five. Only three more hours to wait. Turning, he retraced his steps to a cheap restaurant near the Ten Eyck, where he sat down at a marble topped table. After some little time a waiter drifted reluctantly to his side.

His order given, he stretched out in his chair luxuriously. Yes, sir; of all embryo critics he was certainly the most fortunate. A sacred trust, and a worthy beginning for it. Tomorrow morning the Albany Eagle would be proud of him. Tomorrow morning the boss would say, "That young Marvin—there's a man who'll bear watching——"

He began again to whistle his favorite, but remembering suddenly the new dignity which should surround him (like a halo), he ceased, and drawing a magazine from his pocket—a copy of the Pagan Review, New York's most radical publication—he commenced to read.

* * * *

Elizabeth Volnar Bradley was practicing the Bridal Procession. Only three more hours before it must be played—in public. Her curly hair was awry, her forehead wrinkled, her red lips clamped close together.

Bing—bing—bang! Bing—bing—bang!

Bing—b-bing——

A wrong note! Her mouth pressed tighter; it was nothing now, but a stiff tiny pucker of determination.

The Bradley's apartment was out near the Country club. It was a very small apartment, with a nursery barely large enough for Ellen's bed and the two cribs, a kitchen obviously not planned with Bridget's great bulk in mind, and a living room whose walls fairly bulged to accommodate the concert grand piano before which Bess now sat—and suffered.

For she was suffering. Ever since her program had been made up she had suffered intermittently over these measures toward the end of the Procession. Whenever she had had a few extra moments, she had shut herself in the living room to work over them. But they still eluded her. It wasn't the actual "bing—bing—bang" (that part was easy; just chords), it was the passage introduced by the "bang"—a series of irregular notes running up and down the keyboard an octave apart on both hands, a passage which nervous fingers invariably ruined.

It was curious. She couldn't understand it at all. The thing wasn't really hard, not nearly so hard as several of her other numbers, the technicalities of which she had completely mastered. But this she simply couldn't get. The passage had a sharp, definite rhythm, and recently she had found herself inventing a kind of idiotic rhyme to go with it—repeating words (goodness knew where they had come from) every time she tried to play the recalcitrant bars.

"Do your best! Do your best!
Don't let an-y-thing ever keep you from——"

That was as far as she could get. For some reason or other there didn't seem to be any more words which would fit in with the peculiar rhythm and still make sense. It was maddening—and utterly absurd. Why in the name of heaven did she want to find words? Here she was, giving all her attention to the silly rhyme and letting her fingers go stumbling on by themselves. And the more she searched for the words, the less she did that "best" which formed the burden of her song! O, it was maddening!

If Uncle Josef were only here. He could have set her straight in five minutes . . . But he was off on his annual grand tour. This was the first time in her six months before the public that she had undertaken to play a number without his careful coaching, his interpretation literally at her fingertips. He had left while she was still on the first page of "The Procession." Her protests had been brushed aside brusquely. "Pst, girl! Go ahead and play it. Surely you can work it out alone, after all the studying you've done with me . . . "Work it out alone. . . .

In one way, though, she was almost glad he wasn't here—with his storming and his driving and his sneering and his driving her on and on.

She rubbed her hands together in a vain endeavor to form them, and tried again. She was half-way through the passage—it was going to be better this time—when the door burst open and two small figures flung themselves into the room. Her hands dropped to her lap and she frowned.

"Now Betty! Aren't you a naughty girl! Don't you remember you promised mommy to stay away—and make Buddy stay away, too? A great big five-year-old certainly ought to be able to remember promises. Go right back to Ellen."

"Don't wanna. Don't like Ellen. Wanna stay with you. We like you, don't we Buddy?"

The baby nodded carefully.

Bess' heart warmed. She leaned over and threw her arms around them collectively, realizing all too well that her action imperiled discipline, enjoying it all the more for that realization. "Well, then, five minutes—if you promise to go away like good kittens after that. Will you?"

Bess Does Her Best

"Yes, Mommy."

"You, too, Buddy?"

"Umhum."

She accepted this as affirmation. "Sit down on the floor, then, and don't speak. If you do, you'll have to go at once."

They plumped themselves down near the piano stool, their round faces upturned, their eyes limpid with angelic obedience. Bess smiled at them approvingly and lifted her hands.

"Do your best! Do your best!
Don't let any——"

"Mommy!"

She shook her head.

"Mommy!"

"No, no, Betty. You must be quiet."

"Do your——"

"But, Mommy——"

Bess' fingers paused on the keys. "Well, what is it? You may speak just this once—but not again, or out you go."

"Mommy—that's not the Pussy Cat song!"

Reluctantly Bess laughed. "You're quite right, Bettykins! It certainly is not! Mommy can't play the Pussy Cat now. She's practicing. . . . Now, are you going to be quiet, or must I call Ellen?"

"Quiet," nodded Betty.

Buddy, intent upon unlacing his shoes, had, apparently, no surplus energy to waste.

"All right. But remember . . .

"Do your best!
Do your best!
Don't let anything ever keep—"

"Mommy!"

The bar come to an end in a discordant crash. "Very well, Betty!—Ellen! Ellen!"

"No, Mommy, no! I'll be good. Please let me stay, Mommy"

"Mommy warned you. Ellen!"

The nurse appeared in the doorway, her thin face black with gloom. Why was it, Bess wondered, that Ellen, usually so efficient and pleasant, always grew ogreish when a concert was in prospect?

"Ellen, you'll simply have to keep the children in their own room. I can't get a thing done if they keep coming——"

Grimly Ellen advanced upon her charges.

Buddy had succeeded in getting one shoe off and was chewing contentedly on the laces. He looked up at her with mild concern. But Betty, emitting a whoop of misgivings, ducked under the piano and come up on the other side, flat against the wall and well out of reach in the curve of the piano frame.

"There! See that?" An acid triumph lurked in Ellen's words. Clearly, this was no more than she expected. "Sure, it's a young divil she can make herself when she chooses, so it is. And it's no one can manage her then but her papa. I can't get her out of there, M'm; indeed I can't."

Bess stood up. She felt that she was fast sliding toward a display of disastrous anger. "Betty!" she cried sharply. "Come out at once, I say. If you don't——"

"What'll you do?" inquired Betty, with interest.

"I—I'll—I'll tell Daddy."

Betty sniffed. "Hmph! He'll scold you!"

She was not far from wrong. Tully's failing was his daughter. Hastily Bess corrected her error. "Well, I'll spank you, then. I mean it—I'll spank you hard, if you don't come out this minute—before I count three. One! Two! Two and a half! Two and three-quarters! Thr-r——"

With a small squeal, Betty bobbed down and crawled on her hands and knees to Ellen's feet. But as soon as the nurse stopped to lift her, she went limp—a dead weight of pink gingham and naughtiness.

"I—can't!" grunted Ellen. "Sure, and I can't raise her an inch off the floor."

Abruptly, Bess' rage came to a head. Marching over to her daughter, she seized her in her own strong arms. "You bring the baby, Ellen. I'll attend to Betty myself."

Without wasting further words, disregarding the screams in her ear and the soft arms encircling her neck in an abandonment of anguish, she crossed the hall into the nursery and sat down on the bed. Ellen arrived with brother just as the promised attention was being administered. Shortly afterward, a kicking, howling bundle rolled from Bess' lap to the counterpane.

"Now, lock this door, Ellen, and keep it locked." She had almost to scream to make herself heard above the tumult. "You'll have to get them to bed yourself, alone. I'm not coming in again. It's after six."

And steeling herself against an inner whispering voice of weakness ("Comfort her! Kiss her! The poor little thing—tell her you didn't mean it!") Bess went back to the living room where she sank down on the piano bench. Tears that she would not shed were burning her eyeballs; she was shaking all over.

* * * *

With a disconsolate attempt at detachment, she considered the situation. This was the way it always was, the way it always would be, apparently, whenever she was booked for a concert. Everyone—every one in the house, in a jangle of irritability. And why? Why? Other married women managed it. Plenty of married women were artists of one kind or another and seemed really to get something out of it.

Even on her short tours away from home things weren't much better. She never could seem to separate herself from her responsibilities. She was always worrying over whether Ellen was taking proper care of the children, or whether Bridget was giving Tully enough to eat, or whether the window in the nursery had been mended. . . .

But what good did it do to consider the situation, when consideration brought no light? And when the concert was only two hours away? Wearily she raised her hands to the keys.

"Do your best! Do your best!
Don't let anything keep you—"

Betty was still screaming; she could be heard distinctly through both closed doors. And now, Buddy, frightened no doubt by the din, added his own staccato yelps to the unbelievable confusion.

She wondered miserably what the tenants above and below her must be thinking. "That artistic Bradley woman—she can play in concerts all right, but can't manage her children."

Well, she couldn't help what they thought. She had her reputation in the musical world to maintain, and Uncle Josef's as well. And there was her talent, too, to be doubled, according to scripture. She must never let herself forget that parable of the talents; they must be returned to their giver at the last, doubled or redoubled in proportion to one's capacity. Hers, at the very least, should be doubled. . . .

And added to this celestial obligation was her terrestrial one—the obligation to Uncle Josef . . . And yet she really had no cause to be sensitive about relationships; Uncle Josef was making a very good thing of her, financially.

But that was ungrateful! It was disloyal! Naturally he couldn't afford to give her lessons free. And look at all he'd done for her. Given her a rapid grounding, followed by a start, a push into the concert field long before most musicians were able even to think about beginning. A comparatively short time of intensive study, and he had sent her into the limelight, unselfishly allowing her to share some of his own glory. . . . And he had egged her on, driven her on, whenever her all too frequent periods of discouragement had seized her. . . . O, yes, he had been marvelous to her; indispensable.

A door slammed in the outer hall. Her heart jumped. Tully was home—and the children were still at it. Now there would be a fuss, for fair!

* * * *

Within three minutes he had stamped into the living room. His dark, handsome face was thin lipped with exasperation.

"For the Lord's sake, Bess, what's the matter with the children? I never heard such an uproar! I tried to get into the nursery, but that old fool couldn't — or wouldn't — hear me knocking. What's the matter with them?"

"Betty was bad. I had to spank her." Bess tried to speak calmly. When Tully looked like this, it was well to address him with all the gentleness that you could muster, no matter how you might feel inside.

He was staring at her accusingly. "You spanked her? You spanked Bettykins?"

"I had to. She was—just awful."

"Well, I'll be damned! How many times must we thrash this thing out? How many times must I tell you that she can't be managed that way? See how good she is with me. Why can't you bring out that side of her? Why is it that whenever I come home I find——"

"That's not fair, Tully. You know it's very seldom you find things like this. You know——"

"Seldom? It's been every night for the last two weeks."

"Well, I can't help it. Everything's gone wrong for the last two weeks. I can't put up with it indefinitely. I have to take a stand now and then. I tell you I had to spank her. It was the only way. She came in here and brought Buddy with her, while I was practicing——"

"Why shouldn't she come in here at this time of day? It's the children's time. Why can't you get your blessed practicing done earlier, so that——"

"I've been practicing steadily, Tully, all through the day, and every day, for more than two weeks. You know that. But there's one place in the Procession that I simply can't get. And I've got to get it. In fact"—her gentleness was beginning to evaporate—"in fact, if you don't go out of here and leave me alone to get it, I won't answer for the consequences. Please, Tully, please don't let's have an argument now. Do go on out and let me work. We can hash it all over tomorrow if you like, but don't bother me now. I can't stand it, just before my concert."

"You never can 'stand' anything before your concerts. And this——" he motioned toward the articulate nursery—"This is always the result. Nice kind of house to come home to! Pandemonium! You'd have just as good concerts and get just as good criticisms, if you behaved yourself before——"

"Behave myself! I? When every one in the house—when—O, Tully; do go out!" Determinedly she forced herself to lower her rising voice. "We're both getting more and more tragic every moment! Go on, like a dear. If you don't, I'm sure I don't know what'll happen to me tonight." She looked up at him appealingly, but he did not stir. In the face of his unwillingness to meet her half way, a wave of indignation swept over her.

"Tully!" she cried. "Try to see my side of it, for once. Do you suppose I enjoy practicing here in the midst of everything? Don't you suppose I'd like to have a studio outside somewhere, where I could——"

"There! That's right! Fling it in my face! I'm not making enough to—that's right! Fling it! Your regular comeback. Why don't you use your concert money——"

"You know very well where my concert money goes. Back to Uncle Josef for lessons, nearly every cent of it. And the rest——"

"Goes to pay the servants, eh? My fault, of course. If I were making more. Well, if you were willing to turn a hand yourself now and then, like other women——"

At this she flung aside all pretense at self-control. Springing to her feet she faced him, white with fury. "Be still! Be still, I say! I begged you to go, and you wouldn't. Now you can stay and listen to me for a while. And you can be fair about the thing—fair and just, or I—I—'turn a hand!' How can I turn a hand when my hands must be spared for my work? How can I go dipping them in pots and pans and babies' baths when they must always be kept in perfect condition? How can I be a servant and a concert player at one and the same time? Do you think I relish my position—a Tomlinson, neither one thing nor the other? Do you think it improves the situation for you to be forever digging, digging, at me—just when I need most to be quiet and be helped? Do you think——"

"I think," he interrupted, harshly, "that you're behaving like one of the children." He wheeled, banged the door behind him as he left the room.

She heard him pound on the nursery door with a crash that was not to be denied. For a moment she stood motionless, staring at the spot where he had been. Then she dropped to the stool and buried her head in her arms.

The snowstorm had stopped. Albany had turned out full force to hear Mme. Elizabeth Volnar Bradley. It filled Concert hall with its sleek and fashionable numbers. It whispered respectfully, "A niece of the great Volnar, you know. He taught her—" It was inordinately proud of its celebrity.

Bess' inner turmoil had not abated. She and Tully had driven down to the hall in hurt silence, each in his own corner of the taxi. She was aware that a word from her would immediately clear the atmosphere, but pride forbade its utterance—even though she was also aware that in withholding it she was paving the way for a period of sullen and aggrieved silence on his part. Tully always acted that way, if she didn't make the first advances after a quarrel. Sometimes she wondered why she adored him so. But she did. And she knew she always would.

At the door of her dressing room he left her with a curt nod.

The first part of the program went, she felt, every bit as well as usual. In

POETICAL FANCIES

THE UNATTAINABLE.

My soul is a bird whose yearning desire
Is beaten and baffled by fate;
Soar where it will, evading and higher
Away in the blue is its mate.

Still would I dream on, bright visions of thee
Pursuing, O loved ideal!
Tho' never, alas, this heart of me
May throb 'gainst the heart of thy real.

—ERNEST NEAL.

SOMETHING IS HIDDEN.

Something is hidden, which I cannot see—
In all things beautiful, the flowers, the wind,
There is a great glory, dark for me;
Something is hidden which I cannot find.

What is this hidden wonder? I can feel
It hovering everywhere.—that budding tree,
This stone, hold from me secrets of their own,
Can it be God, so near; yet hid from me?

—MAY THOMAS MILAM.

WILD ASTERS.

Like golden rain the Autumn leaves
Come softly falling down,
Bright gleaming roofs and hill-top eaves,
And flecking meadows brown.

A bird call echoes through the wood,
The grasses lie in heaps,
All colorful in rippling floods,
Cascading mountain steeps.

Deep, boding silence everywhere,
Asleep the brooding flowers,
That erstwhile bloomed so fair
Perfuming summer hours.

Aye, but there's hope, and there's cheer,
Although the forest grieves—
Wild asters I found today
Abloom through fallen leaves!

So, when our day grows dull and gray,
We, too, with trusting eyes,
Just as the asters today
Look up to sunny skies.

—AUGUSTA WALL.

DANCE OF THE LEAVES.

We are the ghosts of summer joys,
Of springtime green. The babbling noise
Of running brooks lies sealed within
Our dusky brown, to music kin.

In other days we danced with glee,
For lovers fond beneath the tree.
They only read each other's eyes,
And found in them a shy surprise.

Nor looked they to the myriad green
Of shining leaves, o'erhead that lean
To catch the low half-spoken vow,
The kiss upon the upturned brow.

Some tramp.e us beneath their feet.
They reckon not the days so sweet
When, with a veil of sea-green haze,
We sheltered them from noonday blaze.

We dance, O sister ghosts, one round,
Slow waltzing, circling to the ground.
From out the ground Life springs anew.
Till that fair future, friends, adieu.

—LUCY B. DANIELL.

A DREAM FROM THE PAST.

The driving wind
Went rushing by
And laughed and sang.
It took the rain
And toyed with it
And dashed it down.
And so in spurts
It spattered there
Against the panes.
And I was glad
That I could sit
And roast my toes.
And read my book
And smoke away
All nice and warm.

But later on
I heard it shriek
In frenzied play.
As rain it tossed
Like laden hail
Against the glass.
And so my thoughts
In spite of me
Went wand'ring off.

And we were there
Upon a hill
Without a tree.
And it was dark
And we were wet
And we were cold.
And mocking wind
With icy tongue
Went laughing by.

And shaking frames
Were pelted hard
By driven rain.
And up and down
And round and round
We stamped about.
But didn't dare
To light a fire
Or even smoke.

For out beyond
Retreating men
Were moving on.
And "wild-cat" guns
Were here and there
To cover them.
So cold and stiff
And weary eyed
We saw the dawn.
And shouldered packs
And through the mud
We followed them.

Then I felt chilled
And saw the fire
Had died away.
And though the wind
Still rushed along
And played and sang.
I crawled in bed
And nice and warm
I went to sleep.

THE RACE.

Autumn comes creeping over Briarcliff hills,
From Gaymont farm there's a whirring sound,
As an engine drives a machine which fills
The silo, towering so high and round.

Autumn steals upon my small garden plot;
Bees, determined that no sweets are lost,
Are racing with the engine, likely's not,
To fill their silos ere winter's frost.

—JENNIE M. DeLOACH.

"WHY."

Why the flare of a rainbow arching—
God's shadow'd twilight sky;
As a great rocket rising
From where dark pine tops sigh
Holding by tints ethereal
Heaven and earth embrace,
Painting the picture of promise
As a circle of lighted space.
Eternity for a background,
The infinite tinted sky,
Asking the age old question,
"Why?"

Why the call of the lonely night-bird,
For its mate, when the wood is still,
And the shell-smoked air is heavy,
Where the huntsman took his fill.
Why the echo call returning
Bringing no answering cheer
Thro' the chill of a woodland night-time
No twin soul throbbing near.
No answer for a lone bird's cry,
"Why?"

Why a thread of gold in a needle of light,
Embroidering the robe of day;
As the sun sinks slowly, in silence holy,
Drawing the glory away.
Leaving the world in the moon's cool arms,
Soothing its troubled breast,
In the silver gleam to sweetly dream
That the night brings home and rest,
While across the starry stillness,
A new born infant's cry,
Demanding of life the reason,
"Why?"

Why the struggling cursing multitude,
Clutching for meat and drink;
Poor shackled throng, in self forced chains,
Who haven't the time to think.
Toiling along 'neath the shadow
Of the phantom dollar mark,
'Till it leads them away, from the light of day
Where their hopes and dreams lie stark,
The burden of the heart a sigh,
"Why?"

Why mothers weeping thro' ages
O'er Jesus and Judas, too;
As mothers have wept since time began
As our own o'er me and you.
And why for each soul Golgotha,
And a cross where the self must die
And the white of the Easter lilies breathes
"Love is the answer why."

—ANNE WALKER DOUGHTY.

GOLD!

You may talk about the golden west,
There's gold enough right here—
If you'll drive up to our mountains,
When the sun is shining clear!
The trees that were leaf-burdened
Are shaking off their gold,
With all the rainbow colors
And a million more untold!
So, ever thus, must grandeur,
No matter from what source—
Take a trend that's downward;
It's only Nature's course!

MY WAGON.

"Hitch your wagon to a star."—Emerson

I hitched my wagon to a star,
I couldn't breath the air,
It was so very rarefied
I couldn't stay up there.

My wagon tumbled to the ground,
I got so sad a fall—
That I can't hitch my wagon now
Anywhere at all.

Things New and Old About the Bible

By W. P. KING
Pastor First Methodist Church, Athens, Ga.

Volumes of Real Value.

THE following books are published by the Macmillan company, New York City and Atlanta, Georgia.

"Snowden's Sunday School Lessons," by Dr. J. H. Snowden. Price $1.25.

Seventh Annual Volume.

"Practical Expositions of the International Sunday School Lesson" (1928). Improved Uniform Series: Topics for young people and adults. Seventh annual volume. By Rev. James H. Snowden, author of "The Coming of the Lord," "Is the World Growing Better?" etc.

"Lesson Helps" abound that supply material enough for a lesson period of one or two hours and throw all the burden of selecting what can be crowded in an orderly way into twenty to thirty minutes on teachers who know that they do not possess this special gift.

Dr. Snowden has in a high degree the gift of selection and of keeping his material within the limits allowed for the lesson period in the average Sunday school. He selects incidents enough to make the people and events of the lesson interesting and human, fits into this frame sufficient comment to bring out the character weaknesses or strengths displayed by them in these transactions, indicates for the instruction of his students places where these same judgments may apply to themselves, and suggests further live topics growing out of the lessons for discussion.

This book is increasing popular with preachers and Sunday school teachers. Dr. Snowden is among the best of present day writers on religious topics.

"The Wrestle of Religion With Truth," by Henry Nelson Wieman, Ph.D. Price $2.50.

This is not a theological treatise. Theology deals with beliefs, while religion, as distinguished from theology, means to this pioneer a science of adaption to facts. This is a work in the philosophy of religion, that, is, a careful critical study of the concepts and their worth which have entered into the religious beliefs of the past or may one day hope to provide the structure of a greater faith. Although it has a method of its own to present which it seeks to vindicate "The Wrestle of Religion with Truth" is fascinating reading throughout.

Perhaps the most attractive feature of this rather original "philosophy of religion" is the transparent sincerity shown by Dr. Wieman in his courageous refusal of any kind of slipshod argument that might make his case appear more plausible. It makes a manly book of "The Wrestle of Religion with Truth" and one of the most stimulating pieces of work done by an American scholar in its field. His task here, it is true, requires him to keep his own beliefs in the background and devote himself singleheartedly to the clarification of religious concepts by his chosen method. Nevertheless it is perfectly clear that he is a devout follower of the Master.

This book will give great satisfaction to those who have longed for a readily intelligible refutation of the two opposite claims that have perverted religion again and again, one denying that religion has any need of truth, the other asserting that religion has all the truth it needs. These two mistaken claims have led many into the pitfall of thinking that they could become and remain religious and yet slip out of the heroic research by which religion in its patient journeyings over the paths of profound worship and experimental living slowly finds truth which is more precious to human kind than any other in all the realm of truth.

Some parts of this volume are not easy reading, but the reader who perseveres is rewarded. The intellectual attitude of Dr. Wieman may be seen in his declaration on "The Present State of Religious Thought." "One cannot be truly progressive without being conservative; and one cannot be truly conservative without being progressive. One must be both if one is to be genuinely either.

To be conservative is to conserve the good which the past has achieved. To be progressive is to add to that good. To be progressive one must carry on some uncompleted work. The quack conservative is the man who thinks he can be conservative without being progressive. He is false to the fathers in that he does not conserve the spirit of progress. The quack progressive is the man who thinks he can be progressive without being conservative. It is the quack who causes all the trouble between conservatism and progressivism."

"Secrets of Effective Living," by James Gordon Gilkey, M. A., D. D. Price $1.75.

"Secrets of Effective Living" discusses some practical problems of everyday life, like fear, disappointment and self-distrust, and suggests immediate and concrete ways which ordinary people can use to advantage in coping with them. The illustratios are drawn from actual instances in the author's experience as minister in a large city parish and as preacher to a radio congregation covering all New England. This volume takes the religious convictions advanced in the author's earlier volume, "A Faith for the New Generation" and applies them to the actual problems of daily living. It may be regarded as a description of modern liberalism as a working faith. "Secrets of Effective Living" will be specially helpful to those who are concerned over practical difficulties rather than over problems of theology. It will also supply a pertinent answer to those who are asking what message the liberal preachers of today have for men and women who are seeking victory in the struggles of daily life.

Those who have read Dr. Gilkey's former volume, "A Faith for the New Generation," will not have to be persuaded to secure this second volume.

Among the chapter topics are "Learning to Live Without Worry," "Improving One's Self-Control," and "Utilizing One's Reserve Power."

If I have recommended any book which was disappointing to readers I am truly penitent, since they might not be influenced by my estimate of this volume. But I am sure that any reader of this book will be so grateful that he will forget any of my past mistakes.

If you have to deprive yourself of a new garment or a tempting banquet, secure this volume and also the following volume on "Fear."

"Fear," by John Rathbone Oliver. Price $2.00.

This philosophy or psychology of fear is cast in the form of an autobiography of Jaques Edwards. In later middle life Edwards becomes obsessed with unreasoning fears. The description of how these various fears are tracked to their secret lair by the Psychotherapist, the Fear-Hunter and dragged into the light gives us a narrative that can scarcely be excelled in its gripping interest. It affords to the morbid and despondent a new inspiration for living.

It is not possible to give a adequate idea of the content of the volume. In language that stirs the depth of the soul, the author finds the final remedy for fear in God. It will afford the reader a certain intellectual test, for if you do not fairly luxuriate in this book, it is evident that you have already passed the black border of the deadline.

SINCE the newspapers have quoted Katherine Wilson as saying just about everything in the world she's never said, I might as well let you know what she did say. And that is that as the date for her marriage to Richard Barthelmess drew near she realized that her stage career really meant more to her than anything else. Miss Wilson has in the short period of four years made an enviable place for herself on the New York stage. She tells me she was just a trifle annoyed when she read in some tabloid that "Miss Wilson felt that she owed it to the world to continue on the stage." That is a little too overpowering a statement for even an actress to make.

Anyway, if only from the standpoint of a dramatic critic, your sly old correspondent is more than elated at Miss Wilson's decision not to marry right now. At the moment of this writing, she is busily engaged in deciding which of three plays she'll appear in this season.

"Funny Face" is the title of the musical comedy in which Fred and Adele Astaire come romping back to America. They've been playing "Lady Be Good" in London for nearly two years and it looked at one time as though they'd never be allowed to come back. "Funny Face" just as "Lady Be Good" has George Gershwin music and after you've seen the incomporable Astaires dance to Gershwin, music, you've seen just about the best musical comedy has to offer. The lines in the play are really funny, one at which I laughed being when a dizzy blonde asked what "symptoms" means.

"Don't you know," asked the surprised William Kent. "Don't you remember "Symptoms I'm Happy, Symptoms I'm Blue."

The radiantly lovely Gertrude McDonald dances through the show with her usual charm. She and Mr. Astaire do a clog in the second act which is the hit spot in the show. Victor Moore and William Kent are the comics and very funny, too. Allen Kearns, that altogether likeable young juvenile, is the love interest opposite Miss Astaire.

" 'Smarvelous, 'Swonderful," "High Hat," and "What Am I Going to Do" are the best of the musical numbers. "Funny Face" is that fourth which "Good News," "Five O'Clock Girl" and "Manhattan Mary" have been waiting on to make an all-star bridge game.

Some of you may get behind with your New York trips, but the Rhodes contingent can always be relied on to put in pretty regular appearances. Mrs. Rhodes, Mrs. Bricker and Mrs. Duncan Owens are the latest Rhodes to have been up and they tell me they didn't see any plays they'd really care to rave about. At one Saturday matinee, I do not doubt but that Mrs. Bricker and Vernon McMillan were a little surprised to find themselves sitting next to each other. Each of them chanced to be with someone else. When I saw Frances and Wilmotine they were wearing some snappy-looking new clothes which you've probably already told your sewing-woman to copy for you.

Pauline Lord makes her first appearance of the season in a play called "Spellbound." Miss Lord is considered by many to be the first actress of her time. I regret that I cannot concur in this opinion. I'm afraid I find her doing "Anna Christie" just as I thought she did her in "They Knew What They Wanted" and "Mariners." It might not be amiss for Miss Lord in her next play to perform, singularly enough, the character in that play. I am sure poor Miss Christie needs a rest.

I liked "Spellbound" well enough but that apparently isn't enough. For I'm given to understand the play is not doing so well and may not even be going when this reaches you.

* * * *

Untold disappointment awaits those who go to "And So To Bed" thinking they're going to find something risque and smutty. It is to be hoped you'll know in advance this play concerns that Diary Gentleman, Samuel Pepys. I hope the typesetter will not commit the grave error a New York one did and turn this astonished Mr. Pepys into a "Dairy Gentleman."

This is an entertaining and clever comedy bubbling over with bright quips. I recommend it to you without reservation. The cast is excellent with the exception of Wallace Eddinger who, I thought, played Mr. Pepys as though he'd never read him.

At the Helen Morgan club, I've seen lots of Atlanta people lately. That particular chuckle which issues only from Orme Campbell reached my ears the other night. Then I've seen Ben Finney there. He is running around with Constance Talmadge a lot these days. I've seen Nell Sims at this club, and also Jack Cohen, Jr. And there the other night I also beheld Emma Hills Orvis. I thought Mrs. Orvis looked charming that evening, particularly when she put on her white ermine evening coat. On the same night I saw Emma all dressed up, Marion Davies was there. Miss Davies on that evening had not bothered herself about dressing. She was wearing street clothes and looked stunning in them, too. I have noticed that Atlanta people are always to be found at the same night clubs movie celebrities attend.

PAGES FROM MY LIFE

FEODOR CHALIAPINE

"The only authorized English translation of my autobiography."

Feodor Chaliapine

Disappointment.

THE contract which I signed with the administration of the Imperial theater stated that I was entitled to make three appearances. If I did not give satisfaction on these occasions the contract would not be ratified. I forthwith ordered visiting cards with the imprint "Artist of the Imperial Theaters," a designation which much flattered my self-esteem, and of which I was very proud.

My first appearance was in "Faust." I already had ideas of my own about Mephistopheles but those in authority ordered me to wear the costume of tradition; and my make-up, which I had carried out according to my own ideas and which differed from that established by custom, excited laughter and misunderstanding. This attitude embarrassed me and cooled my enthusiasm with the result that I don't think I sang Mephistopheles very well on that occasion.

Afterwards I was told to sing Zuniga in "Carmen." I emphasized the comedy of the character, and produced a better impression by my performance.

The stage manager asked me if I did not know the role of Russlan, and told me that the administration would take particular note of the way in which I performed it. At that time I had already acquired something of the self-confidence, bordering on audacity, which appears to be a characteristic of all young artists. I had already experienced a considerable degree of success at the Panaevsky theater and at charitable concerts, and had grown accustomed to receiving bouquets from feminine admirers.

Knowing how quickly I could learn a part, I told the "regisseur" that in three weeks I could learn not one, but two operatic roles like "Russlan," if required.

"Very well, learn it," he requested me.

I forthwith found an accompanist and learned the role, as I though, after three weeks of hasty study. The day of the performance arrived. Napravnik was conducting the orchestra. I put on the costume of a Russian warrior of early times, padding myself out to increase my girth, stuck on a red beard, and went on to the stage.

From the very first note I felt that I was singing badly. When the consciousness of this came to me fully, I lost my head, and although I industriously flourished my arms and made strange grimaces, that did not help me out.

Next day there were notices in the newspapers saying that a young artist by the name of Chaliapine had sung "Russlan" very badly. Many other bitter truths were written about me. Thank goodness, that humiliation occurred at the very beginning of my career as a singer! It did me good by sobering me and compelling me to think seriously about myself and the profession I was engaged in. It stripped from me the impudence and excessive self-confidence with which I was infected.

A fresh rehearsal was appointed, and I was given the role of Russlan to sing once more. I sang rather better.

The three appearances were over. I was retained on the payroll of the theater, and various roles were entrusted to me.

These concerts, however, necessitated a clean white shirt on almost every occasion. I was receiving 200 roubles a month, but while engaged at the Panaevsky theater, I had signed every document that was put before me, and would even have signed my own death warrant without looking at it. Now I found myself pursued by various persons for recovery of all the debts incurred by the artists who co-operated in the Panaevsky partnership.

Thus, as soon as I joined the Imperial theater, summonses, warrants of execution, and other strictly legal documents simply poured into the box-office, addressed to me. It was sought to recover from me sums of 600 roubles, 716 roubles, 1,000 roubles, and finally even 5,000 roubles. As I did not go near the courts, being afraid of judicial institutions, the courts gave judgment in my absence, and always against me.

The management of the theater was obliged to deduct one-half of my salary to pay off these debts, and I received only 100 roubles a month. It was very hard to live on the money. Probably I should have continued for at least sixteen years paying off these debts, of which I knew nothing at all, if the well-known Petrograd lawyer, Mr. M. F. Wolkenstein, had not taken up the cudgels on my behalf. I gave him my power of attorney, and he won all my suits and thus freed me from the necessity of working for other people's benefit.

My situation at the theater went from bad to worse. If a member of the council of the theater proposed to entrust a role to me, a majority of votes rejected the proposal. To some extent I had merited that attitude by singing "Russlan" so badly. Still, it seems to me to be unjust. If I acted badly, then I ought to be taught to act better! But they taught me badly, too.

At the beginning of the next season I was given the role of Prince Vladimir in Serov's opera "Rognieda," and at rehearsals they were constantly telling me how Melnikoff had played the part. People showed me how Melnikoff walked when on the stage, and how he used his hands and arms, but evidently Melnikoff was not at all like me.

I felt that the personality which I attributed to Prince Vladimir could not be exhibited with the gestures and movements which the regisseur required of me. I had a number of unpleasant passages with Napravnik with regard to the music. I understood later on, however, that Napravnik was right.

Some three weeks after the commencement of the season, Tornaghi, a dancer of whom I had become quite fond during the summer in Moscow, arrived and did her best to persuade me to go to Moscow to join Mamontoff's company there. With many regrets I refused, but I soon fell a prey to such melancholy that I changed my mind and followed her back to Moscow.

Thus I found myself once more a member of Mamontoff's company. The first performance of "A Life for the Tsar" gave me much uneasiness, as I feared that I might fail to justify the confidence reposed in me by my colleagues, and the hopes of the entrepreneur.

Next day, however, the theatrical critic S. Kruglikoff, who enjoyed great repute at that time, wrote in his account of the performance:

"A very interesting artist has appeared at the Solodovnikoff theater. His performance of the role of Susanin was very new and original. The artist received much applause from an audience which, unfortunately, was not very numerous."

The comment had its effect. The audience was larger at every successive performance of "A Life for the Tsar."

I had to sing Mephistopheles in "Faust." I told Mamontoff that I was not satisfied with the role of Mephistopheles as I had hitherto played it, and that I imagined the role quite differently with a very different costume and make-up. I wished to depart from the theatrical tradition which prevailed.

"Please," said Mamontoff. "What, exactly, do you want to do?"

I explained my ideas to him. On the day of the performance I went early to the theater, spent a long time in making up, and in the end, felt that I had realized the effect I wanted.

When I went on to the stage I felt myself quite another man, and was conscious of greater freedom in my movements, and the possibility of greater force and beauty in my acting.

It seemed I was a success. The critic Kruglikoff wrote the next day:

"Yesterday's Mephistopheles, as played by Chaliapine, was perhaps not perfect, but it was at all events so interesting that henceforward I shall not fail to be present at any performance in which this artist takes part."

The tone of the criticism was serious, and in no way resembled the usual comments on theatrical performances.

Mamontoff told me:

"Fedenka, you may do whatever you wish in this theater! If you want costumes, say so, and you shall have them. If you wish a new opera to be staged, we will do it!"

Everything conspired to put me in holiday mood, and for the first time in my career I felt that I was free, strong, and able to overcome all difficulties.

Travel.

In the spring of 1897 I realized a dream I had long cherished. I went abroad.

At Warsaw, at once I noticed the sharp contrast with all that I had known in Russia.

At length I was in Paris! The bustle of the crowded terminal and its busy approaches fairly took my breath away.

After a month spent in Paris, I went to Dieppe, where my friends were studying with a woman singing teacher. There was not a room to place at my disposal. A good bed was set up for me in the attic, and altogether I was made very comfortable. The summer weather insured me against feeling cold.

My parting with the world "abroad" after some weeks of study, was even kindlier than my reception.

It was during the summer of 1898, while I was staying at Mme. Lubatovitch's summer villa, I married the ballerina Tornaghi at the little village church. After the wedding we held a ridiculous sort of banquet, sitting Turkish fashion on the floor on carpets and cushions, and frolicking like a lot of little children. There was nothing of all that is considered indispensable at weddings, no richly adorned table with a multitude of dainties, no eloquent toasts, only simplicity, a great quantity of field flowers, and a good deal of wine.

At six o'clock next morinng there was a fiendish uproar outside my window, caused by Mamontoff and a crowd of my friends playing on stove-lids and other ironware, tin buckets and ear-piercing whistles.

"Why are you dozing still?" shouted Mamontoff. "People don't come to the country to sleep. Get up, we are going to the woods for mushrooms."

And the concert re-commenced with howls, whistlings and deafening din. Rachmaninoff acted as conductor of this witches' festival.

The season began with rehearsals of "Boris Godounoff." I saw at once that my companions had an incorrect idea of their roles. The training appropriate to the school of opera which existed then and still exists today did not serve to meet the demands of works such as Moussorgsky's opera.

In the new products of opera like the works of Rimsky-Korsakov and specially Moussorgsky the old school of singing appeared—if I may use the expression—very shabbily dressed for the reason that the Russian operas prevented special problems to singers. The vocalizes and high C's that issued freely from tenor's throats were of very little importance in connection with these operas, the beauty of both text and music was so impressive that high C's and such traditional arias as "Di quella pira" seemed poverty stricken.

The day of the public performance arrived. After the success of "The Maid of Pskoff" I had become an extremely popular artist in Moscow. The public seemed more than willing to attend perormances in which I was to take part.

"Boris" met at first with a cold and languid reception. I was somewhat alarmed; but the hallucination scene produced a very strong impression and the opera ended in triumph.

It seemed strange to me that "Boris Godounoff" had not produced such an impression at previous performances; for the opera is written in a very powerful and beautiful style, worthy even of Shakespeare. At succeeding performances the public was more sensitive to the music, and yielded to its beauties from the very first act.

What a Scramble When th

Two Beauties, a Bet, One Practical Joker —and In Wafted Twenty Startled Ex-Wives on Their Surprised Ex-Hubbies!

LONDON.

AMERICANS have long been accused of having too much respect for nobility, of standing awe stricken in the presence of titles. On the other hand, it has been considered axiomatic that the British have no sense of humor. But the fallacy of these two beliefs was proved here recently when twenty divorced peers were tricked, by an American actress and an English practical joker, into dining with their twenty former wives.

Sir Michael Bruce Entertained the Divorcees Who Met Their Titled "Exes" at Victor's. He Is Shown Here With His First Wife, Miss Doreen Dalziel Greenwell.

In spite of furious attempts to hush up the affair, details of the discomfiture of the forty nationally and internationally famous celebrities are beginning to leak out, and smarter London is chuckling.

The peers were herded together as the result of a bet between Fay Marbe and Tallulah Bankhead, two American actresses. A British practical joker, Lord Kinnoull, combined this party with one another humorously inclined Englishman, Sir Michael Bruce, had made up of the peers' divorced wives.

So tense was the atmosphere when the two parties met that the diplomatic owner of Victor's Club, fearing scandal, refused admittance to the Duke and Duchess of York, who arrived unexpectedly. The emotional reactions of the twenty divorced couples ranged from frigidity to hysterical gaiety, from squabbling and renewed bickering to love-making and reconciliation.

Fay Marbe was indirectly responsible for it all. One evening she was discussing whether the English aristocracy really approved of divorce. Tallulah Bankhead thought they didn't. "What'll you bet?" asked Fay, turning on her smile which is insured for $250,000. Tallulah said she would bet a platinum cigarette case studded with diamonds.

Fay, to win the cigarette case, planned a party. She hunted through "Burke's Peerage" and "Debrett" and invited divorced men only. The night of the party the merriest table at the Cafe de Paris, the favorite rendezvous of the Prince of Wales, was the one at which Fay presided.

Fay Marbe, American Actress, Was Indirectly Responsible for the Matrimonial Scramble.

She was the only woman present, and, when the twenty divorced peers learned why they had been invited, they laughed. Tallulah, who also was dining at the Cafe de Paris, saw the happy party and strolled over to greet Fay. Raising a glass of champagne, she said, "You win!"

"Great Scott! I thought she invited me because she liked me, and now I find it was only to help her win a bet!" groaned the Earl of Hardwicke, in mock despair. At that moment Lord Cheylesmore, whose divorce was marked by sensational features which electrified London a few months ago, came over and asked why he had not been invited. "I certainly belong here," he exclaimed, taking a seat.

His Highness the Rajah of Sarawak approached the table. "You are not divorced!" cried someone, and Fay's guests rose in a body and shooed him away.

About an hour later Fay was summoned to the telephone. It was the Earl of Kinnoull calling. He protested that he had been divorced and should have been invited. Fay was apologetic.

"Then bring them all over to Victor's," urged the Earl. "There's a jolly crowd coming here."

The Earl failed to say that the jolly crowd would consist of the former wives of the men in Fay's party. So the twenty peers were shepherded into taxis and the merry procession headed for Victor's on Grafton street. Fay, enthused by the success of her plans, did not stop to think that a practical joke was being played on her guests.

The combining of the two parties is blamed on the Earl of Kinnoull. In some way he had learned what was going on at both places. After calling Fay and telling her to meet him at Victor's with her twenty peers, he called Sir Michael Bruce and told Sir Bruce to meet him at Victor's with the twenty former wives of the peers. "There's a jolly crowd at Victor's," he said.

Fay and her guests arrived first, hilarious and happy. They were led into the already crowded supper room by Victor himself. Victor was trying to quiet them down when he was told that another party had arrived to join this one, so he hastened out to greet the newcomers.

He was appalled when he recognized in the superbly gowned and bejeweled women of the second party the former wives of the party he had just finished seating. He begged a moment's conversation with Sir Michael. "As long as you like after supper, Victor, old boy, but Lord Kinnoull is waiting for me now," said Sir Michael airily, leading his guests up the stairs.

There was a petrified silence when Lord Kinnoull arose to greet the ladies whose ex-husbands he had destined to be their supper partners. A lifelong training in "good form" alone prevented an unrestrained scene. The noble ladies controlled their emotions and selected their seats near or far from their erstwhile mates, as they felt inclined.

The strain became so acute that the Honorable William Arthur de la Poer

Horsley- Beresford, once the husband of Florence Millar, and only just divorced from his second wife, Laura, couldn't stand it. He rose to leave. At the same instant his ex-wife sprang up with similar intention. They met at the door, bowed, smiled, and the Honorable William politely offered his arm. Seeing the humor of the situation, a reconciliation had been made.

But the situation was becoming increasingly tense with those remaining. Throughout the room a feeling of impending social disaster spread. Here and there the arguments which led to the divorce court were being resumed or ignored by a forced an unnatural gaiety.

It was the ingenious Victor who at last hit upon a plan to separate the ex-spouses. He telephoned frantically to various cabaret artists and asked them to come at once. Then he hastened back to the supper room. Here he found things even more critical than he expected. Several couples had apparently smoothed over their difficulties and were chatting amiably, but the others had reached the stage of sitting bolt upright, silent and dignified, ignoring one another's proximity.

The cabaret artists arrived. Victor arranged separate rooms. "Miss Fay Marbe," he announced, "has kindly arranged a special entertainment for her own particular guests. Sir Michael Bruce has also made preparations for a private performance to be given for the ladies he has brought here."

Nobody looked more surprised than Fay and Sir Michael. Each, however, felt an enormous relief at the thought of ending the melodramatic farce which the party had become. Disentangling their guests, Fay led the men and Sir Michael the women into separate rooms.

Victor had saved the day. But, before the cabaret artists arrived, he was summoned to the door to greet the Duke and Duchess of York. "I'm sorry," he said to them, even though any club would have been honored by their presence, "but all the tables are taken." Victor did not wish to involve the Duke and Duchess in a social scandal.

The sensational debacle of Fay's stunt is the nine-day wonder of London society. That the British can take a joke, even a practical one, is shown by the ...umber of reconciliations made at the party. Three of the divorced couples, falling into the spirit of the occasion, became friendly again. It is rumored that one of these couples will re-wed.

"There's such a thing as being too successful," confided Fay Marbe, discussing the dinner. "That was what was the matter with my stunt. I wanted to win my wager, but I didn't mean to do anything more than that. I hope my next party won't make me cry, for I came ho... in tears from the strain of this o...

Lord Cheylesmore Joined Fay Marbe's Party Because Lady Cheylesmore Had Just Been Awarded a Temporary Divorce.

But indications are that Fay's tears were soon dried. This young American actress has long been known for her pranks among London's peerage, and it is whispered that she takes no little pride in her reputation. Furthered as her scheme was by Lord Kinnoull, who is in the limelight now by his recently announced engagement, her position is the envy of many other American girls.

MY LADY FAR AWAY

INSTALLMENT VII.

"Sambio!"

WELL, yes," allowed Hugh, who had been shying at the word. Privately he thought it had a fine rolling sound; thought, as others in like cases have done, that it was, on the whole, a better word than viscount or earl. "I know we'll both have to do our best. And I know, honeybird, that you'll back me up all you can. I shall certainly have the prettiest peeress in the kingdom." This he added to please her. He was already developing the virgin shyness toward any mention of his title that marks the soon to be made peer.

"Do you really think so?" asked Martha with narrowed eyes.

"What? That you're the—"

"That you will have the prettiest peeress——" She broke off into a sudden, inexplicable fit of laughter. "Dear old Hugh," she finished, suddenly picking up her gravity again as she might have picked up a dropped ball. "Let's go ashore, now we're actually moored to an island"—for while they were talking the Lahara had been securely tied up to the overhanging trees—"and see what is to be seen."

"Nothing, except mud and mangroves and a sago palm or so."

"But me, I love mangroves and sagos; they're so bizarre. If you won't go I shall go alone."

"Of course I'll go. How long do you want to stay? Ready here with that gangway; sling it over. Take my hand; that's it. Now what do you see to admire?"

He knew it as well as she did. He knew that the exquisite little isle, fresh and green as a basket of fern, feathered with the giant plumes of sago, and lit by flames of amethyst and ice white orchid bloom, was a veritable enchanted garden; that the chain of neighboring islets, diminishing into distance, each paler, bluer, more delicately transparent than the last, almost unbearably beckoned ine, lured one on and on—whither? He, a Royden of the wild Roydens, the exploring race, knew that charm, that call. But he was bent on crushing it in himself and in others.

"There's nothing," he said, "but sago and mud."

There was a little mud, on the hither side. Martha insisted on scrambling round the edge of the islet to the opposite shore, if shore that could be called, which was merely a maze of knitted mangrove roots.

"No one could say it's muddy here," she said. "Here's a perfect throne for me—Queen of the Cannibal Islands—in this tree." There was a tangle of roots, aerial and earthy, at one point of the mangrove maze, that indeed had shaped itself something like a high carved seat. "I shall sit here and watch the sun set. I want to be alone—I want to think. How can you hear yourself think," she demanded impatiently, "on the boat, with people at your elbows and down your pockets all day long?"

Hugh could understand this. He had felt the same himself more than once—had found, as others have, that it is impossible to travel on a little yacht without yearning at times for the unattainable boon of solitude.

"I shall come for you in a quarter of an hour," he warned her. "Sit and say pretty poetry to yourself as long as that; it ought to be enough."

Martha had ceased to think. Her little plans, her ambitions, her secrets, moling deviously underground, were all for the moment forgotten. A white blur against the dusk of the mangroves, she was melted in spirit, her body seemed already to have melted, into the huge, sinister landscape that did not want her, did not trouble about her, had no use for her, or for any human creature. She knew the place was full of dangers, open and concealed. She did not fear them; if she thought of them at all it was to sense them as an opium eater senses dreamily the clutch of sinful, sweet delights, in that last moment before all feeling goes. Hypnotism? That was not the name for it. Let it be nameless. She loved it; it was new honey on her lips. Was it this honey that Smith, the hermit, had found? That others had found in other wild places the whole world over? No matter; it would not hold her. Nothing held Martha, libertine to the winds of the world, eater of life——

Of a sudden she woke from that nameless state of mind, not as one wakes from sleep, but with a wrench, a jar. What was coming? Who had invaded her solitude?

Martha was on the far side of the island; it was almost dark. Hugh would be back in a minute—but this was not Hugh. It was some one coming in a canoe, slipping out from behind the nearest islet, gliding so close inshore, moving so softly in the all but dark that she could scarce believe it real. Was it Antares? She flamed with sudden anger. Antares had no right to——

No; whatever that gliding thing might be, it was not any one from the island. The figure seemed almost naked. It could not be Antares.

What was it? It had—now that one saw it closer—a few strands of grass about the waist. It paddled swiftly, noiselessly, nearer and nearer to her seat.

"Why," she thought, staring hard—for the dusk was growing thicker every moment—"it's one of those native girls, out all alone. What can she be up to? Heavens, I wish I knew some of their wretched language."

But she could think of nothing save the great Fly river talisman, "Sambio!"—the peace word that has been used by explorers ever since D'Alberti's day, and may be used for another half century before any one finds out its exact meaning. She ventured it, called softly, "Sambio, sambio!" The ghostly creature heard, turned her canoe in among the mangrove roots and stood there, balancing it with her thin bare legs, as a man balances a bicycle. She was only a shadow against the fainting sunset red; a mysterious thing mysteriously clad in a nun-like veil that covered her head and shoulders and left her long breasts, her loins, emerging from the scanty grasses, bare. No features were visible; only the white of eyes and teeth showed out, appearing and disappearing, as she uncertainly turned her head. She seemed as little human, as far removed in her wild savagery, from Martha, heiress of a thousand ages, as were the armored river turtles and the sinister frilled lizards in the trees.

Martha was inflamed with curiosity, with a desire to plumb the depth, cross the gulf. "Sambio," she said again, and beckoned, at the same time pulling a gold slave bangle from her arm and holding it forth. The woman saw its glitter; she had no remotest dream of its value, but metal of any kind, to the far inland lake people, is precious as diamonds and rubies to civilized folk. She gasped, swung her canoe nearer, and quickly snatched.

Martha was quicker still; as the woman reached out, she jumped into the canoe. It rolled, all but upsetting. She dropped to her knees, holding to both of the low gunwales. "Sambio," she said again, and handed over the bracelet. The woman seized it, hid it away, turned her head over one shoulder, and seemed for a moment to listen and look into the dusk. Then, with a low cry, she backed out, and with Martha aboard, went flying like a water duck through the strait between the islands.

When Hugh, smoking a cigar, came slowly around to the outerside of the islet two minutes later there was a wild lake goose swimming swiftly, as if alarmed, across the crimson water; there was a low moon, sickle shaped, showing among the tangled mangrove trees; there was the empty seat where a little while ago he had left Martha sitting. Nothing more.

* * * *

In the house of Smith upon the island it was very quiet. Lamps of old native pattern, fed by bush oils, hung on the wall, shedding a pale luster over the wide spaces of the room. Antares was not to be seen. Antares' father, a stately, somewhat formidable figure, was seated under the lamps, quietly reading. Now and then boobooks called outside; once a far off alligator raised a long, snarling bellow and held it on and on till one would have thought the creature's iron throat must split. The hideous sound upturned and died at last. Smith took no apparent notice of its beginning or end. He had heard a thousand alligators call; he had chased and speared many in their own element, and bore scars from not a few such encounters. The brutes were nothing to him; he knew them and did not fear them.

Nevertheless that long cry had broken his attention to the book. He closed it, stretched a little, and walked over to the doorway to drink the fresh night air. They were not drumming in the village tonight; they were amazingly quiet. No sound came over the far tops of the forest that cut off Smith and his home from the islet occupied by the native tribe. If the village was quiet, however, another village, miles away, was awake. Smith could hear it; the drumming was like the sound of one's own pulse, half felt, half heard in the silence of sleepless nights.

He listened to it, idly at first, then with closer attention. He laid his book down. "Odd," he said. "Damned odd."

Antares slipped out from some inner room and joined him. He was standing by the elder man, lips parted, eyes strained into the dusk. "Read it for me, father," he begged breathing quickly.

Smith listened with intentness. "Bad news," he said.

"Bad news?" Antares grew white beneath his tan. "Has anything happened to——"

"Nothing's happened to any one. It's worse than that—on the whole. A government boat is coming up the river."

The youth was silent. Presently he said, looking away from the blue-green, piercing eyes of the man who called himself Smith, "You don't like that?"

"What has come to you that you should ask such a question? Why do you suppose I want my life, and your life, torn to pieces? We always knew how it would be, if we were found by some cursed curiosity mongering magistrate." Smith spoke sharply, almost with violence. But Antares, watching him, seemed to discount his anger.

"We've been found already, father." The voice of the youth had a curious ring of satisfaction. Smith did not seem to notice it.

"They would have gone," he said. "Gone forever and ever—would have let us—let me—forget." The man's great voice, organ pipe to Antares' light fluting, rolled under the house roof. "But now this magistrate comes along, and they will want me to make an affidavit before him that I'm not the man they're looking for, and he'll stay on and pry into everything in the lake country, and—and——"

"What?" Antares was kneeling on the floor, one arm thrown over the knees of his father. Antares' dark eyes, suddenly ablaze, seemed to find reflections in the light glance of Smith, commonly as shining, as cold, as arctic seas, yet on this evening lit with unwonted fire.

"Father," he said, "tell me quickly—quickly—what's going to happen, Father, you're afraid, too."

"Too?" said Smith, suddenly rising to his feet and casting off in the act Antares' clinging arm. "What are you afraid of? What is it to you if she marries him today?"

The fiery and unchecked spirit of the youth leaped out. "It's just the same," he answered wildly. "And you know it is—you know!"

"If that's so, all I can say is, God help us both!" replied the man who was called Smith.

"You have always told me," said Antares, "that there isn't any God—so I suppose there isn't any help."

They stared at each other, each feeling as if a stranger stood before him. The night was hot; no wind came through the wide open doorways. Antares' face was beaded with pale sweat that sharpened the lines of his features and made darker the shadowy touches, nature's kohol, outlining his brilliant eyes. He looked suddenly older, harder. Smith seemed as one struck down, or about to be struck down, by island fever; he had the strange shining of the eye, the patched red flush, the shaking hand that mark the onset of that feared disease. Yet he was fever proof, and Antares knew it.

"I suppose," said the youth with sudden bitterness,' "this is what you wanted to save me from."

"You and myself, Antares."

"Don't call me that name—I hate it!"

The older man looked at him. "I understand," he said, "but the other must rest a while yet."

"Till when?"

"Till they go again. They will go, and it will all be as it has been." He spoke heavily, without conviction.

"It will never be the same," cried Antares in a high, tortured voice. Smith made no reply. He had begun to listen again. He held up his hand for silence.

"Yes," he said presently, letting his immense bare arm fall on his tunic. "It's the magistrate of the district and a boatload of police. They will be here tonight; they have entered the lake. If Royden likes," he went on, speaking more to himself than to Antares, "the magistrate can marry them now, any day—the six months are—"

"Listen," said Antares, coming close up to his father and seizing hold of Smith's tunic. "If she marries him, I will take the red and black flowers that give sleep, and I will—I will——"

The words swooned upon his lips. There were footsteps on the path outside the house; hurried footsteps, crashing through the flowers, stumbling in the darkness, footsteps that spelled disaster. . . . The face of Hugh Royden in the doorway, white as wintry dawn. The voice of Royden, saying in accents deliberately kept level, painfully bridled into sanity, "Smith, come at once; she's lost."

A Blue Ribbon Serial By Beatrice Grimshaw

Nobody asked who was to how. There was but one person one way.

The old pioneer's instinct—to act first and talk afterward, if talk there was to be—stirred the man called Smith into instant doing. He reached a six foot bow from the wall, took a bundle of arrows in his hand, slung round his neck a string bag containing native bread, and was ready. Then a thought, sudden, stunning, checked him.

"We can't both go," he said.

"The hell we can't! Do you mean to——"

"There's Antares."

"Give him a bow and arrows—or—stay, I'll fit him out with a spare rifle—and let him come, too. Time he was broken to man's work."

Antares, backing slowly away, with eyes two wide blots of horror, looked at the men and put his hands behind him.

"Antares can't go," said Smith sharply.

Royden, disregarding him, walked straight up to the boy. He was filled with a tumult of half-comprehended emotion. This creature who might have been a son of his; in whose likeness he could have wished any future son of his to be made—this lad who had somehow won his heart, made him long to be proud of him—was he to be set down as a milksop and a coward? "Sixteen, is he?" thought Hugh, a kind of strange fury in his heart. "Not so far from a man that he can't do a man's work tonight, and, by God, he shall!" From his own belt he plucked a heavy Colt .45 and a hunting knife with cunning, crooked blade. He held them out to Antares. "There's a woman to save," he said. "Blood these for her before morning and I'll count you a man."

Covering his eyes with his hands, Antares sank to the floor.

Hugh had almost struck him with his foot. He held back with a strong effort and turned abruptly round to Smith.

The elder man was before him. It seemed as if he feared and avoided any unnecessary talk. "Welch is coming," he said. "We can leave him."

"How do you know? Got your dashed wireless working?"

"No," answered Smith; then, strangely, "No, God help me. I'll never have it any more. No; but I can hear his canoe. He must have come along just after you. We can leave Welch."

"Damn Welch; he's no business to leave the yacht unguarded."

"He won't have. The magistrate will be alongside her by now."

"The how much?"

"Magistrate and ten police in a whale-boat."

"Got your wireless going again, have you?"

"Let my wireless alone," said Smith, suddenly without apparent effort raising his voice to a resounding bellow. "If we hadn't other business to attend to——"

"We have. What about the police?"

"The native drums have got it. They said the whaleboat was just arriving. Welch will have given over the yacht and come on here."

"Why not have come in the Lahara?"

"At night and among all those sand banks? There's not a soul on the lakes would dare to move her but I'll take her. I'll take her if I sink her and drown the lot of you. There's Welch now, coming up the track; be here in a minute. Now tell me, sharp, where did you last see Mrs. Lyle?"

Hugh, scarcely used to such peremptory address, found himself, nevertheless, answering obediently. One side of his mind was staggering under the impact of a new, amazing idea, born of Smith's shaken look. The other kept tight hold of actualities and remembered that minutes here and now were gold. Antares had "slunk away somewhere"—so Royden phrased it to himself. Welch, rather wet and muddy, was coming in at the door, full of news. "There's the magistrate, Hopper," he began, "and ten police——"

"At the Lahara," broke in Smith. "I'll take her out for you in twenty minutes from now. Welch, will you, like the best fellow in the world, stop here and look after the place and Antares?"

Hugh had expected Welch to protest. The wild beast tamer did nothing of the kind. He merely nodded his head in his own slow, quiet way, and took a seat.

"Well, of all the——" Hugh was beginning, and then he recollected that it was no time for talking. No time for wondering over anything, speculating as to what anything might mean. The only thing that he and the other men had to do was to find, and—if that might be—to save Martha Lyle.

They went down the path and over the tree barrier at a pace that almost winded him. Hugh Royden, good man in a fight, enduring runner, race rider daring and wise, was a poor hand at this business of climbing trees in a hurry and the dark. One had to pay for bulk and weight.

The man called Smith got ahead of him, wouldn't stop, shouted for him almost rudely when he had the canoe ready, rocking in pale starlight, while Hugh was still making up time along the open stretch of sand. The man called Smith, when they had started, set such a pace with his paddle that Hugh couldn't keep it and let the canoe slew round. Then he cursed Royden. Then Royden, sweating and lashing along, cursed him back and asked him, between great gulps of breath, what he meant, anyhow, taking it like that; Mrs. Lyle was no property of his. Then Smith, surprisingly, shouted out that she was no man's wife, and by heaven, if he found he, he would have her. And then, before Royden had time to drop his paddle and upset the expedition and the canoe together, the long, lithe craft struck the counter of the yacht and some one aboard called out in military tines, "Here, here, what's the row about? Come aboard; it's no time for quarreling."

They came aboard and fell silent, realizing that in truth this time was not one for the wreaking of private enmities. This time was for the saving of a woman from the wages of her own folly; it might be from a fate far worse than death.

No more golden minutes were wasted. The magistrate had up anchored while the canoe was approaching. The half caste engineer was making his engine turn over before the boys had hauled the gangway up. On the upper deck that passed for bridge the man called Smith, hands on wheel and eyes alternately glancing at the compass and training out into starfilled dark, steered and conned the Lahara on her perilous journey.

* * * *

Welch, in the bungalow room, listened and looked and smelled and read the darkness; such things had been his books during all his life. Also he waited. He had been waiting now for a long time—ever since Antares, walking slowly, with face hidden in hands, had gone away into the inner room.

That had been just as the rescue party was preparing to start. They must have been gone a long time now, thought Welch, sitting quietly in his chair, not smoking, not reading, just exercising the patience that had so often served him with creatures even more wild and shy than this Antares. He was prepared to wait, if necessary, all the night. But he did not think it would be necessary; did not think, in fact, that it was needful now to wait any longer. Antares had been hidden away in that inner room for a couple of hours or more. There had been sounds once or twice—sounds faint yet distressful. Welch had nodded quietly, "A little time—a little time," he had said to himself. Since a good while the sounds had ceased.

He bent forward, listened keenly for a minute or two, and then, looking towards the inner room, said quietly, "Antares!"

There was no answer.

"Antares, come out!" he called, using the soft, persuasive voice that he kept for his shyest woodland creatures.

Antares did not come.

Welch got up and went over to the door of the room. It was dark; no sound came from within.

"Antares," he said for the third time, raising his voice a little and speaking very clearly, "Stella! Come out."

There was a sudden, half stifled cry, and out of the dark room, blinking at the lights of the sitting room like some startled captured bird, Stella came.

"That's it," said Welch, soothingly. "Sit down. Yes, of course I know, Stella. I've known for a long time. No," as she opened her lips, "nobody else knows, I think. Unless perhaps Mrs. Lyle——"

"I would like to poison her," said the girl, words tumbling over one another. "She—she doesn't care—for him."

"For her fiance? No, maybe not very much. But she cares to be Lady Royden."

"I don't understand about that," slowly answered the slim, tanned and golden figure in the chair. "But—if she had lain a century dead, she wouldn't know when he walked over her; heart—if she has one, wouldn't break into flowers."

He had brought her out of the dark into the light; that was the first thing. He had got her to endure speech, to listen if not to heed what he said. That was next. Now to leave her quiet a little longer . . . use the language of his hard, scarred, kindly hand, smoothing the gold head (hot, burning hot under his hand it felt; yes, they were always so), and by and by, to lead her, quiet, soothed, back to her normal self. . . .

Stella Antares—yes, the name fitted; fitted all that he knew and guessed about the strange father and yet stranger child. "If I had an almanac of nineteen-six or thereabout," he thought, "I reckon I could prove it, all right." He smoothed the hair on the back of Stella's head. The short, bright locks were wonderfully thick; they sprang beneath his hand like feathers on a bird's breast. She did not seem to know at first that he was touching her, but by and by she writhed herself just a little closer to those magnetic fingers, and from her very heart there burst a long rending sigh.

"That's done it," thought the tamer of wild things.

"Now, Stella," he said, "it's time, surely, that you showed me your face. Sit up." There was a slight note of authority in his voice, that he was accustomed to use with his prisoners, about this stage. Usually they responded. Stella Antares did.

In one supple movement she raised herself, sat erect, and, parting the roughened hair with both hands from her face, looked straight at Welch.

"That's better," he said. "Now tell me why you wanted to kill yourself just now."

"I don't know how you——"

"O, that doesn't matter. Why did you—poor little thing?"

Wilder creatures than she had answered to that tone. "I wanted to," she answered instantly, "because he pushed me away and almost kicked me."

"O, no, no! Never! Royden wouldn't. Why should he do such a thing?" Welch had seen the whole incident, but he wanted her version. There were points he did not quite understand. The difference between a lad and a girl—yes—that one comprehended; but Stella Antares was so vivid, so plucky, such a little soldier—he would scarce have supposed—

"I will tell you," she said, running her words out so rapidly that they tumbled over one another. "It was—my mother."

"Your what?" He had not expected that—whatever he had looked for.

"Mother. . . . She died when I was born. She died because she had strayed into the village and seen terrible things—Killing—that day. Father would never let her leave the island. But she took a wild fancy—you know——"

Welch nodded, supposing, justly enough, that Stella had seen enough of the village women at their childbearing to understand the freaks and longings that at times beset a mother soon-to-be.

"She came back with blood on her dress. She was nearly mad. That night I was born, too soon, and she died."

"Yes?"

"I think it was stamped upon me—the hatred of killing. I can't fish. I can't shoot at anything alive. If the girls are killing a fowl I go away and hide. It's not fear of blood; when father hurt his arm I helped him with it, and I often dress wounds for the people. But—to kill anything." She sank a little lower, where she sat cross legged on the floor; dropped her face in her hands.

"He shouldn't have looked at me so—spoken—almost struck——" she blazed suddenly, lifting her face.

"Yes, yes," answered Welch soothingly, seeing that the wild, furious fit was threatening once more. "Yes, my dear. . . . But, Stella, you forget; he thought you were a boy."

"And if he did," she said with a splendid irrelevance, "didn't father make me swear on"—she hesitated, then brought the word out full throat—"on my virtue!—which I'd die for—that I would let myself be called Antares and never tell any one I was not a boy all the time—those people—stayed? He began it long ago—when I was a little child. I think he wanted to bring me up as a boy, so that no one should ever know I was not. But you can't deceive the natives; they are too clever. They all knew soon. Then father cut my hair and took me up to the village with himself; I remember I was very tiny, and I had a little bow in my hands, and a bundle of arrows, and I wore head feathers like a man. And my father brought me to the chief house. He told the fighting men that this was his son and no one should ever dare say otherwise. And they laughed—I can hear them yet!—like alligators bellowing. Then they all shouted together and said 'Yes.' For they think a great deal of him, you know; they think he is a great sorcerer. . . . He

the concerto she acquitted herself really creditably; and as for the rest —well, it was all familiar to her; the very shadings and intershadings of it had come to be a part of her—via Uncle Josef.

The Grieg Procession was the last number. When she reached the end of the Chopin Waltz which preceded it, her fingers were stiff and numb with anticipation.

As she rose to acknowledge the applause after the Waltz, her attention was suddenly caught by a face in the audience—a boyish face, a stranger's. . . . For no reason at all, he disturbed her. She could see him distinctly enough—too distinctly, even to a pencil in his hand and a pad of paper on his knee. She tried to reassure herself: "Just another critic. One I've never happened to notice before. Nothing to get upset about. I'm ridiculous."

She sat down again slowly, arranging the skirt of her rose-colored dress with unnecessarily prolonged care. Ridiculous—but hideous — this inward, quaking fright. She felt that she could not, could not, begin. At last the skirt was adjusted, and she was obliged to raise her hands.

The first three pages were accomplished without mishap. And then—the passage—the passage, was upon her.

"Do your best! Do your best!
Don't let anything ever keep you from——"

What were the next words? What could they be, and still not spoil the rhythm? She stumbled; stopped.

There was a death-like stillness. Then the audience drew in its breath, shifted its position—a gasp and a flutter of surprise.

With a deprecatory, apologetic little smile, Bess shook her head. Her impulse was to run sobbing from the stage. But she set her teeth and took up the music where she had faltered.

This time she got through it, all of it. But when it was over she felt weak and ill. It was an effort, even, to stand up and bow.

Standing there with one hand on the piano, inclining her head, biting her lips to keep them from trembling, she found herself looking down at the top of the young critic's head. She could no longer see his face. He was bending over his pad, writing——

In the taxi on the way home, she said timidly to Tully, "Was it—very dreadful?"

"Dreadful? No. It was the same as always—great." His voice was quite sincere, but still moody.

She saw that she had been right in anticipating a siege with him. Nevertheless, she had to find out. "But —the mistake, Tully. Didn't you hear——?"

"That wasn't anything .You went right on. Don't worry. But don't let's talk. I'm tired."

* * * *

It was her custom, on the mornings after her concerts, to stay in bed for breakfast. Invariably she was too worn out to leave her room until nearly noon.

This morning the entire household awakened, apparently, in the same frame of mind in which it had gone to bed. Everybody was as troublesome and as out of sorts as possible —especially Tully.

He dressed in morose silence, while she lay with her eyes closed, thinking with dread of the period of reconstruction which must now be enforced throughout the house.

When Tully was dressed, he went into the outer hall, came back with the morning papers, slammed them down on her bed. "Shall I bring in your tray?"

"No. I'm not hungry."

He pointed at the papers. "There's food for your vanity, at any rate."

Flushing, she murmured, "Tully——"

But he had already disappeared. She heard his chair scrape in the dining room on the other side of the bedroom wall.

Listlessly she opened the top paper and turned to the music notes. There it was—her "food." (How unfair of him. He knew perfectly well that she was the last one in the world to depend upon such nourishment.) ". . . Pupil and niece of Josef Volnar . . . Brilliant performance . . . Has inherited his genius . . . "The regular things. The things they always said. She was afraid, suddenly, that she was going to cry. And in the name of heaven, what for? What about? Surely, appreciation was nothing to cry over.

She opened another. The same story, somewhat expanded. And another and another. And the Troy papers. All the same—all flattering, enthusiastic, eulogistic. Not one of them mentioned the fiasco of the Procession. It was as if they had combined in a loyal and mutual agreement to disregard it. Well, she ought to be thankful for that, certainly.

At the bottom of the pile was the Albany Eagle. Without interest, she flipped over the pages.

"MME. BRADLEY PLAYS AT CONCERT HALL.

A Mediocre Performance."

She winked her eyes rapidly and looked again. Yes; that was what it said. "A Mediocre Performance." Sitting up straight in bed, she held the sheet closer.

"The piano recital at Concert hall, given last night by Mme. Elizabeth Volnar Bradley, was distinctly and amazingly disappointing—at least to one hearing Mme. Bradley for the first time. It brought up a number of unexpected and not uninteresting questions. For instance: Why have her limitations been so long and so collectively ignored by the critic clan? Why has a trusting public been kept so consistently in the dark? Why all this critical secrecy, this concerted shielding of her—which springs perhaps from a sort of local loyalty, but is certainly ill advised?

"There may be one answer that will cover everything—her uncle. Josef Volnar is great; there is no question whatsoever concerning that. It is possible, then, that the clan en masse has again been blinded by love, as it were? And deafened into the bargain? Has it been swayed by this love into a sentimental belief that 'only good can come out of Volnar?' That may very well be the answer. At any rate, it is the kindest one.

"As the matter appears, however, to this particular clansman, Mme. Bradley is not great. She is hardly above the average. True, she possesses a certain talent of a purely mechanical order, the sort of talent which sometimes dazzles by its rapidity of action and so befogs judgment. With her, technique's the thing. But there it ends. Subtleties of expression, niceties of nuance, even interpretation itself, degenerate—all—into mechanics. One feels as if she were playing from hearsay. Any personal passion for music as such, any individual conception of its underlying meaning, seem to be unbelievably absent in her. Listening, one finds oneself suspecting that her heart is anywhere but in what she is endeavoring to do.

"This suspicion became a conviction during the final number on last night's program—the Grieg Bridal Procession. Here, even mechanics failed. She came to a full stop in the very middle of the most inspiring passage; she faltered through to the end with obvious uncertainty. Consequently, we repeat—she is not great. And once more, inescapably, we speculate upon the motives of the clan. What lies at the bottom of their silence? Love-blindness? Or chivalry Or—what?"

Bess leaned back against the pillows. She was breathing unevenly. Her cheeks were crimson.

When Tully came in after breakfast to hurl his good-by at her, she held out the paper. "Read this."

"I'm in a hurry. I'll read it tonight."

"No—now. Please, Tully, read it now."

"I can't, Bess. I'm late. Here, give it to me. I'll read it on the trolley."

After the front door had closed behind him, she lay for a long time quiet, staring at the shaded window.

Against all precedent, he came to lunch that day.

Bess was up, moving briskly about the living room, a feather duster in her hand.

Not quite sure of his reception, he halted in the doorway. "Bess, old girl—that damned paper . . . I came home especially to—it's disgusting. It's the limit." His sullenness had completely vanished. Outraged sympathy was in his voice. "I never read —I never saw—My God, the man must have been tight. Such a pack of lies——"

Bess laid the duster on the piano and came close to him, looking up into his face with serene eyes. "They are not lies, Tully. They are the truth. Every single blessed word is the truth."

"The truth?" He stared. "I don't know what you're talking about. All that drivel—that rotten, spiteful, drunken drivel——"

"It isn't drivel, darling, and it isn't the least bit spiteful. It's inspired. Whoever he is, he's seen through me, and Uncle Josef, and everybody. He's shown things up as they are—shown me up. I am mediocre. And I'm glad to know it."

"Bess! You——"

"No wait. I am. For the first time since Uncle Josef came to America, I'm seeing this thing straight. I never understood before what the matter was. I only knew I was miserable. I used to wonder why I could not seem to get any satisfaction or thrill out of my work, the way other people do. He's told me why. I'm mediocre. I haven't got the real stuff. Well, I'm glad I haven't!"

Bewildered, stupefied, Tully dropped down on the arm of a chair. "But —Bess—I swear I don't know what you're driving at. Your work—I thought it was all-in-all to you."

"So did I, in a way. But at the same time, I knew something must be wrong somewhere. He's discovered it, that's all. And he's dead right. He's right about another thing, too—about people thinking I must be wonderful, because of Uncle Josef. Tully,"—her tone grew speculative—"I wonder what Uncle Josef thought . . . He must have known, all along. He couldn't help but know. And yet he's gone on—pushing me, and shoving me, and—and taking my money—— Well, it doesn't really make much difference, now. For he isn't going to push me any farther. Not one half an inch."

"But—but—Bess——"

She laughed at the expression on his face. "No, nor one quarter of an inch, either. Tully—I'm through. And I can't tell you what a relief it is. Why in the world should I go on? The concert field is simply all cluttered up with half-way performers. I don't want to be one of them. And yet, if I should go on for years and years, I'd never be anything else. Therefore—I stop. Right where I am."

"God!" echoed Tully, blankly.

"Don't look so—so distracted, darling, I'm perfectly sane! I've worked it all out, this morning. . . . Listen, Tully, other winters, before I became an 'artist' (save that mark!) didn't everything go better around the house? Weren't the children pleasanter? And weren't the bills lower? And weren't we happier? All of us—much happier"

"We certainly were. Everything was slick. But——"

"But that's my talent, Tully. Don't you see? Inside, I'm Martha. All the rest—all the artist business, niece of the great Volnar, inherited genius—all that line, was simply wished on me from the outside."

"Lord, Bess, I'm in a whirl! Don't know whether I'm afoot or ahorseback! But if you really mean it—I believe you do, too, and I'm damned glad of it—what about your contracts then?"

"I've thought of that. Of course, I suppose I'll have to finish out this spring. And then I'll simply tell Uncle Josef and my manager that 'genius' has burnt out. If that doesn't do the trick, there's another solution. It's a little drastic, perhaps, but you and I've always agreed about big families. For goodness sake, what time is it, anyway? Lunch must have been ready for ages. Bridget'll be—— There's just one thing more. Do you remember my telling you about a silly rhyme I used to keep saying in that place in the Procession? A rhyme I couldn't finish? Well, I've thought of an end for it—just thought of it, before you came back. Listen——

"Do your best! Do your best!
Dont' let an-y-thing ever keep your from doing
What you your-self know is your best . . ."

The boss of the Albany Eagle had just reached the editorial offices. The knowledge that he was disgracefully late had not cooled his already bubbling temper.

Meeting young Marvin in the hall, he ordered him to forget lunch and proceed to the inner office.

There, in no uncertain terms, he gave voice to his own personal reaction to his new critic's comment upon Mme. Bradley.

"Good God!" he thundered. "What did you mean by turning in a thing like that? What did you mean by it, eh? What do you think this paper is, anyway—the Pagan Review? What do you thing this job is—a chance to be funny and smart-Alec?"

"No," returned Wallace, with spirit. "I thought it was a chance to be honest and use my critical judgment. I know something about music. I——"

"Your 'critical judgment! Yours! So you think your judgment's better, do you, than the judgment of all the men who've been hearing Mme. Bradley all winter? You think a young whippersnapper like you can step up and tell the others were to get off? You think you can model your stuff after the Pagan—destructible stuff, better-than-thou, all that sort of rot—paid them many things they like; armshell bracelets and pigs. They made a feast, and danced, and made me free of the men's chief house, and they called me a word that meant 'The White Prince.' They are curious people; after I'd been given rank as a man they seemed to think of me as if I'd been one, and at first when I was grown up they wouldn't allow the garden girls to come here. So father bought them with a bride price, and then they were supposed to be my property. And when they sent a present of food from the village it was always two men's pieces, not a man's and a woman's, as before. Do you see that drum in the corner? That's mine. The young men made it and brought it to me; they came in a canoe, and father gave them leave. It was when they go away into the forest alone for weeks to make a drum and be counted a man afterwards. So they brought that—it's a beauty—and gave it to me, and told father, 'Our young brother cannot go and make a drum for himself, so we have made it for him, lest he should feel disgraced.' And you see, with all this and that, I began to feel as if I were a man, not a girl; and it was easy when those people came to keep it up. But—after a while—something broke in my heart. And I could not feel like a man ever, ever, ever any more. When you have been a man it is so hard to be a woman again; you can't do anything in the same way as you used to—you can't even put your foot down on the ground with—with pride. A man should walk with pride—don't you think? But"—she hurried on without pausing for answer—"I lost all that. It went, I don't know how—"

"I do," thought the tamer of wild creatures, watching her.

"And I felt weak—weak! I never felt weak before. And when he came tonight wanting me to take arms and go and—kill'——she brought the word out with difficulty—"it seemed as if I was less than one of the little lizards that creep along the floor. I was not a woman, I was not a man, and I couldn't bear it, so I fell to the ground. Then he hated me and went."

"No, no," said Welch, his heart torn with compassion. "No one hates you. That is very interesting, Stella. And now I tell you what we're going to do," he went on, in the most commonplace voice he could muster, "I'm going to roost in your father's room and you're going off to yours, with a lamp, and you're going to sleep like a sensible girl who has nothing to worry about."

"Nothing?" she said, turning back for a moment to look at him as he crossed the floor to her room. Never save in the famous terrible portrait of Beatrice Cenci going to execution had he seen such a look on any woman's face. "Nothing?" . . . Some feminine instinct, that seemed to have survived despite her boyish training, checked her and closed her lips when she would have said more. She turned her face away and, carrying the lamp, went to her room.

Welch, seated on Smith's wide bed, with its covering of tappacloth and skins, thought deeply for a while. "So that explains it," he told himself. "I never could understand before how she, or any girl, could have taken in a man for as much as a day. But if the old devil with the paper chemise"—for so he irreverently designated Smith—"has trained her to think and feel herself a boy, she could keep it up—with a decent thickhead like Royden. Stella—a star—and 'Antares'—about the brightest one you'd casually notice in these latitudes, a night when you happened to be uncommonly busy . . . night she was born. . . . That Lyle woman guessed it pretty soon—and of course a man who studies the inferior animals like myself, didn't have much trouble. . . . It's as well the suffragists can't hear me; I should be treated as a crowd of secretary birds treat a cobra. . . ." He pulled off one sock. "Of course, when she fell in love with Royden's beef and brawn, it was all up with the pretty pretense. Now I wonder—I do wonder—if naughty Martie hadn't gone off with the natives, what would have come of all this?"

"As it is," he thought, blowing out the inconvenient native pattern lamp and swinging his legs on to the bed, "the balls have been knocked about all over the table, and there's no saying who is going to win this game.

"But I shouldn't object," he thought, as sleep began to steal over him and the vision of that red-gold head lying low on the floor, of his own scarred hand slowly, tenderly "gentling" it, floated before him in the dark—"I shouldn't object to be a winner myself."

George Sydney Hooper, resident magistrate of the southwestern division—a piece of Papua about as big as Wales—was somewhat aggrieved, it seemed, in that Mrs. Lyle should have been so ill-advised as to go and lose herself just as he was in the midst of the most successful patrol he had ever made. It was not the intention or desire of Hooper to go chasing after foolish females who could not keep out of trouble. He had started in what was really an exploring expedition of the upper Pelican and its branches, partly because the powers of Port Moresby thought that these strangers had been too long left to their own devices in dangerous country, partly because he was burning to earn distinction by discovering something somewhere and naming it after himself. The cacophony of a possible "Hopper" river did not deter him; the crime of misnaming some noble mountain peak as badly as Mount Scratchley years ago had been misnamed troubled him not at all. He wanted to write "Hooper" in large letters across the map. . . .

It was bad enough that the newcomers—mere tourists from Australia—should have actually discovered a great lake and a number of interesting tribes. It was almost worse, however, that they should, as he put it, have "roped him in" to spend days, weeks perhaps, hunting for this lost lady, using up irreplaceable stores, getting his police into unnecessary trouble, and, for all one knew, drawing down the dreaded "please explains" from Olympus that blasted any official known to be too free with gunpowder. It was hard to hold your savage police, once they got a taste of blood, and from all Hooper heard that taste was likely to be provided before very long. Smith, the queer beggar in the dress reform clothes—what there was of him—and Royden, the "swell" who was apparently out looking for sensations, both breathed the most bloodthirsty threats against the natives that Hooper had ever heard.

"It's no use your talking like that," he warned them on the morning after the yacht's departure. They had all been so busy keeping the boat from getting aground during the night and were so tired and nervy now that he had hardly had a chance of getting at the actual condition of affairs. But he did not see that any good was likely to arise from the state these two were evidently in.

"You can't go about 'wiping out every man, woman, and child' in villages," he warned Royden. "It simply isn't done. And, as for you, Mr. —Smith, aren't you?"

No one answered him, which he thought odd. He went on, however: "As for you, sir, when you say that you will treat them as they treat each other, and carry their heads back on the bowsprit, why, you're simply talking nonsense that you'll be sorry for yourself when you come to think about it. I assure you, sir, the government does not allow us to take anybody's head for any purpose; I can not imagine any argument that would make them party to such a transaction.

"You should know that," he sharply told Smith, for whom he had conceived an intense dislike. "Mr. Royden tells me you've been living up the river since God knows when. Extremely irregular if I may say so. Not the sort of thing we want at all. Likely to make trouble any time and necessitate punitive expeditions which throw a country back ten years. I understand," he went on, as the Lahara slowly glided through a maze of little, useless islets, perilously girdled with silver waterweed—"I understand that, as it is, the natives made an attack on Mr. Royden and this lady some time ago. If that's the case the greatest care should have been exercised to avoid any repetition. It really is a pity, if I may say so, that you didn't leave the district. You can't have had any very strong motive for remaining here after you'd—you'd—," he gulped, as if swallowing something better—"discovered this lake country."

"We had every motive," replied Hugh smoothly. "I came up here looking for proofs that would satisfy a law court of the death of my uncle, who was lost here years ago before the government began taking any special interest in the place."

"May I ask, did you find them?"

"That's what we wanted to talk to you about. I have found them, but an affidavit from Mr. Smith will be necessary. At another time I'd have gone into the matter, but now——"

"We can't attend to anything else now but getting hold of Mrs. Lyle," declared the tall man in the tunic, who was still at the wheel ably steering Royden's vessel through shallows and channels that, as Royden afterwards said, "Would have tried the nerve of a Torres Straits pilot."

"Quite, quite—but I can't help thinking there was something in that last bundle of Heralds they sent me up from Sydney—now what was it?"

"Something about my family?" asked Royden, turning his head and fixing his big slow eyes upon the rakish looking fellow in khaki.

"I—hard to remember; this fever plays the deuce with one's memory. Royden, Royden. Now what was it?"

He bit his nails impatiently; stared over the brazen shield of the lake as if he expected to find a solution of the puzzle there.

"Had it anything to do with—Wilsdon?" asked Hugh.

"Why, now you mention it, it had.

My Lady Far Away

Death of Lord Wilsdon. But where did the Royden come in?"

"I can tell you that. He was my grandfather." Hugh's face was still, but the big, slow eyes had opened a trifle wider; one could see a line of white coming and going above and below the pupils. His nostrils had widened, too; breath was coming quicker through them.

Why!—why—he had only to get this affidavit, collect his evidence, find Martha—for she must and should be found—and take his way to England in order to make claim to the Wilsdon title, the Wilsdon millions, the Wilsdon safe, splendid position and authority. At that moment he was almost certainly a baron. "My God," he thought, "and Martha must go and lose herself at such a moment!" Then he was angry with himself for being such a brute as to criticize her when she might be in deadly peril, even dead. . . .

No—she wasn't dead. He was sure of that, he did not know how. "I think she could take care of herself," was the idea that welled up into his mind from depths subconscious. "She is only careless when there's some one about to shoulder difficulties for her." . . . Again he checked himself; felt shocked. "How can I?" he thought. It was an axiom with him that he worshiped Martha.

Hopper went on talking, mingling news, surmises, comments, in his usual way. "Yes, Wilsdon it was," he said. "Grandfather of yours? Quite. I suppose he hasn't left you anything? I could do with the loss of a grandfather or so myself, if they cut up well. As to Mrs. Lyle, now. My advice is to make for the nearest village——"

"No," said Smith, from the wheel.

"What? No? Why not? There's one almost alongside your place."

"We must look farther afield. That's not the place."

"How do you know?" asked Hopper and Royden together.

"Because certain parts of the lake are portioned out to certain tribes, and the island where she disappeared belongs to a people that live miles away, on the far side of the lake. None of my village folk would have dared to hang about it. If any one has carried her off, it will be a native from some distance away."

"Quite," observed Hopper, looking wise.

"Time is of the greatest importance. We needn't emphasize that." A movement of assent—an uneasy movement—testified to Royden's agreement. "Are you prepared to take me as a guide?" He turned the wheel, slowly, carefully, in his great hands.

"I am, for one," answered Hugh promptly. He had been near punching the head of Smith last night; he still desired to punch it, given time, opportunity, and proper place. But none of these conditions were attainable now; and it was undoubted that Smith knew the district, the people, as no one else did or could.

"I shall be very glad to accept your advice," guardedly allowed the resident magistrate.

"Then I—advise"—but there was more than advice in the tone—"that we separate as soon as possible into two parties. Double the chance of finding."

"What about your invaluable wireless?" asked Hugh, not without some covert mockery. He had never been quite able to believe that the rescue on the first day was not due to some—as yet unexplained—coincidence.

Slow red crept into Smith's sallow face. "I have lost it," he answered as one might say he had lost a speaking tube or a whistle. Then, suddenly blazing—"I lost it when you people came to my island."

"O, not immediately," mocked Hugh politely, "or you couldn't have used it for us."

"I lost it when—when—you—came to my house."

"I—and Mrs. Lyle?"

"Yes." Then, explosively. "Damn you both!" Then, suddenly cooling down, as the yacht's head fell off from a dangerous narrow—"That's the last of the tricky stuff. Get your whaleboat alongside, Mr. Hopper, and take your police off towards the right, where you see those green and blue low islands. You can take Royden with you, and his interpreter. I'll get the yacht through somehow to the tall island on the left—it's straight going if you know, but the devil if you don't, and do my own interpreting. The first of us who gets news of her will fire three rifle shots as a warning, then fire three rifle shots again and make for my house. Understand?"

Smith won his way. The magistrate, with all his official dignity; Hugh Royden, conscious of being younger, stronger, richer, more important in every way, than this old hermit with the bare legs and the bow and arrows, were both constrained to obedience. It was an incontrovertible fact that, in this emergency, Smith knew, and could do more than either of the others. The whaleboat, towing behind, was pulled alongside. The magistrate, in his khaki and his official helmet, Royden, not so neat as usual, in the soiled white clothes he had worn for twenty-four strenuous hours, dropped into the boat. Stores and ammunition were rapidly reckoned. The police, mop-headed fellows with bandoliers worn across their serge tunics, bent each to his oar and made the forty-foot whaleboat fly. Within ten minutes the Lahara, moving off at full speed, had become, to those in the whaleboat, a mere white speck against the distant green. Right and left they went, and the wake of the whaleboat and the track of the power boat smoothed themselves out from the surface of the water, and the wild ducks and egrets came back again, flying and stalking about the tiny islets, undisturbed; and the lake was still once more.

When Martha Lyle and the native woman left in the canoe, it had been all but dark. New Guinea is close to the equator; between the second and eleventh parallels it lies so that, all the year round, dusk comes quickly. It had been a pleasure to Martha, greedy for all new sensations, to see this gradual shortening of the twilights, as she traveled north from Cairns; to watch the hurry with which the sun went down each night, and see that speed accelerating, day and day.

"Take me right to the line when we're married, and let's sit upon it," she had said to Hugh. "One doesn't get the real idea of it in steamers, they go so fast. I want to make friends with the equator—I want to go to the poles!"

"Did you ever," asked Royden sarcastically, "hear of the man who wanted to be the bride when he went to a wedding, and was jealous of the corpse at funerals?"

"No, and I shouldn't have liked him if I had. But I should have liked Marie Bashkirtseff, who told her aunts that 'she wished to be God—she wished to be the devil.' That's going the whole way."

Hugh had laughed, and kissed her; he generally did that when he disagreed with her so completely that there was nothing left to say. After all, a woman with lips like Martie's could talk as she liked and no one need mind; talking was not what that mouth was meant for. . . .

Now for some word chains. Remember that you try to change one word to another by changing one letter at a time, and always forming a recognized word in so doing.

Change SOME to MANY in four moves.

Change SNOW to SLED in three moves.

—4—

In the following sentence the two words have similar pronunciations but different meanings:

"After a short ——, the butcher told him the —— of the meat."

STILL WET.

Mistress: Have you given the goldfish fresh water?

Maid: No ma'am, they ain't finished the water I gave them yesterday yet.

A DESERTED HOUSE---HIDDEN TREASURE---MY STERY!

The Ghost at Faversham's

By W. BOYCE MORGAN

Author of "The Abandoned Mine," "Raging Waters", "The Friend of Prince Philippe", The "Conquerors Club" Stories, Etc.

" 'It's worse than that!" he burst out. 'I don't mind for myself, but it's awful for Dot' "

Clay Martin looked at the clock, noticed that it was already past ten, cancelled the stamps on one more Christmas parcel, and rose to his feet.

"Guess I'll be going home, Mr. Hale," he said to the man with a green eyeshade who sat a desk behind the stamp window. "If I'm going to be down at 7 in the morning I want to get some sleep."

"Go ahead, Clay," Mr. Hale replied. "You've done plenty for one day."

Clay walked over to the clock and stamped his time card. He called a cheery goodnight to the assistant postmaster, and was about to leave when that official called him back.

"You're going up to the academy, aren't you?" he asked.

"I certainly am," said Clay. "And I'm going to tumble into my little be as fast as I can."

"Well, a special delivery letter came for Lloyd Faversham on that last train. Will you take it up to him? He won't get it until the middle of the morning if you don't, I'm afraid."

"Sure," replied Clay. He pocketed the letter with its red and blue stamps, and left the postoffice.

A person acquainted with Grayson academy would have been surprised to learn that one of its students was working in the village postoffice, but had he known Clay Martin the thing would have been easily explained. Most of the boys who attended Grayson were from families that were at least comfortably well-to-do, and Clay was no exception. At least, he had been no exception up until a few months ago. Then his father's business had suddenly failed. Mr. Martin had insisted that he at least finish out the year in school and Clay had decided that, rather than spend the money for the long trip home over the Christmas holidays, he would help out a little by getting a job and working those three weeks. The headmaster of the school had consented to his staying in his room, where he made himself comfortable for the few hours he was in it each day.

Clay hadn't liked the idea of missing his holidays at home, but since the family was pressed for money, he felt it was as little as he could do to help them out. And so he had been working twelve or thirteen hours every day in the village postoffice, helping with the heavy Christmas mail, and living a pretty solitary life.

A few days before he had been surprised to discover that Lloyd Faversham had not gone home for the holidays, either. Clay didn't know Lloyd very well; in fact, few boys at Grayson did. Lloyd was a class below him, for one thing, but he was also one of those quiet, shy boys who don't make friend readily. Everybody liked him, but nobody was very intimate with him.

Thus Clay knew he was staying at Grayson over Christmas, but he did not know why. He had been working so steadily that he had seen little of the other boy, and when he had, they had talked of general matters.

As Clay approached the hall he saw a light in an upper window that he knew to be Lloyd's. Whistling blithely, he climbed the stairs as jauntily as his tired legs would permit, and rapped on the other boy's door.

"Come in," said Lloyd, a note of surprise in his voice.

"Merry Christmas," greeted Clay as he pushed open the door. "Here's a special for you. I was coming up from the P. O. so I brought it up."

"Oh, thanks," said Lloyd gratefully, picking up the letter. "You've been working late, haven't you?"

"I sure have," groaned Clay. "Uncle Sam needs all his little nephews to handle this Christmas mail." He turned and was about to leave the room when Lloyd looked at him with a strange expression on his face.

"Sit down a few minutes, won't you?" he invited.

A laughing refusal of the request was on Clay's very tongue-tip when something in the look of the other boy's eyes restrained him from speaking. He gazed at him wonderingly for a moment, then sank into a chair.

"Fine!" he said. "I'm pretty tired, but we two hermits ought to stick together."

"Will you pardon me while I read this letter?" said Lloyd. Clay nodded, and the other boy ripped it open. Clay, his interest aroused, saw Lloyd's face pale as his eyes scanned the lines. Then he sank into a chair.

"I hope there's nothing wrong," said Clay, soberly. The other boy sat with bowed head for a moment, then turned toward him with a gleam in his eye. He held out the letter.

"Read that," he commanded.

Clay took the letter and read as follows:

"Dear Lloyd:

Conditions are as bad as I intimated when I wrote to you.

THANKS FROM JAPAN

Do you remember when the boys and girls of America sent dolls to the little people of Japan several months ago? Well, these little brothers and sisters from across the sea have said, "Thank you," very prettily. Would you like to know how they did it?

The children in the primary grades in the school of Tokyo are busy as can be, collecting seeds of the Japanese gourd, sun flower, and morning glory vines. They wish to save these seeds themselves and make them up into packages. When they get enough, they are going to send them to the children of America in acknowledgement of the "friendship dolls" sent to them some time ago.

The Japanese children say they are sending with the seeds a message of hope, and when the flowers bloom they want the blossoms to remind the American children of the thanks of the boys and girls of Japan and of the friendship that exists for America on the other side of the Pacific.

AROUND the WORLD

THE ROMAN COLOSSEUM.

You have undoubtedly seen a stadium, either at your local high school or at some college, and you know it contains a field for football, baseball, track and other outdoor sports, together with a circle of sloping seats surrounding the field.

The stadium and a somewhat similar structure, the amphitheater, had their origin many hundred years ago; and many of these were built in Europe years before white men ever came to America. Ancient Greece and Rome built many of them. The Greeks used the stadium for the athletic events held in various parts of the country every year; but the Romans, in their amphitheaters, had shows of a

Fights between tigers, lions, leopards and elephants; battles to the death between men and wild beasts; public executions of criminals and the killings of Christians by savage animals—these constituted the exhibitions that drew hundreds of thousands of spectators to the open-air theaters of ancient Rome.

One of the largest of these was the Colosseum, shown in the picture above. It is still standing in the Eternal City, though most of it is in ruins. The first performance in this huge structure took place during the reign of the Emperor Titus in the year 80 A. D., and the inauguration of the Colosseum was celebrated with a show which lasted one hundred days. During these exciting days hundreds of men and thousands of wild animals were killed in the arena to give entertainment to the surging mobs who crowded the Imperial City for the holidays. —The Globe Trotter.

At present it appears that there will be nothing left from your grandfather's estate except the house in Kentville, and that is unsalable. Advise that you and Dorothy leave school at once. Am writing to her to that effect.

Yours respectfully,
James Fabian."

As Clay raised his eyes from the page, Lloyd jumped to his feet.

"I don't want to make you listen to my troubles, Clay," he burst out in a shaken voice, "but I've got to get some of this off my mind!"

"Go ahead, Lloyd," said Clay. "If there's anything I can do I'll be mighty glad to."

Lloyd took a few nervous steps, then threw himself into a chair. "I'll tell you about it," he began rapidly. "I've never told the fellows much about myself. You see, I have a twin sister, Dorothy, and she's my only relative except some distant cousins. My mother and dad were killed in an auto accident five years ago."

Clay said nothing, but his face showed the sympathy he felt.

"Well," continued Lloyd, "after that Dot and I went to live with my old grandfather up at Kentville. He was supposed to be quite rich, and he'd always been wonderful to us. But he was very old, and he got so feeble about two years ago that they had to take him to a sanitarium. So Dot went to Miss Peyton's school and I came up here."

"A few months ago grandfather died. Naturally we expected there would be plenty of money, and we knew he was leaving it to us. But now Fabian has been telling me that there is hardly anything, and I don't know what Dot and I are going to do."

"Who is this Fabian?" inquired Clay.

"He was my grandfather's secretary, and the will made him executor and our guardian." Lloyd jumped to his feet excitedly. "I don't know why grandfather did that! I never did like Fabian!"

"It's tough luck," said Clay warmly.

Lloyd stopped and grasped a chair with clenched hand. "It's worse than that!" he burst out. "I don't mind for myself, but it's awful for Dot." Suddenly Clay saw that gleam in his eyes again.

AS SCIENCE SEES IT

WHY DO YOU SEE STARS ONLY AT NIGHT?

Where do the stars go in the daytime?

Perhaps you have often wondered how to answer this question. The answer is: They go nowhere, but remain in their places just as you see them in the evening. They are invisible to you throughout the day because the brilliant light of the sun outshines them, and hides their light, very much as the beams of a powerful searchlight will hide the light from a feeble candle.

The light from even the brightest of stars is very dim compared to that of the glaring sun; and such a faint light is as totally obliterated by sunlight as is the noise of a falling pin by a loud crash of thunder.

You can test this by an experiment. Place a small lighted candle somewhat to the rear and side of your table lamp. You will see its light quite easily, of course, as long as the electric light is not burning. Now turn on the light of the table lamp and you will note that the beams from the small candle are invisible.

Something to Do

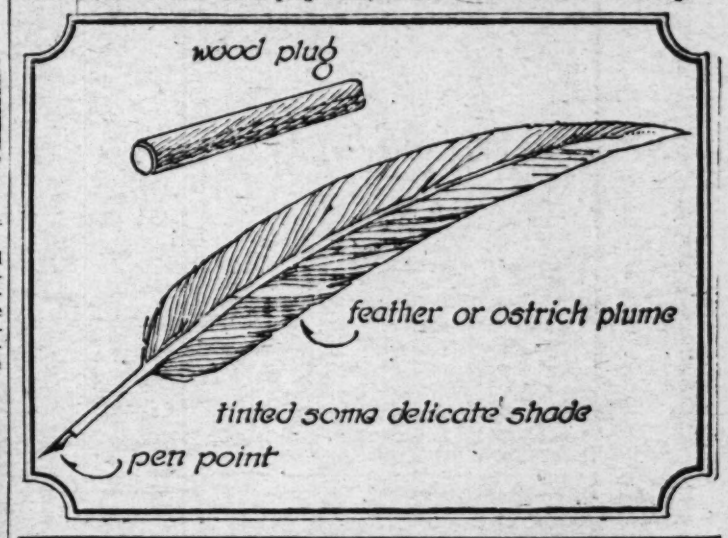
DALE R. VAN HORN

A brightly colored feather or plume pen is a worthwhile ornament and a practical addition to your writing desk or study table, and it is a good suggestion for a holiday gift. If you can find an old plume from some ancient hat, use it in making the pen. A large turkey or chicken feather, tinted some pleasant color, will do almost as well, since the end of the quill is itself not used but a metal pen point is fitted in place. If you use a chicken feather, select a white one so that it will tint well with dye.

Trim the feather and then clean it with a moist chamois skin or cloth. Allow it to dry, after scrubbing the quill, and then dip in dye. Pale pink, red, pale blue or green are all good tints, and are especially beautiful on rich plumes. Dry the feather or pen, and then fit a wooden plug, one inch long, in the end of the quill. Clip the base of the quill off squarely and clean it out. Whittle out a plug from soft pine, and slip it into the base of the quill, fastening a good quality metal pen point in place between the plug and wall of the quill, just as in a penholder.

Now dress down the other end to resemble a pen point, using a sharp knife. Make a split up to a small pin hole drilled through the wall, to form the pen nibs. The cork is provided with a shallow groove along one side and then pushed firmly up into the opening.

It will be well to coat the inside of the stem with wax or varnish to prevent the ink from possibly working to the outside. To use the pen, pour some ink in the pill bottle and press this firmly into the wax-covered end. This makes a tight fit and the ink will not spill. Such a pen is ideal for practice drawing or writing, and with the coarse nibs, will effectively imitate brush work for drawing.



Here Is a True Story of a Dog

Sailor, a Scotch collie, wanted to be a watch dog, but when he was taken away from his home on a dairy farm in Maine, where his mother and all the other members of his family held fine records for tending the large herds of cattle, to a little island off the Atlantic coast, he found that there was nothing there for him to watch but the waves.

Master Kept Lighthouse.

His new master, Thomas Orcutt, was leading a lonely existence as keeper of the lighthouse on Wood Island when Sailor came to keep him company. Now, there wasn't room enough on the island to keep cows; there was only the lighthouse and a large bell that Mr. Orcutt rang by pulling a rope, to signal ships that passed during the day.

Sailor's Chance Comes.

As Sailor sat on the rocks [illegible]ing, he saw a large boat ploughing through the waves toward the island. He pricked up his ears and listened for his master to ring the bell. The signal did not come. His master was nowhere in sight. Sailor leaped up the rocks to the beacon bell, grasped the rope, and tugged with all his might. The signal boomed forth and the passing boat answered.

Sailor had to perform his self-appointed duty several times to convince Mr. Orcutt that he was a first-class observer, but after that Sailor was happy, for if he could not be a watch dog, he proved himself to be a real "dog watch."

HE'S NOT IN ENGLAND—Or otherwise he might be taken, at least in size, for the famous "Hound of the Baskervilles." This is "Sikorsky of Clayton," owned by Mrs. Julian Astin, of Hapeville, and he's being right companionable with Miss Doris Camp, of 817 Ponce de Leon avenue. (Francis E. Price)

KINGS AND THE PRINCE—Three kings of the jungle fell before the gun of Prince William of Sweden, shown on the right, who will lecture at the auditorium here on December 6, recounting some of his numerous experiences hunting wild game. His lecture will be accompanied by motion pictures.

TWO ATLANTA MASTERPIECES—Katharine Kay, talented Atlanta beauty, who was recently offered an engagement with Ziegfeld's Follies, shown playing a wonderful instrument recently completed by Mays Badgett, Atlanta violin maker. The fiddle is made of Italian wood 100 years old and is valued at $1,000. (Francis E. Price.)

Where "The River of Song" Gets Its Start

Out of the Okefinokee swamp—mighty inland reservoir in southern Georgia—flows the Suwanee river, famed in song, to the Gulf of Mexico, and the St. Mary's to the Atlantic. Along the 40-mile wide banks of the great sheet of water that is the Okefinokee stretch vast forests of cypress, their lofty tops shadowing a tangle of undergrowth and water plants. Here is one of the few virgin strongholds of nature surviving the axe and plow, and here are havened teeming wild game and birds. Charles J. Haden, prominent Atlantan and extensive forest land owner, with his associates plans to set aside 50,000 acres along the Georgia-Florida border as a timber and hunting preserve, and the story of this great tract is herewith told in pictures made by Kenneth Rogers, Constitution staff photographer, on a recent trip to the Okefinokee.

Lose Fat
In the Right Way

For 20 years, slender women have been telling others the easy, pleasant way to reduce. It is the right way, based on a modern discovery made by able scientific men. It has proved so efficient that for two decades it has held the top place in this field. Now you can see the results wherever you look. Slender figures are the usual, fat is the exception.

That right way is embodied in Marmola prescription tablets. It is a substance employed in the body to regulate nutrition. Its purpose is to turn food into fuel and energy, rather than into fat.

There are no secrets about it. The formula appears in every box, also the reasons for results. Thus users know just why it acts, and they have no fear of harm. The use requires no abnormal exercise or diet, though moderation helps. People simply take four tablets daily until the weight comes down to normal in a natural way.

Consider what Marmola has done for so many and so long. See what it has done in your own circle, because one user tells others. Now learn what it means to you. Watch the new beauty that it brings, the new vitality and health. You owe that to yourself. Order it now —before you forget it. Don't longer suffer an abnormal figure when so many have found a corrective.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

INDIGESTION
Two Minute Relief!

Have you ever tried Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets? If not you should do so and perhaps find the relief you have long sought.

These tablets were first placed on sale in drug stores in December 1894, thirty-three years ago, and have steadily increased in popularity ever since as attested by millions of users.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain no soda nor any other harmful ingredient, but the desired alkaline effect is secured by a pleasant combination of Magnesia and Calcium Carbonate with other ingredients for prompt relief of that acidity, discomfort after eating, nausea, fullness after meals, etc.

However the proof of the pudding is in the eating and if you wish to see what these tablets will do for your particular stomach, a full size 25c package for the pocket will be sent at no cost to yourself if you will address The Stuart Co., Dept. 940, Marshall, Mich.

Also on Sale at Drug Stores Everywhere at 25c—60c and family size $1.20

Charming EYES instantly!

Touch your lashes with Maybelline. No matter how scant they may be, they will instantly appear much longer, delightfully luxuriant and dark. The lovely, rich fringe which Maybelline makes of your lashes will impart a striking new note of charm to your whole appearance, for it will transform your eyes into deep, shadowy pools, expressive and noticeably beautiful. Used regularly by millions of women in all parts of the world. Insist upon genuine Maybelline because it is easier to apply, and is harmless.

THE PERFECT COMPLIMENT
To Your Hostess . . .
HOLLINGSWORTH'S
MY HOBBY BOX

WHERE the fine traditions of the Old South are part of every day's gracious living, where hospitality is a high art and guests are made most perfectly at home—Hollingsworth's My Hobby Box "belongs." For it appeals to those who love fine things, who appreciate the best money can buy.

When you are anxious to show your appreciation for a delightful evening of bridge . . . when you seek a graceful, fitting compliment to your hostess . . . remember Hollingsworth's.

The quality of the candy is superlative. . . . Try a nut caramel for instance. Only the finest creamery butter is used in Hollingsworth's caramel. Almonds, pecans, cocoanut, are used in these plain or chocolate dipped caramels . . . Brazil nuts are used in the bonbons. These nuts are dipped in a fresh fruit fondant and crystallized; so they do not become hard or dry.

There are several Hollingsworth assortments. My Hobby Box—which will surprise you because of its amount of fruit and nut centers—is a selection from twelve of these. In one, two, three and five pound packages, $1.50 the pound. Virgil Hollingsworth, Augusta, Ga.

(Underwood)

Beauty of texture may be found in many marbles, but the ability to keep that beauty undimmed, unstained, is peculiar to

AN' THEN, ALL OF A SUDDEN, ONE DAY THE NICE LADY WAS ALL WELL AGAIN AN' COULD GO HOME— AN' THAT'S JUST LIKE WITH YOUR MAMA, SEE? SOME DAY, WHEN WE LEAST EXPECT HER, SHE'LL WALK RIGHT IN TH' DOOR ALL WELL AGAIN, JUST LIKE IN THAT STORY—

CAREFUL, YOUNG LADY— WATCH YOUR STEP—

WELL, JIM— HERE'S WHERE WE GET OFF—

I'LL BET YOUR MAMA'S GOING TO BE TICKLED TO SEE YOU, JIM— AND S'PRISED, TOO— SHE'D NEVER S'PECT WE'D FIND OUR WAY CLEAR 'CROSS TOWN TO TH' HOSPITAL WHERE SHE IS— I HOPE SHE'S GETTIN' ALONG ALL RIGHT—

TWENTY-FIVE CENTS IS ALL TH' MONEY I CAN SPEND BUT I WANT ALL TH' NICE FLOWERS I CAN GET— THEY'RE FOR A SICK WOMAN IN TH' HOSPITAL— SEE?

AH, FOR ZE SWEET LEETLE GIRL I GIVE ZE BEST BUNCH I HAVE—

HERE WE ARE— I WONDER WHICH IS HER ROOM— MAYBE SHE'S LOOKIN' OUT TH' WINDOW NOW— NOPE— I DON'T SEE HER— BUT THERE'S LOTS AN' LOTS O' WINDOWS—

LET'S HURRY UP AN' GET INSIDE— IF WE CAN GET IN WITHOUT HER SEEIN' US WE'LL S'PRISE HER LOTS MORE— SH-H-H-- NOW WE'VE GOT TO BE REAL QUIET WHILE WE'RE IN HERE—

WE'VE COME TO SEE MRS. PEWTER— THEY BROUGHT HER HERE AFTER SHE WAS HIT BY THAT AUTOMOBILE, YUH KNOW—

MRS. PEWTER? HM-M-M- I SEEM TO REMEMBER THE NAME BUT I DON'T THINK SHE'S HERE ANY MORE— I'LL ASK ONE OF THE DOCTORS—

INFORMATION

NO— MRS. PEWTER WAS ONLY HERE A SHORT TIME— SHE'S OUT AT A HOSPITAL IN THE COUNTRY NOW—

OH— WHAT HOSPITAL IS IT, DOC, AN' HOW DO YUH GET THERE?

GEE— IT'S A HOSPITAL WHERE TH' COUNTY SENDS FOLKS THAT ARE TOO POOR TO PAY— HE SAYS IT'S A FINE HOSPITAL, BUT THERE'S NO STREET CARS OUT WHERE IT IS— GOTTA TAKE A TRAIN AN' WE HAVEN'T MONEY 'NOUGH FOR THAT— TOO LATE NOW TO GO TO-DAY, ANYWAY—

AW, WHAT'S TH' USE O' CARRYIN' THOSE THINGS 'ROUND ANY MORE? THEY WEREN'T VERY GOOD FLOWERS, ANYWAY, BUT THEY WERE TH' BEST I COULD GET AN' I'LL BET SHE'D HAVE LIKED 'EM—

IT'S PRETTY HARD TO DO ANYTHING REALLY NICE FOR FOLKS WHEN YER POOR, BUT IT DOESN'T TAKE NEARLY SO MUCH TO MAKE POOR FOLKS HAPPY—

IT'D HAVE MADE HER HAPPY JUST TO KNOW WE TRIED TO COME AN' VISIT HER— AN' SEEIN' HER WOULD HAVE MADE US FEEL GOOD, TOO— BUT NOW WE'VE GOT TO GET BACK HOME AN' WE'VE HAD THIS WHOLE TRIP FOR NOTHIN'— I DON'T MIND THAT SO MUCH, THOUGH.

DOG-GONE IT— IT SEEMS LIKE WHEN YER UP AGAINST IT EVERYTHING GOES WRONG— BUT I'M NOT GOIN' TO BE YELLOW AN' GIVE UP— I'VE GOT JIM, HERE, AN' TH' TWINS AN' HELEN TO LOOK OUT FOR NOW— I'M GOIN' TO RAISE THEM RIGHT—

THE LAUNDRY MAN COMES FOR THE WASH THIS MORNING AND I MUST HAVE IT READY FOR HIM

OH YES - SPEAKING OF WASH REMINDS ME THAT YOU MUST TAKE A BATH, HERBY

NOW, WHERE ON EARTH DID HE GO TO?

WELL, HE WON'T GET AWAY FROM ME

MAYBE HE'S HIDING IN HIS ROOM

HE'S NOT HERE AND I DON'T HEAR HIM ON THE STAIRS!

WELL, I'LL FIND HIM AFTER - I'VE GOT TO HAVE THE WASH READY FOR THE LAUNDRY MAN FIRST

BUT I CERTAINLY WOULD LIKE TO KNOW WHERE THAT LITTLE IMP IS HIDING

HELLO? THE LAUNDRY? AREN'T YOU COMING FOR MY WASH

SORRY, LADY, I CAN'T COME TODAY

GOODNESS - THEY NEVER DO ANYTHING THEY PROMISE

NOW I MUST DO IT MYSELF, BUT I'D LIKE TO WASH LITTLE HERBY FIRST IF I COULD FIND HIM

WILL YOU PAINT THIS LEAF FOR ME, MR. FROST?

THE HAND OF JACK FROST HAS BEEN BUSY, SKEEZIX. HIS IDEA OF A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE IS THE SAME AS MINE.

THAT TREE IS THE LINDEN OR BASSWOOD. IT LENDS A BRIGHT TOUCH OF COLOR TO THE LANDSCAPE.

THAT IS THE HAWTHORNE

CAN YOU REACH ME SOME BERRIES, UNCA WALT?

THE WILD CHERRY WITH ITS BRILLIANT LEAVES SPARKLES IN THE WOODS.

I THINK IT'S PRETTY TOO.

THE OAK IS IN QUIETER COLOR BUT VERY RICH.

THE PINE KEEPS IT'S GREEN ALL THROUGH THE YEAR.

TOO MUCH WORK FOR JACK FROST.

WELL, JACK LETS HIMSELF GO WHEN HE SEES A GRAPE VINE.

THE WILD PLUM ADDS IT'S TINTS TO THE PICTURE.

BUT I DON'T SEE ANY PLUMS.

THIS ONE SHOWS US WHAT THEY CALL A RIOT OF COLOR- THE MAPLE

IT LOOKS LIKE FIRE.

JACK FROST DIDN'T WORK SO HARD ON THE ELM DID HE?

MAYBE HE GOT TIRED WHEN HE GOT TO IT.

BUT THE SUMAC WEARS THE GAYEST OF COLORS.

THE HICKORY NUT TREE RUNS TO BRIGHT YELLOWS AND BROWNS.

BUT THAT ISN'T WHY THE SQUIRRELS LIKE THAT TREE, UNCA WALT.
